I found that my guest was none other than Emil LeFevre, son of the great inventor of submarines and explosives. When he had disrobed and hung his wet clothes to dry in front of the radiators, swathing himself in a rug meanwhile, he gave me a brief account of his journey. The world was ringing with the news of the great battle on the Catalunian Plain; how the French had been all but whipped when their fleet of airships, belated by some mismanagement, came upon the scene with the new explosive, glycolite, and sent the Germans back upon their camp, killing and maiming thousands. There had been no movement on land since that. All eyes were now turned toward the sea, where the fleets were watching for an opening. LeFevre had been so confident of his ability to manage his aeroplane that he had set out in spite of the heavy wind that kept back all the less venturesome aeronauts. He was determined to witness the battle. Just before he saw me he had attempted to turn and found the steering gears jammed. Had I not rescued him he would have probably found a watery grave.

It was now dark. The air was damp and cold, so I drew the roof over part of my car. LeFevre's light clothing was dry enough to put on, and we sat down to eat supper, followed by a cigar. I learned then many things about the impending battle, LeFevre being familiar with the explosives and apparatus in use on both sides.

The Germans were depending largely upon their late invention, the Calnite aerial bomb. This projectile was to be fired by compressed air from a mortar-like gun, and being fitted with a gyroscope would maintain its elevation for a distance of eight miles. The bomb was two feet in diameter and about three feet long, and moved so slowly as to be visible during its whole course. It contained a charge of two hundred pounds of Calnite, a new explosive whose force operated always downward. The bomb contained also a magnet and circuit-breaker so tuned as to be responsive to electrical vibrations set up in a powerful electrical instrument on the discharging ship. By the use of a unique range finding apparatus the bomb was kept in sight during its whole flight, and upon reaching the desired point it was exploded by the mere pressure of a button on the ship from which it had been fired. Tests with this bomb had shown wonderful accuracy and most deadly effects.

Another offensive device was an aerial illuminator—a small, balloon-like affair, arranged to float at a considerable elevation, and carrying a powerful chemical light, backed by strong reflectors. A shoal of these illuminators would be sent toward the enemy's fleet, lighting up the sea and the vessels and making easy targets for the German guns.

Against these devices the French had prepared an aerial bomb to discharge a heavy and deadly gas, and to sprinkle acids or explosives upon the ships of the enemy. They were also provided with aluminum armor, so thick and tough that an ordinary projectile would merely become imbedded therein and held fast without being able to pass through. Around their ships and under water they hung large electro-magnets, exerting, by peculiar wiring, a repelling influence on approaching torpedoes at a distance of a hundred yards, invariably turning them aside. Their mainstay, however, was a new centrifugal submarine torpedo-boat, which needed not to come to the surface, remaining down for days at a time, yet observing operations on the surface, and doing its work with deadly accuracy. LeFevre could not give me the details of this strange machine. Its terrible effectiveness, however, was apparent the next day.

I had no apprehension whatever as to the stability of L'Aimee, and we lay down and went to sleep that night without the least apprehension. Stanch and true was she, even as my own sweet betrothed. It was still dark, when I was awakened with a start by the sound of heavy detonations below us. I leaped to my feet and looked over the side of the car. LeFevre joined me the next moment.

The Germans had evidently planned a night attack by the use of their illuminators. Below us the sea was alight in great spots, and dimly we could make out the vessels over which shone the strong, blue-white lights. Far off in the darkness we could see the occasional flash of a gun. The Germans were sending home great shells loaded with explosives. Their aerial bombs could not be followed at night. The French were replying, but their fire was more or less blind. The roar of the guns came up to us plainly. It shook the heavens. Suddenly there was a flash that lit up the whole sky, and a terrific explosion sounded from below. A German shell had found its mark. One of the French battleships had gone to her long home.

During the rest of the night there was no intermission in the heavy firing. Fearful explosions sounded now and then, and we could but guess the destruction that was being wrought. I had no wish to see either side win at the expense of the other.

At dawn we were able to note the situation clearly. Six or eight miles away to the northeast lay the German fleet. Almost beneath us the French were gathered in loose order. Both were plying their great guns. On both sides burning ships were drifting away, others were careening, half-filled with water. And now, with the coming of daylight, the combatants resorted to their deadliest appliances. As we watched one of the French battleships there was a dull explosion. The great hull opened, split in twain like a canteloupe, and went skiddering to the bottom. We could see it deep in the clear water, its hundreds of seaman swarming around like so many ants in a bowl.

It was remarkable to note the submarines moving here and there under water. From our height we could see clear to the bottom, and every boat was visible by a bright streak as it swept through the water. Suddenly LeFevre clutched my arm and pointed. "The Centrifugal," he said, in a whisper. I watched it on its way, advancing in a bright whirl of bubbles. It was making its way toward the German fleet, and thither we followed.

But whatever work awaited this terror must be done quickly. The Germans were wonderfully accurate with their Calnite aerial bombs. Ship after ship quivered, split open and sank like a broken teacup. The force of the calnite was so great that it operated for a distance of a hundred yards on every side, more than once sinking several of the smaller ships at one explosion. LeFevre groaned as, looking back, he saw one of the largest battleships collapse, fairly smashed into fragments. He shook his fist at the Centrifugal. "On, on!" he shouted. "Do thy work, laggard!"

The Centrifugal moved swiftly. At intervals it came up with a submarine, paused a moment to ascertain whether German or French, and acted accordingly. If French, it passed on; if German it darted at the victim, touched it, and as quickly darted away. What terrible power it exerted I could not understand, but at that fatal touch the enemy sank. There seemed to be no escape, no single chance. Presently this swift and silent messenger of death was in the thick of the German fleet. Looking back I saw that there were but two of the French ships left, both sadly disabled. The German squadron was in fine shape, but three of its battleships disabled. I sent L'Aimee lower to observe more closely. The Centrifugal heeded not the torpedo nets. It passed through obstructions as though it were spirit. We saw it under the bow of the Frederich Wilhelm, the largest battleship of the fleet. For half a minute it lay there, surrounded as ever by that whirl of sparkling bubbles. Then it darted away toward another. So interested were we in watching the uncanny movements of the strange boat that we did not observe the confusion on board the Frederich, nor on the others that were successively visited. LeFevre noticed the great ships settling low in the water, and spoke of it to me. There was something terrible about this destroyer. Inside of fifteen minutes every vessel in that fleet had been stung, as it were, by this great hornet of the sea, and every one was sinking. The seamen were throwing themselves off; boats were putting out; rafts were flung into the sea. Presently the Centrifugal finished her work and we saw her whirling away, stopping here and there to smell a submarine and to kiss it or to sting it as it happened to be friend or foe. What a sight! Twenty-four German ships sinking, sinking, going down to eternal silence. One after another they vanished. The torpedo boats came to the surface, saw what had happened, and put out for home and neutral ports. The Centrifugal, the grim destroyer, vanished. The great battle was over. And neither side could be said to have won. It was practical annihilation for both. Two magnificent fleets of modern war vessels gone, absolutely gone; a quarter of a billion dollars in battleships and thousands of brave fellows dead, only to satisfy the bickerings of diplomats—sacrifices to foolish notions of honor.

To LeFevre the operations of the Centrifugal were a triumph for France, and he was enthusiastic in his delight. But I cared little one way or the other. I was tired of it all. Life had been too strenuous for me. I wanted quiet for a while, and naturally my thoughts turned to Aimee, my sweetheart. Was she safe?

LeFevre insisted that I come with him to his home, but I refused. Turning to the east we made our way rapidly to the French coast. Here we settled to earth in the open country, and after bidding LeFevre adieu I rose again and made my way east. I had but one thought, now that the battle was over, and that thought I was putting into action. My objective was Bethel, where I knew my love awaited me.

But had I known what else awaited me at Bethel I should perchance have gone in another direction.

Maxine Elliott.

Maxine Elliott, who has taken a house in London and will leave the stage for a time to enjoy social life, is famous as an actress and also for her beauty. Miss Elliott, who, upon the stage, retains her maiden name, under which she became famous, is the wife of Nat C. Goodwin, to whom she was married in 1898. She was born in Rockland, Me., and was but 16 when she first appeared on the stage. Her serious work, however, did not begin until 1890, when she became associated with E. S. Willard. Subsequently she became a member of Daly's stock company and rapidly won distinction, which has been enhanced by her performance in her husband's company. Dramatically and socially she is a great favorite in both the United States and England.

Copper in Water Kills Germs.

In looking to the purification of the water supply, either the local farm supply or the water for a great city, remarkable results are announced from the application of a new method of destroying micro-organisms in water, which was discovered about a year ago by Drs. Moore and Kellerman, of the Bureau of Plant Industry at Washington. It consists simply in dissolving a certain quantity of copper sulphate in the water to be purified. Fortunately the dilution can be made so large that no deleterious effects are produced upon the water intended for drinking purposes. One part of copper sulphate to eight million parts of water is the proportion generally used, and it is pointed out that, in order to obtain any effect of copper from such a mixture a man would have to drink forty gallons of the water.

During the latter part of 1904 more than fifty sources of water supply in the United States were treated by this method with gratifying success. Not only are dangerous bacteria thus destroyed but the green growths that frequently choke up small ponds are also eliminated. Most important of all is the promise that by this treatment the germs of typhoid fever may be entirely removed from any source of water supply.

In the case of a lake or pond the chemical is applied by suspending bags filled with copper sulphate over the side of a boat while the boat is rowed about. In two or three days the copper is entirely precipitated from the water, but the beneficial effects of the treatment last for weeks or months.

It has been suggested that this discovery may raise the question whether, after all, our mothers were not right—although they did not understand the scientific aspects of the matter—in preferring copper kettles for preparing many kinds of food.

A Chicago gamin stole a dollar and was sent to the workhouse for a year. On the same day an embezzler who had gotten away with $2,000 was also given a year. Truly, the law is no respecter of persons.

A Chilean poet has declared for war against the United States. Prepare for the bum bardment.

PRICE, 10 CENTS EACH.

A TRIM GOWN FOR A MISS.

For a young girl's gown there is no smarter model than the one sketched here. Every feature of the dress serves a purpose and the result is a graceful and becoming whole. The yoke lends breadth to shoulders which need it, while the tucks extending a short distance below, supply a becoming fullness for the blouse. The plastron front, continued in effect by the front pleat of the skirt, suggests height and slenderness. The skirt is pleated all around to make up the deficiencies of the undeveloped figure. Rajah, linen, taffetas or cashmere might develop this design. The least experienced dressmaker can fashion the gown without difficulty, for which 6¼ yards of material, 36 inches wide are needed, in the medium size.

FOOD ADULTERATIONS—WATERFOWLS.

GUY ELLIOTT MITCHELL.

In these days of so much talk about pure foods, and with the protective legislation by Congress on the subject, the bulletin of the Bureau of Chemistry, Department of Agriculture, on "Some Forms of Food Adulterations and Simple Methods for Their Detection" is very timely.

Since the middle of the last century the subject of food adulteration has attracted a constantly increasing amount of attention. In this country, however, very little was done in this line until about 1880. In 1881 the Division of Chemistry began the study of food adulteration, and since then has given a great deal of time to the subject. Since 1898 the origin and place of manufacture of the foods studied by the Bureau have been carefully noted and special attention also given to imported foods.

A WINNING PAIR OF BROWN CHINESE GEESE.
FIRST PRIZE TOULOUSE GOOSE, Fort Wayne, Ind.; Dec., 1905.
GROUP OF BROWN CHINESE GEESE at St. Louis Exposition.

In 1883 the first practicable food-inspection law in the United States was enacted in Massachusetts. Since that time other States have enacted and enforced food laws, until at the present time twenty-five States are seriously attempting to regulate the character and quality of the foods sold in their markets. In three additional States laws relating to the purity of dairy products are enforced, and in several others a beginning has been made.

Food Regulation Abroad.

Food legislation has received much attention abroad and the more advanced foreign countries have effective food laws and enforce them rigidly. The subject of the purity of foods is more widely studied in the United States now than at any previous time. The people as a whole are better informed on the subject than ever before, and there is a constantly increasing demand for definite information. In response to a very large number of inquiries regarding the matter the bulletin of the Bureau of Chemistry has been prepared as a popular statement regarding the nature and extent of food adulteration, and includes simple tests by which the housekeeper or retail dealer may determine some of the more prevalent forms of adulteration practiced.

The demand for information on this subject is now very general, and, as is often the case when public interest is deeply aroused, there is an unfortunate tendency toward exaggeration which frequently amounts to sensationalism. Such an attitude is of course to be deplored, and unless it is checked must sooner or later react unfavorably. It is not unusual to speak of some of our typical foods as poisoned, and of the manufacturers as poisoners. Such characterizations are frequently exaggerations to the point of untruth. Deleterious substances are in many cases added to foods. At the same time the word "poison" has a very strong and distinct significance and should not be applied to any one of the substances ordinarily added to foods, except in the sense that they are harmful. The word "poisoner" signifies a person who intentionally and deliberately administers an article intended to result fatally, or at least very disastrously to health.

The Juggling of Words.

During recent years there has been a tendency to confuse the minds of many by an incorrect use of certain words frequently used in the discussion of foods. It is the policy of some manufacturers to limit the word "adulterated" to foods to which have been added substances of lower value than the foods themselves with the intention of increasing the weight or volume. This limitation is certainly not justified by the English language nor by the facts, and such a restriction of the term is entirely unwarranted. The word "adulterated" properly describes a food to which any noncondimental foreign substance, not properly constituting a portion of the food, has been added. The fact that the added substance may be at times of a greater commercial value than the food itself has no bearing on the question. Conversely, the word "pure" is properly applicable to foods that are unmixed with any foreign substance. It may be wholesome or unwholesome, but this property is not indicated by the word "pure" or "adulterated." This definition is not, of course, complete.

The claim is made by some manufacturers that the addition of a preservative to food does not properly constitute adulteration because the preservatives added are of greater commercial value than the foods themselves. Such a claim, however, seems to be nothing but a play upon words. For instance, benzoate of soda has a greater commercial value, weight for weight, than tomatoes, and the claim has been made that for that reason its addition to tomatoes actually increases the expense of the preparation of tomato catsup. As a matter of fact, however, it permits the tomato pulp to be prepared in large quantities and preserved in barrels in a much less expensive way than can be done without its use. It is evident, therefore, that even though the preservative employed is more expensive than the substance to which it is added, the addition is really made for the purpose of cheapening the product. It is not for this reason that such a substance is properly called an adulterant, however, but because it is an added foreign substance and is neither a food nor a condiment. These definitions cannot be emphasized too strongly. Adulterated foods are not necessarily unwholesome foods.

The bulletin published by the Department gives in detail the various kinds of adulterants and additions to the ordinary beverages and foods used in ordinary consumption, and also simple means of detecting the presence of the foreign matter contained in them. The pamphlet should occupy a prominent place in every household library, and can be obtained upon application to the Division of Publications, Department of Agriculture.

Feeds Fowls Automatically.

A farmer in Oregon, who owns a small poultry farm, has devised a novel method of feeding his chickens during his absence. In each yard he has erected troughs to hold food for the hens, and these are connected by wire with an alarm clock in the farmhouse. When the owner leaves home in the morning he sets the alarm clock at the hour of feeding the chickens, and by an ingenious arrangement, when the time arrives, the alarm goes off, the connecting wire releases the troughs, and the food is spread before the hungry fowls.

The area of the new state of Oklahoma will be over 70,000 square miles.

Water-Fowl in New England.

Broiler ducks are grown by the thousands in several localities of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Long Island, as well as elsewhere, the greatest number, however, coming from the first named sections. One farm alone during the year just passed marketed 37,000 broiler ducks from its plant. But New England is the home or breeding grounds of the best quality of market geese sold in this country. The most careful, the most determined and the most successful breeders and handlers of high quality market geese are scattered from Rhode Island to the end of Massachusetts.

The old-time common or gray goose has been largely displaced by the stately Embden, Toulouse, African and China species. The Embden and the Toulouse are the result of a union of the efforts of the French and the English. The African, the Hong Kong and the China geese came, perhaps, from the Asiatic countries.

Recently, at the Boston Poultry Show, was exhibited the finest lot of geese that have been shown in this country for all time. One pair of Embden (pure white geese) reached the enormous weight of 58 pounds and the Toulouse (gray market geese) almost equaled them in size. Next to these in quality is the African, so much valued for the rearing of what are known as the mongrel geese.

The white Embden, said to have originated from the visit of a swan to some of the commoner flock of a town of the same name on the Continent, have been carefully bred and selected until they are very large, handsome white geese, which seem to be valued first as a true-bred variety for the producing of feathers and market poultry. The Toulouse that came from France are fully their equal in every way, except that the feathers are gray or mixed with gray instead of pure white.

What is known as the wild or Canada goose, mated with an African, produces the mongrel goose, so highly valued in the Eastern markets from Thanksgiving through Christmas times. When the Canada gander and the African goose become properly mated they will be constant one to the other to the end of their existence, growing each year one or two broods of mongrel geese that are ready for market during Thanksgiving and Christmas times and dress to a weight at this age heavier than either of the parent pair. The quality of the meat is excellent, the price obtained ranging from $2.75 to $4 each, according to the season and the quality and finish of the individual specimens themselves.

These, with the Embden, the Toulouse and the China geese furnish the high-priced geese for the winter markets. No one of these of the better qualities is ever sold for less than 28 to 30 cents per pound, and there is a ready sale for all of them offered at these prices. In addition to these, thousands of geese are gathered from as far north as Nova Scotia, down through all the States of the Western part of the country, into New England, where large fattening yards are conducted. These yards are large plants with lots, something like the stock yards of the large cities, only smaller in size. The geese are placed in the enclosures and fed for heavyweight and fine finish to be dressed for market. As many as 10,000 geese are gathered at one or two points in Massachusetts, and fed in this way for the winter markets. It takes several weeks to properly finish them and new supplies are constantly coming in to replace those that are sold off. The profitable demand for geese of this kind extends over a period of from nine to twelve weeks, beginning just before Thanksgiving and ending in January.

No attempt has yet been made in this country for the excessive fattening of geese, such as is carried on in Germany, those so fattened with us being only prepared to a finish for roasting, nor has fattening or feeding for the excessive size of the livers ever gained any consideration here. The major per cent. of all the geese brought into the markets for general consumption are sold and the demand for them ceases by the middle of January. Following this, comes the sale of the capons and the virgin cockerels, so highly prized in New England.

The scientific part of the handling of geese is growing them to a condition where the feathers are just right to be plucked from the carcass without having the bad appearance that of necessity must be present if there is a large amount of down or short feathers showing. Geese, to be properly marketed at their best, should be plucked at the right time, then fed and cared for so as to be ready for killing just as the new growth of plumage is full and complete and ready to be stripped clean and clear from the body at killing time. This is the scientific part, next to the experience in the handling, feeding and caring for, which bring such large numbers to the finest finish and most desirable condition for selling in the market.

It is a sight one would never forget to see eight or ten thousand of these geese confined in lots or runways being fed and cared for by attendants to bring them to that perfection of market poultry not usually seen outside of New England and New York City.

T. F. McGrew.

Why Land is a Good Investment.

The statistician of the Department of Agriculture of the United States estimates that in 1931 the population of this country will be 130,000,000, and the census bureau agrees that this is a conservative estimate. To supply the requirements of this number of people will necessitate the production of 700,000,000 bushels of wheat, 1,250,000,000 bushels of oats, 345,000,000 bushels of corn, 100,000,000 tons of hay; and cotton, tobacco and fruits and vegetables in proportion. To produce this immensely increased quantity of food and kindred products will necessitate the bringing under cultivation of an additional 150,000,000 acres of land, and it is estimated that we have only 108,000,000 acres available for cultivation. Of course these estimates do not take into account the efforts of Secretary Wilson, of the Department of Agriculture, whereby every acre will eventually produce double its present crop.

Nevertheless these statistics present matters for serious reflection, and should bring it home to every thoughtful man that good agricultural land today offers the best and safest investment on earth and that there can be no better object in life than a determination on the part of every citizen to acquire at least enough of Mother Earth to ensure him a living for himself and his family through his own individual efforts.

Selling Chicks a Day Old.

The hatching of chicks in quantities and then selling them direct to poultry breeders and fanciers is a business that is developing all over the country, largely doing away with the bother of sitting hens and the detail and attention entailed by operating an incubator. The plan is simplicity itself. Experienced incubator operators put in substantial hatching plants solely for the production and immediate disposition of chicks direct to poultry people, both amateur and professional. For the most part the new method possesses some range in its application. It has been found that day-old chicks will bear shipment to a considerable distance, and that a car ride of from ten to fifteen and twenty hours is not considered extra hazardous. Prices for day-old chicks are a matter of barter between seller and buyer, something depending on the breeds and strains, but usually ranging $1.50 and up per dozen.

There are several establishments in this country which make this an exclusive business, and enjoy a hatching capacity of from 1,000 to 6,000 eggs at a time. All report a healthy demand for their living product at remunerative prices.

The Biggest Spider.

Madagascar is the home of the dog spider, the biggest of the spider species, and much larger than the tarantula. The body of the dog spider weighs nearly a pound, and each of its eight legs is about as long and thick as an ordinary lead pencil.

It is worn over the stocking, fills out the hollow places in the foot and acts as a bridging. In this way the shoe is absolutely prevented from coming in contact with the sore spot. The swelling is removed, it strengthens the shank, gives the foot a natural form and Paint! Paint!

Now is the time to give your house a new coat of paint, and we have the paint that will wear well and please you.

Our Sun Proof has proven to be what we claim for it, a thoroughly good paint. The handsome school house in Clanton is painted with it; the new two-story hotel belonging to Mr. W. M. Wilson, will be an attractive building indeed when Mr. R. J. Lake finishes it with a few coats of Sun Proof Paint. The Capitol of Alabama is also painted with Sun Proof, just recently finished, and if this paint was not good it would not be used on the above buildings.

The old reliable Hammar Paint is too well known throughout the county to need further praise, has been sold in Clanton eight or ten years. So let us furnish you the paint you may need from time to time, will appreciate your trade.

SUPPOSE YOU TRY SMILING.

Your burden is heavy, I haven't a doubt,
But others have loads they must carry about,
And they are not whining.
Some people are glad if but half of the way
Lies out of the shadow, or part of the day
They see the sun shining.
Suppose you try smiling.

I know you are lonely, but other hearts ache,
And bravely refuse to be bitter or break
Because of life's sorrow.
They think of the joy in the land far away,
And hasten the slow passing hours of today
With hopes of tomorrow.
Suppose you try smiling.

This funny old world is a mirror, you know,
Turn its way with a sneer, or face of a foe,
And you will see trouble.
But meet it with laughter and looks full of cheer,
And back will come sunshine and love true and dear,
Your blessings to double.
Suppose you try smiling.

All places are open to those who are glad,
Too many lack courage, too many are sad,
Those near you need cheering.
So sing with your burden, the way is not long,
And if you look upward your heart will grow strong,
And skies will be clearing.
Suppose you try smiling.

—Youth's Companion.

ANGLING FOR A RISE.

Hilda Joicey and Amy Evershed were bosom friends, according to the standard of bosom friendship that obtains between girls in their early twenties. They made a point of seeing each other twice or thrice every day, and spent most of the remainder of the twenty-four hours in writing each other effusive notes. Neither had a secret from the other. Their whole converse, viva voce or by letter, was one perpetual interchange of mutual confidences. Had you breathed to them the hint that this excess of fondness was bound to be followed, sooner or later, by reaction—that the pace, in fact, was too warm to last—they would have resented the ridiculous suggestion with mingled indignation and amusement. And yet the reaction was even then impending; the little rift within the lute was close at hand; and—as you will probably not be surprised to hear—a man was the cause of it.

The man in question was Reginald Smart-Shryke, the eldest son of a neighboring squire, and heir to five or six thousand a year. For some years he had been friendly with both girls. But it was Hilda Joicey with whom he ultimately fell in love, to whom he proposed and by whom he was accepted.

So far all was well. Amelia Evershed betrayed no sign of jealousy. On the contrary, she congratulated her darling Hilda warmly on the engagement.

But I must get on to the little rift within the lute which I have spoken of as impending. It came about in this way: Hilda was one afternoon pouring into Amelia's receptive ear all sorts of intimate confidences in relation to her wooing by Reginald Smart-Shryke.

"And when he takes me in his arms and kisses me," she cried, "oh, Amelia, when he takes me in his arms and kisses me!"

"Is it—er—very nice, Hilda?"

"Nice? It is heavenly. He does it so beautifully—with such—such—I do not know how to express it—but there's an eloquence about it that—that—"

"Just so," Amelia nodded, knowingly. "To kiss like that isn't a thing that comes all at once, either. It wants practice. And your are very lucky, my dear girl, in possessing a lover who has had such practice, and thus acquired the art of kissing really well."

"Nonsense! You are quite in error," protested Hilda rather sharply. "I am Reggie's first love. If I were not, indeed, I should have had nothing to say to him. I am not the sort of girl, as you know very well, who cares to be one of a multitude. I must be either a man's first and only love, or nothing."

"Is that so? Well, I confess you surprise me," rejoined Amelia, raising her eyebrows. "For my part, I'd much rather be a man's last love than his first. In fact, it's only his last love that ever comes to anything. His first is usually dissipated on some impossible person. It is with them that he gets the practice and experience, by which he learns how to make love and kiss effectively, and—"

"I really think you must have gone mad, Amelia."

"Oh, nonsense. It's like golf or croquet. There's no fun in playing with a beginner to whom you yourself have to teach the rudiments of the game. Give me a man who knows as much as, or more about it, than I do!"

"And how much do you know about it, pray, considering that you never have never had any experience of a lover?" demanded Hilda, with all the superiority of an engaged girl.

Amelia Evershed smiled, enigmatically. "Oh, I know what I know," she said. "I've had my little experiences with men, in a probationary sort of way, just to keep my hand in against the time when Mr. Right (as servantgaldom styles him) comes along. Whenever an opportunity has come my way, I have seized it, and made the most of it. And I always found (which brings me back to where we started) that those men who had previous practice and experience made much the best lovers. Bumblepuppy at bridge is bad enough; but from Bumblepuppy in love-making—may the saints deliver me!

"Have I not spoken good practical sense? Would you find your Reggie's wooing so acceptable if he were not an expert at it? You know you wouldn't."

"I tell you Reggie is not an expert—he has had no previous practice in making love," exclaimed Hilda, almost crying with indignation at the idea.

"No?"

There was a note of amused incredulity in the interrogation. Moreover, brief as it was, it seemed to Hilda to be pregnant with sinister meaning.

"I don't understand you, Amelia," she flashed out. "You are hiding something from me. You know nothing against Reggie?"

"Against him? Far from it. I know nothing about that handsome and eminently agreeable young man but what is entirely to his credit. If he has practised and made himself perfect, that is all in his favor. And you, who have entered into the fruits of his practice, ought to commend him for it most of all."

"I tell you, again, he has never practised. You have no right to say such a thing. You know he hasn't, Amelia."

"Do I?"

Amelia smiled provokingly, as she uttered these two words, with the air of one who could, and she would, throw a good deal of light on the subject under discussion.

"What are you driving at, Amelia? You must tell me what you mean by these odious covert insinuations. Do you know of any girl to whom Reggie has made love before he became engaged to me? If so, who is she? I insist on a plain answer."

"Oh, nonsense, Hilda," interposed Amelia, with amused contempt. "Don't make such a ridiculous fuss about nothing. Talk about a storm in a teacup! This is a veritable hurricane in a thimble. Your Reggie has been like other young men, that's all. Leave it at that, and don't talk any more rubbish about insisting upon particulars. For one thing, I don't admit that I know any particulars. For another, if I did, I shouldn't tell tales out of school. * * * And now, let us change the subject."

But Hilda was not in a frame of mind in which she would acquiesce in being thus cavalierly put off.

"You do know something," she cried, furiously, "and you shall tell me, Amelia."

"I shan't," said Amelia Evershed, pursing up her lips, with a determined air.

"You shall—you shall, I say," ejaculated Hilda, more and more furious.

"My dear child, do keep calm. I absolutely decline to say any more about the matter. More especially as I have promised—, but there," she broke off, hastily, with some slight appearance of confusion, as though she had been almost betrayed into making an unguarded admission, "let us consider the subject finally closed."

But Hilda's keen perception, rendered keener by rabid jealousy, had not missed Amelia Evershed's hastily checked slip of the tongue, with its attendant signs of confusion, and with eyes blazing and cheeks aflame she was down on it like a thousand of bricks.

"Minx! Traitress! I see how it is. Reggie has—has—been making love to you!"

"Pshaw! What has put such a foolish notion into your head?" replied Amelia, with affected amusement at the absurd imputation.

But she avoided looking Hilda in the face as she said it, and Hilda was not slow to mark the omission.

"It is true. I can see it is true," she cried, in furious accents. "Deny it, madam, if you can."

"I am not going to stop here to be insulted in this way by any such ridiculous accusations," retorted Amelia Evershed, evidently glad of an excuse for terminating the interview. "Good-by, Hilda. When next I meet you, I hope you'll be in your right mind again."

And she took her departure.

Hilda went up to her bedroom and cried for two hours and three-quarters. But the tears brought her no relief. Tears of anger never do. Besides, while brooding thus alone, her jealous suspicions had magnified themselves to an astonishing extent.

She saw a secret understanding between her Reggie and Amelia. She saw herself betrayed, in her tenderest affections, by one whom she had supposed her most faithful and devoted friend. She saw her lover's heart stolen away from her, and her whole life laid waste and desolate by the serpentine wiles of that diabolical minx. All this she saw, and a hundred other things besides.

When Hilda came down to tea she found her brother Philip just returned from business. He saw at once by her red and swollen eyes, that something was the matter. He asked her what it was. Then out it all came. "All," do I say? Yes, far more than all.

Philip, who was a good brother, was greatly aroused and perturbed by the tale of his sister's wrongs.

"Something going on between Smart-Shryke and Amelia Evershed," he exclaimed. "Tut-tut! It—it is too outrageous. I can—can—hardly believe it either of him or of her."

"But it is true!" cried out Hilda, clenching her hands excitedly, "she as good as confessed it to me. I don't blame Reggie so much—disloyal and perfidious as he has been. It is more that snake Amelia's fault than his. She has beguiled him to his downfall, like her congenial prototype in the Garden of Eden."

After tea, Philip put on his hat, and, with a determined air, sallied forth.

Hilda had no doubt from his manner that he had gone to demand an explanation from Reginald Smart-Shryke.

It was three good hours before he came back. Hilda looked up at him anxiously.

"Well?" she inquired.

"It is all right," answered her brother, smiling.

W"hat do you mean by 'all right?'"

"I mean it is as I half suspected from the first. There has been an egregious mistake. Amelia Evershed doesn't care twopence for Smart-Shryke, and there has never been anything between them."

"Reggie has told you this?"

"No; I haven't seen Smart-Shryke. I have been to Amelia's. She has told me."

"Ah! I'm astonished at your having done that, Philip; still more at your having allowed yourself to be deceived by that minx's plausible and interested lies. For, of course, she would tell you that she was innocent. But—"

"Half a moment, Hilda. She has not only told me that she cares nothing whatever for Smart-Shryke, but she has also given me incontrovertible evidence of the fact."

"Evidence? What evidence?"

"She has promised to marry me."

"Why did you make me so unhappy by all those false insinuations against Reggie?" cried Hilda Joicey at the next meeting with Amelia Evershed, shedding tears of mingled reproach and joy upon the other's bosom. "Why did you pretend that he had been making love to you? You did it in jest, I suppose—to get a rise out of me. But it was a cruel, cruel joke, oh my Amelia."

"I did it, I confess, to get a rise, but not out of you—out of some one else," said Amelia, smiling.

"Out of whom, then? I do not understand you.

"Out of that very procrastinating admirer of mine, your brother Philip," said Amelia Evershed.—Truth.

Half-Deaf People.

"If you are deaf in one ear," said the boiler-maker, "I don't care about giving you a job."

"Why?" aswed the applicant.

"Because you can't tell what direction sounds come from. Hence in a place like this you would be in great danger."

"How do you know I can't tell what direction sounds come from?" the applicant demanded.

"No person deaf in one ear," replied the boiler maker, "can do so. A man deaf in one ear will look behind him if a gun goes off on his right. He will look up in the air if a child shrieks at his feet. He will look wildly in front of him if a locomotive whistles in his rear. A boiler shop is no place for such a man."

"I knew I was like this," said the applicant, "but I didn't know all half-deaf people were."

THE PULPIT.

A BRILLIANT SUNDAY SERMON BY DR. TORREY, THE GREAT REVIVALIST.

Subject: One Miser Worse Than Twelve Whisky Fiends.

Philadelphia.—The Rev. Dr. Torrey, the great revivalist, on Sunday delivered a compelling sermon entitled "One Miser Worse Than Twelve Whisky Fiends." His text was Acts xxii., 16: "And now, why tarriest thou? Arise and be baptized, washing away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord."

"Why tarriest thou?" It was God who asked that question of Saul of Tarsus, who, as you will remember, was a most bitter enemy of Christ; I doubt if Jesus Christ ever had a more bitter enemy, a more determined, more relentless enemy than Saul of Tarsus.

Saul of Tarsus sincerely believed that Jesus Christ was an imposter, that His claim to be the Son of God was a false claim, and he hated Him with all the intensity of a sincere soul. There were times when the thought would come stealing into Saul's soul, "Perhaps He is the Son of God." Especially when Saul stood and saw Stephen stoned to death and heard Stephen's dying testimony, "I see the Heavens opened and the Son of Man stands on the right hand of God," the thought came to Saul, "Does he really see Him? Is Jesus really the Son of God?" But Saul would not listen to these suggestions.

He kicked against the goal and became all the more bitter against Christ in his enmity, because there was a lurking suspicion that he was wrong. He breathed an atmosphere of threatening slaughter. He went down into the streets of Jerusalem, going from house to house, dragging from their homes men, women and children, sparing neither age nor sex, all those who professed belief in Christ; he dragged them to be tried and punished, to be put to death, and if anyone was to be killed he always voted for their death, until at last he had exhausted all his opportunities for persecution of the Christian people of Jerusalem, but he had not exhausted his hate of Christ.

He heard that 130 miles away from Jerusalem at Damascus there were other Christians, and his heart went out in bitter hatred toward those Christians he had never seen. So he went to the High Priest and asked the authorities to allow him to go to the city of Damascus and to do what he had done in Jerusalem. They were only too pleased to allow him to go, so he started on the long, weary way to Damascus, hurrying there, neither stopping for the intense noonday heat, but pressing eagerly on, so intensely did he hate the Son of God.

And now he has almost reached Damascus; he stands on the last foothill and stands looking down into the valley at Damascus. Damascus was a city noted throughout the ancient world for its beauty. But as he stood there looking at the beautiful city Saul did not think of its beauty, but of the thousands of Christians there whom he wished to drag from their homes to death.

As he was standing there, there suddenly shone around him a light brighter than the sun, and in the midst of that light the brightest and most wonderful face and form that Saul had ever seen appeared. It was Jesus. With a cry Saul fell on his face to the ground, and out of the cloud came a voice saying, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me?"

From a humbled man came back the answer, "Who art Thou, Lord?" Back comes the crashing response, "I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest."

And now from a thoroughly humbled man came the answer, "What would you have me to do?" "Arise; get on thy feet and go into Damascus, and there thou shalt be told what thou shalt do." He arose, and found himself totally blind, and thus he entered the city where he had expected to come as a conqueror, blind, helpless as a cripple, where he spent three days and three nights fasting and praying. But still he did not accept Christ.

Christ sent a certain disciple to Saul with the question, "Why tarriest thou? What are you waiting for? You know I am the Son of God; why don't you arise and be baptized in your acceptance of Me?"

I am going to ask that question of every man and woman in the building to-night. "Why tarriest thou?"

There are a great many in this building to-night who in their secret hearts believe in Christ, but have never openly professed that faith in Him. Why tarriest thou? What are you waiting for? Why don't you accept Christ tonight? Why don't you publicly confess your acceptance of Christ to-night? I wish it were possible for me to descend from this pulpit to-night and go from seat to seat, from man to man, woman to woman who has not publicly accepted Christ and put to them the question, "Why tarriest thou?"

I believe that if I could do so that almost every man and woman who is out of Christ in this great building would be brought to Him to-night: But that is impossible, so the next best thing to do is for you to forget that I am speaking to a great congregation here, and just think you and I are having a personal talk together, and that I am asking the question.

And while I am asking that question I want everybody to draw near in prayer for a few moments, at the end of which time I shall have your honest answer. Let us have a few moments of perfect silence. Why tarriest thou? [Perfect silence for a few moments.]

I know what the answer of some of you is. It is, "I am waiting until I am convinced, and just as soon as I am convinced that the Bible is the Word of God and that Jesus Christ is the Son of God I will accept Jesus." Now, to every one here who makes that answer, I will make the offer: If you will come to me at the end of this meeting I will show you with absolute certainty that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and that the Bible is the Word of God. Now if you are really an honest skeptic you will accept that offer. If you don't accept it, don't go around saying you are a skeptic; you are not a skeptic, you are only a humbug.

Of course, if you are a mere quibbler I have no time to waste on you. But if you are an honest skeptic I have all the time in the world for you. But let me say, right here, that I have yet to find the first honest skeptic, infidel, agnostic, Unitarian, or Christian Scientist who really wanted to know. The truth is that I could show them that the Bible is the Word of God and Jesus Christ the Son of God.

It has been accepted by millions all over the world, and I know that every one that has accepted it has found joy in Jesus Christ and is rejoicing in Him to-night, and if you come to me really wishing to know and are willing to obey your conscience, I will put you in the way of finding out, and if I don't succeed, you will be the first one I have ever failed on.

A few years ago I lived in Minneapolis at a time when the boom was on and men made fortunes in a day. I came back to the State of Ohio on a visit. One night I and my wife were stopping with a friend who was then seventy years of age. He had accumulated half a million dollars. One foot was in the grave.

One night when everybody else was in bed he and I remained up for a talk, and what do you think he wanted to talk about—about eternity, or about the future of his soul? Is that what he wanted to talk about? No. He leaned over that old white hand of his and whispered, "Archie, do you know any place up in Minneapolis where I could invest a little money where it would bring big interest?" [Laughter.]

You laugh, but there is nothing laughable in it; it was appalling. Thousands of men in Philadelphia to-night are in the same grip of that awful curse, that love for gold. I would rather undertake to save twelve whisky fiends than one miser.

How is it with the love of pleasure? Ah, friends, as the years pass by the less and less pleasure there is in the world, but the more pleasure you seek and endeavor to enjoy, the more of a slave you become to it. You go to a theatre and you will see women old enough to be grandmothers, dressed in low-necked gowns, exposing their thin, weasoned old forms, blazoned with diamonds, as eager to see the play as the miss just making her debut in society. The longer you live for the world the more of a slave you become to its pleasures, but the less pleasure there is in it, and the time will never come when it is easier to give up the world than it is to-night.

Some years ago I was stopping with a friend, and after we came home from meeting he told me the story of his life. He said: "I had been happily married for more than fourteen years. I was the principal of the public school in the town where I lived. My wife and I quite agreed in everything, and we were very happy together.

"One night something over fourteen and a half years after we had been married my wife said to me, 'Husband, I have decided to become a Christian and wish to unite with a church.' I laughed at her and said, 'Tut, tut! you're not going to become a Christian; I have no idea of becoming a Christian, and don't see why you should wish to become a Christian. Now we have lived happily together for fourteen years, and if you will do that it may result in my going my way and you going your way and virtually in a separation.'

"After some further talk I finally promised to let my wife become a Christian, but on her promise that she should not unite with the church; so she became a Christian, but did not unite with the church. It went on this way for about six months, and you know that no really converted Christian can really be happy out of Christian fellowship.

"At the end of six months one Saturday night she said, 'Husband, I have been trying for six months to be a Christian outside of the church, and I have decided that it is my duty to make a public confession of my faith and unite with the church.' Then I was angry and I said, 'Wife, see here, now, I have no intention of becoming a Christian, and I want you to understand that if you unite with the church you are nothing more to me.'

"That was a pretty stern test to put to a loyal wife, but that wife was loyal and not only loyal to her husband but loyal to God and man. That wife said, 'Husband you know that I love you, but I must obey Gid, and His Word is clear. I have made up my mind to make a public confession of religion to-morrow, and to unite with the church.'

"I was very angry and said, 'Very well, wife, then you go your way and I go my way: you are nothing more to me.' We both went to our rooms and retired for the night. I could not sleep. At 2 o'clock I cried, 'Wife, I am converted; we will go to church together.'"

When he told me that, he was a Congregational minister, and now he is in glory. If that wife had waited for him perhaps neither of them would have been converted. She went first and brought him in. If you will come first perhaps you will bring your friends along. "Suppose they won't come?" you say. Then come without them." I had rather go to Heaven alone than go to hell in company. If I were not a Christian to-night and not another person started for Heaven to-night, I would start though I started alone.

Men and women, don't you know you are lost? Oh, yes. Don't you know that Jesus Christ died for your sins?

The Teacher's Religion.

It was said of a good Christian minister that wherever he went he made people fall in love with the Lord Jesus Christ. Evidently he had the right sort of religion. It would be well if all Sunday-school teachers had the same kind. There are some people, Christians too, godly and conscientious, who live honestly and uprightly, and who are active in good works, but who do not make people fall in love with Christ. It was said of a very earnest church worker the other day, "I suppose he is a Christian, but somehow he never makes me think of Christ." Yet are there not too many such church members? The teacher ought to have a religion that will make other people think of Christ. It should be a sunny religion. Christ was the light of the world. It should be a joyous religion, for Christ was always joyous. It should be a religion of love, for Christ was all love.

HAD GIVEN UP ALL HOPE. CONFINED TO HER BED WITH DYSPEPSIA.

"I Owe My Life to Pe-ru-na," Says Mrs. Huffaker.

Mrs. Mittie Huffaker, R. R. No. 3, Columbia, Tenn., writes:

"I was afflicted with dyspepsia for several years and at last was confined to my bed, unable to sit up.

"We tried several different doctors without relief.

"I had given up all hope of any relief and was almost dead when my husband bought me a bottle of Peruna.

"At first I could not notice any benefit, but after taking several bottles I was cured sound and well.

"It is to Peruna I owe my life to-day.

"I cheerfully recommend it to all sufferers."

Revised Formula.

"For a number of years requests have come to me from a multitude of grateful friends, urging that Peruna be given a slight laxative quality. I have been experimenting with a laxative addition for quite a length of time, and now feel gratified to announce to the friends of Peruna that I have incorporated such a quality in the medicine which, in my opinion, can only enhance its well-known beneficial character. TWICE-TOLD TESTIMONY.

A Woman Who Has Suffered Tells How to Find Relief.

The thousands of women who suffer backache, languor, urinary disorders and other kidney ills, will find comfort in the words of Mrs. Jane Farrell, of 606 Ocean Ave., Jersey City, N. J., who says: "I reiterate all I have said before in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills. I had been having heavy backache and my general health was affected when I began using them. My feet were swollen, my eyes puffed, and dizzy spells were frequent. Kidney action was irregular and the secretions highly colored. To-day, however, I am a well woman, and I am confident that Doan's Kidney Pills have made me so, and are keeping me well."

A Jap Railway Ride.

When a native lady enters a Japanese railway carriage she slips her feet from her tiny shoes, stands upon the seat and then sits demurely with her feet doubled beneath her.

A moment later she lights a cigarette or her little pipe, which holds just tobacco enough to produce two good whiffs of smoke. All Japanese people sit with their feet upon the seat of the car and not as Europeans do.

When the ticket collector—attired in a blue uniform—enters the carriage he removes his cap and twice bows politely. He repeats the bow as he comes to each passenger to collect the tickets.

Birthdays were celebrated as long ago as the time of Pharaoh.

happened the other day to a prominent citizen's wife, whose horse ran away with her and flung her against a telegraph pole.

Such accidents, though of daily occurrence in all parts of the world, add but little to the sum-total of woman's suffering, as compared with the terrible results of the diseases peculiar to women, which drive so many women to premature graves.

The question is, what is to be done, if the coming race is to be protected, and the answer may well be told in the words of Mrs. Blanche E. Stephanou, of 1228 S. 42nd Ave., Chicago, Ill., wife of a prominent Greek lawyer of that city.

In a recent letter, she says: "For five years after the birth of my baby, I suffered constantly with backache, and could not wear a corset. I also had sideache and bearing down pains, which nothing would relieve. My husband spent hundreds of dollars on the best doctors here, but to no avail. The last one suggested an operation, but to this I would not consent. At last, on the advice of a dear friend, I took Wine of Cardui, and can truthfully say that from the very first bottle I began to improve. I now look and feel like a different woman, eat well, and suffer no more pain."

Cardui is a pure, harmless, vegetable medicine, for all the diseases peculiar to women. It relieves pain and regulates the functions. Sold at all druggists in $1.00 bottles. N 12.

The overhead trolley wire is used almost entirely on the street car lines in Germany, and the exclusive use of the storage battery system is only found on a three mile line at Bremerhaven. There is a combined overhead and underground conduit system in some of the large cities, for instance at Dresden, Berlin and Dusseldorf.

The Chinese Drum.

Kou is the Chinese word for drum, of which many kinds are used in China, Japan and Burma. Eastern drums differ from those of Europe in having their heads nailed on, not kept movable as our are for tuning purposes. The body is usually made of sandal wood, cedar or mulberry wood, or else of baken clay. They are used for many purposes—on state occasions, to tell the hour during the night, to scare away evil spirits as well as to invite visits from good spirits and to play the "Amens" at the end of verses in the Confucian services. Tiny drums are also carried by peddlers when hawking their wares. Etiquette insists that on any occasion when the emperor is present all drums must be muffled by being rolled in folds of cloth.

There are more aquatic birds than there are land birds.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo, O.

Jumble of Languages.

There are towns in Hungary, and small towns, too, where from seven to ten idioms are constantly being used. On the Galician frontier there in a lovely valley the old town of Eperjes. The number of its inhabitants does not exceed 12,000. To this day the good people of Eperjes are in the habit of talking or being talked to in six different dialects. An ordinary household will include a Slovak man servant, a Hungarian coachman, a German cook and a Polish chambermaid. What is still more remarkable, each grade of society will tenaciously cling to its own language for centuries.

Ireland's Potatoes.

The acreage under potatoes in Ireland in 1906 was 616,755. The Champion potato was first introduced in quantity in Ireland in the year 1880, after the famine of the potato crop of 1879. Since that year it has constituted the main potato crop of the country.

ECZEMA AFFLICTS FAMILY.

Father and Five Children Suffered For Two Years With Terrible Eczema—Wonderful Cure by Cuticura.

"My husband and five children were all afflicted with eczema. They had it two years. We used all the home remedies we could hear of, without any relief, and then went to a physician and got medicine two different times, and it got worse. It affected us all over except head and hands. We saw Cuticura Remedies advertised and concluded to try them. So I sent for $1.00 worth, consisting of one cake of Cuticura Soap, one box of Ointment and one vial of Pills, and we commenced to use them. I do not know how to express my joy in finding a cure, for two of my children were so bad that they have the brown scars on their bodies where they were sore. Mrs. Maggie B. Hill, Stevens, Mason Co., W. Va., June 12, 1905."

Benefits of Birds.

If the world were birdless, a naturalist declares, man could not inhabit it after nine years' time, in spite of all the sprays and poisons that could be manufactured for the destruction of insects. The insects and bugs would simply eat all the orchards and crops in that time.

Strength of Steel Cars.

Before the gaze of a score of startled spectators the other day a huge steel coal car, within sight of the capitol at Washington, backed off a twenty-foot trestle and described a half-somersault, depositing a load of many tons of bituminous coal on the sidewalk, says Technical World Magazine for May.

The involuntary plunge is said to have been due to slippery rails and miscalculation of distance. Strange to say, although the mass of iron and coal weighed fully 150,000 pounds, no injury was done to the car, except the comparatively small inconvenience incident to removing the coal from the sidewalk to the bins, a short distance away, for which it was destined.

Within an hour after the accident a wrecking crew was on the spot, and had effaced practically all indications of the recent plunge of the big car into space. The ordinary methods of hoisting were employed, and two steel cables were attached, the huge burden being gradually pulled back to the rails. The car was immediately coupled to its train and disappeared behind a wreath of smoke on its return trip to the mines at Cumberland, Md.

CORDIAL INVITATION

ADDRESSED TO WORKING GIRLS

Miss Barrows Tells How Mrs. Pinkham's Advice Helps Working Girls.

Miss Abby F. Barrows

Girls who work are particularly susceptible to female disorders, especially those who are obliged to stand on their feet from morning until night in stores or factories.

Day in and day out the girl toils, and she is often the bread-winner of the family. Whether she is sick or well, whether it rains or shines, she must get to her place of employment, perform the duties exacted of her—smile and be agreeable.

Among this class the symptoms of female diseases are early manifest by weak and aching backs, pain in the lower limbs and lower part of the stomach. In consequence of frequent wetting of the feet, periods become painful and irregular, and frequently there are faint and dizzy spells, with loss of appetite, until life is a burden. All these symptoms point to a derangement of the female organism which can be easily and promptly cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Miss Abby F. Barrows, Nelsonville, Athens Co., Ohio, tells what this great medicine did for her. She writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I feel it my duty to tell you the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier have done for me. Before I took them I was very nervous, had dull headaches, pains in back, and periods were irregular, I had been to several doctors, and they did me no good.

"Your medicine has made me well and strong. I can do most any kind of work without complaint, and my periods are all right.

"I am in better health than I ever was, and I know it is all due to your remedies. I recommend your advice and medicine to all who suffer."

It is to such girls that Mrs. Pinkham holds out a helping hand and extends a cordial invitation to correspond with her. She is daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham and for twenty-five years has been advising sick women free of charge. Her long record of success in treating woman's ills makes her letters of advice of untold value to every ailing working girl. Address, Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

Dear Sir:—I want to thank you, your Secretary and Treasurer, A. P. Longshore, of the Shelby County Division, and T. A. Leathers, Division Agent of the same, for $829 00 received in full payment of my husband's policy. I not only think this is the best, safest and cheapest plan of insurance on the market today, but a plan appealing to the patriotism of every Southern man and woman to enlist their aid, influence, patronage and endorsement in fostering a home institution that protects the people at actual cost in lieu of supporting those that drain our lovely Southland of money that leaves it never to return to enrich foreign corporations and build up foreign enterprises. It only cost my husband $7.15 to leave me the above amount.

WE WANT TO COVER THE COUNTRY WITH

URACURA

ALTERATIVE

Fifty-two per cent of the people in the United States have Liver, Kidney or Bladder disease in one form or another. We want every sufferer in this broad land to know about URACURA and to be brought back to life and health through it's use. We can't find words strong enough to express our faith in URACURA or to convey the earnestness of our desire for the afflicted to enter onto a new and hopeful existence by taking this great medicine.

If we could only sit down in person before you and explain what URACURA is—if we could introduce you to the thousands who have been saved to their friends by this remedy—if you could just hear from their lips the words of praise they bestow on it you too would be as confident and sure as we are.

We know that with URACURA we have solved the problem of Liver, Kidney and Bladder health and we want our message of hope to go forth and be read from ocean to ocean.

Do you suffer with Backache, high-colored urine, shortness of breath, swelling of hands and feet, puffs under the eyes, loss of appetite, fever, sleeplessness, vertigo, constipation, sallow complexion, coated tongue, depression, headache, nervousness? Then you have in a more or less acute form Liver, Kidney or Bladder trouble—you can't go back of the symptoms—but if you would be doubly sure, apply

The unfailing test. Take several doses of URACURA—if you find then that the urine is of a very dark or reddish color with a strong odor of the medicine you can know that your kidneys or bladder are affected. But hope—the very thing that indicates the trouble is also a sign that the medicine has commenced it's good work. After two are three days you will notice that the urine is clear, you will feel less pain about the kidneys and your backache will leave. MAKE MONEY.

Here is an interesting study: Make out a list of all the people you know, and estimate the amount of money each one earns in a year. Total it up. The amount will be surprisingly large. Now, of all those people, only the few who SAVE SOMETHING really MAKE anything at all. Simply earning money isn't making it; what slips through the earner's fingers is finally "made" by somebody else. Don't forget to count yourself in on the list, and if you are not "making" money, begin now to save with us. One dollar will open your bank account.

Editor Banner: I wish to say a few words to the dear readers of your paper, and in behalf of the candidate whom I will mention.

As I was reading my paper tonight, by some chance as good luck would have it, I found a heading, Judge S. M. Adams, and reading the contents find that Judge has announced himself as a candidate for Commissioner of Agriculture and Industries, subject to the action of the Democratic primary to be held on the 27th day of August.

I would commend to all who contemplate voting the Democratic ticket that they should think of the man who is competent to fill the office, and I think Judge is the man for the place. I am judging from past experience, when you have tried a man as you have Judge, and found him to excel all others, why not keep him going, we should vote for the interest of our country, and in order to do this we must vote for the best man.

I hope to see on election day Judge S. M. Adams nominee for Commissioner of Agriculture and Industries. Respectfully,

S. R. BILLINGSLEY.

The health of this community is good, and crops are fine.

OBITUARY.

Mr. A. J. Henley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Henley, was born Jan. 25, 1859, in Chilton county. He spent most of his life in said county. Mr. Henley died at his home in Avondale, Ala., May 16, being 47 years old. He was sick just a few days, but his suffering was very great. Bro. Henley professed faith in Christ at the age of about 20 years, and joined Pleasant Grove congregation of the Methodist Protestant church in Chilton county. A few months before he died, he joined the order of Red Men. The writer had several talks with him on religion and on scriptural subjects. He seemed to have a living faith in the living Christ. While he did not claim perfection, he was always willing and ready to confess and regret his faults. He was a good husband and kind father, a liberal and accomodating neighbor, friendly and socially disposed. He leaves a widow, three sons and two daughters, besides other relatives and friends to mourn their loss. We have reasons to believe that he has gone to rest. A few minutes before he departed he pointed upward and said, "Ain't it beautiful?"

His funeral was preached by the writer, at his home, immediately after which his remains were conveyed to the Woodlawn cemetery, accompanied by quite a number of friends and relatives. The burial, conducted by his brethren of the Red Men, was accompanied by a beautiful and impressive ceremony.

And now we commend the bereaved wife and children to the Almighty, All Wise and Merciful God, beseeching Him to not let their bereavement crush them, but that He may strengthen them, and that through this darkness He may bring light and comfort to their troubled hearts.

TELL OF MONOPOLY

Witnesses Detail the Methods of Standard. Railroad Men in Its Pay.

GOT SALARIES FROM TANK LINE.

Editor of the Columbus (O.) Dispatch Has No Positive Knowledge as to Payments Received.

Cleveland, O.—W. A. MacEwan, a former chief clerk in the car department of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern railroad general offices in Cleveland, was a witness in the Standard Oil investigation by the interstate commerce commissioner.

He testified that he had charge of the compiling of the mileage of the cars of the Union Tank Line. He said that the reports were forwarded each day at noon to the Cleveland office of the Standard Oil company. The Lake Shore company he declared, gave the Standard a big advantage in tabulating records of tank cars in that the mileage of the Standard tank cars were figured on a different basis than the cars of competing companies. The advantage amounted all the way from 8 to 54 cents per car, according to the distances between different points on the road.

MacEwen, who is now employed by the Peerless Transit company, also testified that the Lake Shore and Pennsylvania companies had recently been rejecting Peerless Transit company's tank cars, built two or three years ago in accordance with specifications furnished by the railroad companies. At the same time, the witness said, he knew of his own personal knowledge that Union tank cars not complying with specifications were accepted by the railroads.

The witness made the further charge that certain freight employes of the Lake Shore road received salaries from the Union Tank Line Company, a Standard concern, and in return for such compensation the freight officials made special efforts to facilitate the movement of Standard Oil shipments.

This, he pointed out, gave the Standard an additional advantage over the independents.

W. J. Brickell, for twenty-nine years editor of the Columbus (Ohio) Evening Dispatch, was called to tell what, if anything, he knew about that paper accepting articles alleged to have been furnished by the Standard Oil company and paid for at so much per line. Mr. Brickell denied that he had any positive knowledge on the subject and said that if any such contract existed it was known only to the business manager of the paper.

Z. D. Ellis, an independent oil dealer of Cincinnati, gave evidence showing that the names of his customers were systematically obtained by the Standard by bribing employes.

Samuel B. Kauffman, for the last four years manager of the telegraph department of the Buckeye Pipe Line, a Standard adjunct at Lima, Ohio, admitted that the wires under his control carried the business of several other concerns, such as the Northwestern Ohio Natural Gas company, the Ohio Oil company, the Vacuum Refining company, the Solar Oil company and the Manhattan Pipe Line company. The blanks of the Standard's telegram system were used for this business. He did not know on what basis charges were made for carrying this business.

Rudolph Longacre, traffic manager of the Atlantic Refining company, of Cleveland, and previously connected with various departments of the Erie and New York, Chicago and St. Louis railroads, was examined concerning freight rates between a large number of different points in the country and covering a long period of years. The facts and figures given by him were in detail, and showed that rates in many directions had been greatly increased and that many gross inequalities existed in fixing rates, also in estimating tonnage and buly and classifications.

C. B. Chamberlain, secretary and treasurer of the Globe Oil company, of Cleveland, and secretary of the National Petroleum association, with headquarters in Cleveland, said he had endeavored to obtain from the Hocking Valley Railroad Company a contract for furnishing lubricating oil. C. B. Duffy, the purchasing agent of the road, he testified, half promised him some small contracts for other oils, but said he could not take lubricating oil because if he did the road would lose from $175,000 to $200,000 in freightage from the Standard Oil company.

The witness read letters from customers at Marion, Ind., saying that Standard agents had found out that he was buying oil from the Globe company in Cleveland, and that he was being annoyed to death and his business interfered with. Even the wives of employes, the letter stated, were being visited at their homes by Standard agents, who demanded to be informed about certain things concerning shipments which had been observed.

Standard Will Reply.

Cleveland, O.—After taking testimony concerning the affairs of the Standard Oil company the interstate commerce commissioners adjourned and shortly thereafter started for Washington, where they are expected to soon begin the preparation of their report on the testimony taken here and in Chicago for presentation to congress.

The report, however, will not be closed until the Standard Oil company's attorneys have been given ample time to reply to the many statements and charges in evidence Attorney Virgil P. Kline, for the Standard Oil company, gave notice just before adjournment that he desired to answer some of the testimony produced and was told that this privilege would be extended to him, the time and place to be determined later.

In the three days' hearing a total of thirty-five witnesses have been on the stand. Counsel for the committee had five or six others on hand ready to be sworn, but the commissioners declined to hear them, indicating that the things expected to be proved were not important.

Saturday's developments were regarded as important, and were in keeping with the general lines of inquiry made during the two previous days. Special Counsel Monett endeavored to show by several witnesses during the day that the Standard maintained a press bureau for the purpose of subsidizing Ohio newspapers, 125 of whom he said were on the Standard's list.

Malcolm Jenkins, who conducts an advertising bureau at Lancaster, O., was called for the same purpose. He admitted that he made advertising contracts with Ohio newspapers for the Standard Oil company, but said they were not different from those made for any other concern.

Insurgents Kill Mongo.

Cape Haytien, Hayti.—News reached here by messenger to the effect that the Santo Dominican revolutionists, commanded by Maurico Jimenez, have attacked Guayoin, in Santo Domingo, and killed General Mongo, the commander of the town, and then retired immediately into the interior.

Telegraphic communication between Monte Christi and Santiago de Los Cabelleros, Santo Domingo, has been cut by the revolutionists, who have taken up arms in behalf of Gen. Isidore Jiminez, the former president of Santo Domingo. They have been joined by the partisans of General Morales, the predecessor of General Caceres, as president of Santo Domingo.

A schooner loaded with arms and ammunition recently sailed from Fort Thomas with orders to land her cargo at any cost between Puerto Plata and Monte Christi, on the northern coast of Santo Domingo, and it is said that the uprising just reported indicates that the schooner accomplished her task.

Perkins Is Discharged.

New York.—The appellate division of the supreme court has handed down a decision discharging from custody George W. Perkins, whom the supreme court had held to await the action of the grand jruy on a technical charge of grand larceny in connection with the campaign contribution of the New York Life Insurance company to the republican national committee.

The proceeding against Mr. Perkins was instituted by District Attorney Jerome for the purpose of securing a ruling on what charge, if any, those who made such contributions many be indicted. A charge was made against Mr. Perkins, who was formerly vice president of the New York Life Insurance company, and his case was immediately taken before Supreme Court Justice Greenbaum on a writ of habeas corpus. Justice Greenbaum dismissed this writ and held Mr. Perkins for action by the grand jury. The case was then appealed to the appellate division.

It is said that Mr. Jerome will carry the case to the court of appeals.

GREAT STRUGGLE ON

Wild Spirit of Revolution Is in Russian Air—Government Is Defied.

LACK OF CONFIDENCE.

Premier's Statement of Cabinet Policy Is Rejected With But Seven Dissenting Votes.

St. Petersburg.—At the end of a memorable seven-hour session the lower house of parliament rejected the government's policy as presented by Premier Goremykin, and with only seven dissenting voices voted a lack of confidence in the ministry, practically throwing the gauntlet to the bureacracy with a demand for the retirement of the present cabinet and its supersession by a ministry approved by the majority in the house.

The spirit of absolute revolution is in the air and a conflict between the crown and the nation now appears to be inevitable. While the house avoided the appearance of delivering an ultimatum, the government seems to have no alternative except surrender or war. The gloomiest forebodings are everywhere expressed, and the general impression is that the country is on the verge of a gigantic struggle, which may be delayed but not averted.

Premier Goremykin's statement, however, returned a non-possmus on the burning question raised by the house in its reply to the speech from the throne. It declared that the government's fiat and exceptional laws cannot be withdrawn until murder and terrorism cease. The expropriation of appanages of the crown and church and private lands was declared to be inadmissible. The right of investigation of administrative acts, the statement declared, belonged to the crown, the house having only the power of interpretation. Amnesty, Premier Goremykin said, was soley the prerogative of the emperor.

Such briefly was the government's reply to the address of the house and the premier's words seemed to arouse all the members of the house. The constitutional democratic leaders for the first time gave free hand to their passions and with flaming words, orator after orator declared the government's programme inadmissible and said the ministry must give way to a cabinet in which the people had confident. M. Roditcheff announced that the government's reply had dashed to the grounds all his hope of working in harmony with the administration. M. Kovalsky enacted the role of Mirabeau, practically paraphrasing the Frenchman's words: "We are here by the will of the people an! nothing but bayonets can disperse us." while half a dozen peasant members hurled defiance at the ministry.

Even Count Hayden, the leader of the right, deserted the government's side, saying that inasmuch as the government had refused to redeem its promise to repeal the exceptional laws, his vote also was for censure.

The realization of censure as adopted provides that the house shall proceed with the order of the day Monday, thus adroitly placing upon the shoulders of the government the responsibility for making the next move. For the moment, as indicated by a statement issued by the official agency the ministry is hesitating in a dilemma, being ready neither to resign itself nor to dismiss parliament. The communication says: "We are able to announce authoritatively that the rumors of a dissolution of parliament are unfounded. The parliament will sit until the middle of June, when it will take a vacation.

The dismissal of the ministers is a matter exclusively for the unfettered decision of the sovereign. The speech of the minister of justice at today's sitting of the house was an expression of his personal views given on his own initiative.

The text of the resolution of lack of confidence in the government was drafted by the labor group. It is as follows:

"The declaration of the premier heard by parliament contains the decisive declaration that the government in nowise wishes to meet the demands of the people and the execution of a law of liberty and civil rights enumerated in the address of the house in reply to the speech from the throne, without the fulfillment of which pacification of the country and successful work by the house is impossible. By its refusal to satisfy the popular demands the government clearly shows its disregard of the real interests of the people and its plain unwillingness to relieve from the shadow of new disasters a country which de harrassed by poverty, lawlessness and the continued unpunished arbitrariness of the authorities.

Deny Combination.

Norfolk, Va.—F. S. Royster, president, and C. F. Burroughs, vice president of the Royster Guano company, indicted jointly at Nashville, with practically every fertiliser concern of any size in the southern states, upon the charge of having conspired to fix rates against the anti-trust laws by engaging in a combination in restraint of commerce, denied here that the Royster company is in any way affiliated with any of the other companies mentioned in the indictment, but, on the other hand, is an entirely free and independent concern, fixing its own rates and selling its goods, asking no other concern how it shall conduct any part of its business. Mr. Burroughs said: "We have not seen the indictment and until we know with what we are charged we cannot say what our defense will be. We have formed no combination with any concern and we have violated no law."

Great Confidence Shown by San Francisco Banks.

San Francisco, Cal.—Country correspondents of the city savings banks are receiving money on exactly the same terms as the city depositors in the savings institutions.

The policy in this matter manifests the confidence of the bankers in the existing situation as strongly as possible.

The commercial banks of San Francisco are making loans to commercial men just as before the fire, and are, in fact, conducting their business without any departure in method from the customary ones.

The demand for money at the savings banks is lessening.

Tent Theaters.

San Francisco.—San Francisco will have two theaters under canvas by the middle of next month. A company has secured the immense tent used by Sarah Bernhardt in her Texas tour. It was in this tent that the benefit for the first sufferers of San Francisco was held at Chicago and $15,000 netted. A smaller tent has also been secured, which will be raised where the Majestic [illegible] stood at Ninth and Market [illegible]

English Complain of Japs.

Washington.—Eastern mails [illegible] news of friction between the English merchants and the Japanese officials resulting from the difficulty experienced by the former in obtaining access to the markets of Manchuria. It is charged that the Japanese seized the opportunity afforded by their military occupancy of the country to concentrate all of the trade in the hands of their own merchants, and that not onoly is the country glutted with goods brought in by the Japanese to a point that makes it practically impossible to find openings for European goods, but through their control of the transportation routes in Manchuria and Korea the Japanese officials are able to discriminate against the traders of other nationalities. In one place the Japanese themselves complain that the Japanese have built a bridge across one of the principal streams so low that it can no longer be used by the Chinese boats, with the result that traffic is diverted entirely to the Japanese owned railroad.

This is the second attempt along this line in the past few months.

ILROAD RATE AND SERVICE

Regulation the Paramount Issue—Railroad Domination Denounced and Defied.

To the Democratic Voters of Alabama:

When Dr. Cunningham made his second announcement for Governor he stated through the press that he would challenge me to a joint discussion through the State. I waited quite awhile for the challenge and none coming, I asked his manager at Opelika for a division of time at his meeting there. This was granted and we had a joint discussion there on April 23d.

A Challenge to Cunningham.

After waiting again for his promised challenge, I addressed this letter to him:

"Birmingham, Ala., April 26, 1906.

"Dr. R. M. Cunningham, Ensley, Ala.

"Dear Sir—I have an appointment at Gadsden May 7th. I suppose commencing about 10:30 o'clock, suiting the convenience of the court. I would be glad if you would join me there for a joint discussion, and also would ask you to join me in four joint discussions to follow this, at such places and time as we may agree on, you to name two places and I two. I respectfully refer you to Capt. Frank S. White, of this city, with whom any friends of yours may confer for complete final arrangements.

"Yours very truly,

"Signed.)) B. B. COMER."

Not getting any reponse, I wired Dr. Cunningham May 2d at Athens, Ala., asking if he would meet me at Gadsden Monday, May 7th, in joint discussion, to which he wired acceptance, and this discussion was had on May 7th. On Monday, the 14th of May, we met at Ashville without appointment.

Another Challenge to Cunningham.

Not having heard from previous letter asking for four joint discussions, I addressed this letter to him:

"Birmingham, Ala., May 12, 1906.

"Dr. R. M. Cunningham, Ensley, Ala.:

"Dear Sir—Captain White informs me that neither you nor a representative from you, has conferred with him regarding my request to you of several days ago, relative to your acceptance or declination of the four joint discussions, you to name the time and place for two and I to name the time and place for two. Would be glad that you would answer this matter, stating exactly what you will do, whether you accept or decline.

"Also, I have communication from Messrs. W. J. Rountree and R. E. L. [illegible]iel, of Selma, asking whether or not I would accept their invitation to make a joint discussion with you at Selma, we agreeing on time. Enclosed please find copy of letter to them. I accepted with your consent, and at such time as will be agreeable to both of us, and also to them.

Cunningham Refuses Joint Debate.

On the 21st instant citizens of Sheffield notified me that Dr. Cunningham had appointments at Sheffield Wednesday night, 23d of May, at Cherokee at 11 o'clock Thursday morning, the 24th of May, and at Tuscumbia Thursday evening, the 24th of May, and asked that I join him and hold joint discussions at these places. I wired them that I would do so with Dr. Cunningham's consent. They wired and wrote that Dr. Cunningham in person positively refused.

Considering that Dr. Cunningham at the beginning of his second announcement, stated to the people of Alabama that he would challenge me to joint discussion with him through the State, I think his failure in answering my letters challenging him to four joint discussions, and his refusal to divide time at Sheffield, Cherokee and Tuscumbia show at least insincere treatment of the public and of me, as both the public and I, after his statement to the press, were entitled to his acceptance and utmost consideration in this matter.

Insincerity or Ignorance.

Will state in this most public manner that I will accept the challenge to discuss with Dr. Cunningham, at reasonable intervals, through the State, the issues of the day. I will attempt to expose either his lack of sincerity or want of knowledge regarding the most important question before the people of Alabama. That question I think to be whether or not the people shall control the railroads, express companies, telegraph companies and telephone companies, these being franchised public carriers, and regulating their charges to reasonable limits, making of same law made [illegible]. And also securing for the people prompt settlement of claims, and securing for the people equalized service rules and charges; and excluding their interference in the policies and politics of our State, and in the making of our laws.

Insincerity or Ignorance.

Will state in this most public manner that I will accept the challenge to discuss with Dr. Cunningham, at reasonable intervals, through the State, the issues of the day. I will attempt to expose either his lack of sincerity or want of knowledge regarding the most important question before the people of Alabama. That question I think to be whether or not the people shall control the railroads, express companies, telegraph companies and telephone companies, these great franchised public carriers, and bringing their charges to reasonable amounts, making of same law made. And also securing for the people prompt settlement of claims, and securing for the people equalized service rules and charges; and excluding their interference in the policies and politics of our State, and in the making of our laws.

The Paramount Issue.

To accomplish this, in connection with others, I have been fighting for years, and we have advanced step by step, until it is not only a paramount issue in the State of Alabama, but in all of the United States. Mr. Roosevelt, the President of the United States, says it is the most important issue before the people of the United States. Mr. John Sharp Williams, the leader of the Democrats in the House of Representatives, says that it is the most important measure before the people, and entirely Democratic. Senator Bailey, leader of the Democrats in the Senate, says that it is the most important; the Democratic platforms of St. Louis and Chicago emphasize its importance and make it a foundation plank. Dr. Cunningham never has been associated with us, or others, as a friend or ally in this great movement. We think his recent claim of long continued leadership, or interest, is demagogic and without foundation. We also think in his second coming out as a candidate for Governor under the leadership of the Mongomery Advertiser, who he is following as Mary's lamb, and the attempt that he and it are making to divert the people from the above vital issue is dangerous to the accomplishment of the State's control of these great trusts, and that the people should have vision and be careful.

He now states that he is in favor of advising the Legislature, in case he is elected Governor, to pass for Alabama the Georgia classification of freight rates and the Georgia Standard of rates as the maximum rate for the State, and the adjusting of the railroads of the State to that classification and basis. I challenge him to explain how he will do this. Will also challenge him to state whether or not his leaders and followers, such as the Montgomery Advertiser, with their long continued radical railroad predilection, and others of that ilk, will lead or follow him to the execution of that plan.

Cunningham's Ominous Silence.

Will also challenge him to state if he is serious in the proposition to have the Legislature pass the Georgia rate as the maximum, why he has not been going through the State explaining to the people how it could be done, and advising them to elect a Legislature along that line, for it is evident if the Legislature does not concur in these alleged views the whole thing would be a failure. And I will notify him, if he does not know it, that it has been published in the papers that the railroads are going to try to elect the House and Senate, and are not only trying, but are going to continue to try to elect the House and the Senate, and he has not spoken word of protest or advice.

Will also challenge him to explain how it is, if he means to accomplish through the Legislature the passing of the Georgia classification and rate as the maximum rate of the State, why the men reported by the papers as elected to the Legislature, House or Senate, as being Cunningham men, are reported by the same papers, and also by their past records as being adverse to this very proposition.

Cunningham's Railroad Environment.

I challenge him to deny that a large part of his following has not at all times said that our demand for the Georgia freight rates and classification and laws to secure the same wa drastic and destructive, and how even his strongest friend, the Montgomery Advertiser, at all times opposed this accomplishment, denounced it as a radical rate move and destructive, and have opposed not only the election of the railroad commission by the people, but also the election of any officer favoring this idea. I will challenge him to explain how he could get these friends to carry any part of his declaration; and I will also declare to him that no man can be stronger than his friends, especially such friends as his leader, the Montgomery Advertiser.

I will also ask him to explain what experience he has had in freight rates, in the relation of business to freight rates, and the general connection of the people with these great franchised public carriers, their rules and their charges. I will ask him if all of his life he has not been in the practice of medicine, in the contract practice of medicine, that associated him with the convicts of the State; that he is without information or experience on these great problems that he now proposes to handle so easily.

A Glaring Inconsistency.

He has agreed with me that these great issues have been moved from the railroad commission to the Legislature. Why, then, do he and his friend, the Advertiser, insist that I, who they concede knows more about the relation of business to freight and the issue involved than any man in the State, should remain on the railroad commission when the fight has been transferred to the Legislature and State government? Has he not, by his own proposition, taken as it was from my dissenting opinion, advising the settlement of the issue by the Legislature, transferred me, on account of my superior knowledge of the whole matter from the commission to the State administration—the place where I can accomplish the most good for the people of Alabama?

Experience, Not Theory.

The Freight Rate Reformers, an association of which I have been a member for a long time, believe, and it comes from experience, not from theory, that if we can get the next Legislature to pass the present rate as the maximum rate that it will be the safety of the State against any higher rate for the future, and that the law cannot be enjoined by the railroads. We further believe that if the Legislature would take one hundred items of the most common manufacture, production, consumption and use, and establish on them by the Legislature the Georgia classification and rate, that while no doubt this would be enjoined by the railroads and fought through the courts, yet we are very confident that the courts would sustain the law. If any one will take one hundred items of common manufacture, production, consumption and use he will see that it will protect the business, farming, manufacturing, mining and consuming interests of Alabama, as it practically embraces everything of common manufacture, production and use. As stated, we believe further that there is dobut as to whether or not the courts would sustain this rate. We believe further that there is no doubt as to whether or not the courts will sustain the immediate putting in of the entire freight list on the Georgia classification and standard of rate. We believe that the risk is too great to attempt by direct statute, that we had better put in by the Legislature the present rate as the maximum and the one hundred items of common production, manufacture and use, as equalized on the Georgia basis, and leave the railroad commission, which is to be elected by the people, to carry out further reforms along this line. As stated, we believe that the attempt to establish the Georgia rate and classification as a maximum by the Legislature would endanger the whole proposition and set it back for years. The Legislature will hardly have time in its session of fifty days to formulate and adjust the classification rates and rate on three thousand items of freight, and Dr. Cunningham should know this. The whole matter will eventually go through the courts, and we had better advance by easier degrees than to attempt to cover the whole ground at once.

Cunningham Could Do Nothing.

In proposing the above we have followed the leadership of the great State of Missouri. We feel sure than our plan is feasible, the safest and the best, and we believe that Dr. Cunningham's plan, if plan it be, which has before this been pronounced by the Montgomery Advertiser and the larger part of his friends as drastic in the extreme, destructive all the way round and impossible, will be fought by his friends in the Legislature, and he would fail to accomplish anything whatever.

Will call his attention in this connection to his record as given out by himself. eH states that he voted for a railroad commission bill giving more power to the commission, as a member of the Legislature in 1881; that he voted for a similar measure in 1896; that he voted for it in 1903, and that he issued the "11:55 letter" in 1905. This "11:55 letter" was written to the railroad commission after he had been Governor eleven months, and a few minutes before he knew he would cease to be Governor, and yet it asserted that if the freight discrimination and extortionate freight rates against the State were true, he would call the Legislature together and remedy same. Outside of these simple votes and simple letter, I will ask him to show the people of Alabama where he has ever made a single motion, address, letter or speech until he became a candidate for Governor, either when in office or out of office. In those long years between 1881 and 1896, and from 1896 to 1903, and from 1903 to 1905, to relieve the people from these intolerable burdens and intolerable conditions he did absolutely nothing.

Cunningham Refused to Aid Us.

Will call his attention that he refused to aid us when he was a member of the constitutional convention; will call his attention that he refused to aid us when he was a candidate for Lieutenant Governor; will call his aattention that when Colonel Falkner, the political manager of the railroads, came to Birmingham, Jefferson and threw down the gauge of battle to the citizens of Jefferson county and the State of Alabama, and declared that the railroads were going to elect members to the Legislature that would be against the interest of the people on the great question as to whether or not the people of Alabama should have a right to vote on the election of the railroad commission by the people; and when he organized all the railroad environed men that he could and all the grafters that he could, and it is said, by the use of money and the exercise of threats, attempted to coerce the people of Jefferson county and the State of Alabama to vote against themselves on this great issue, he—Dr. Cunningham—did and said nothing.

No Protest Against Outrages.

There could not be a more vital issue in the interests of a free people than was impelled into Jefferson county at that time by the railroad power, and it was a straightout question of free government or railroad rule. Dr. Cunningham was a citizen of Jefferson county, was a candidate for the high office of Lieutenant-Governor of the State, and he did not open his mouth one time in solemn protest against that great iniquity. And on our direct request to him as to how he stood on the question of electing a railroad commission with power, when he was a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, he refused to answer. Nor has he at any time protested against, or recommended a remedy for, the great shame and outrage perpetrated in Alabama when the railroads by the free use of money, threats and grafters, and libel to the destruction of character, attempted to coerce and control the vote of Alabama to elect their candidate president of the railroad commission, which was a most dangerous proposition to the vital interests of the State. Notwithstand he does not now protest and never has protested nor has his leader, the Montgomery Advertiser, to whom, as I say, he plays the Mary's lamb act—against the railroads' evident attempt to control the next Legislature, which is in the highest sense undemocratic and the destruction of the people's rights and of free government, yet both of them continually protest against my advising and pleading with the people that this is their government, that the people and not the trusts should elect and control the Legislature and State administration. He and the Advertiser continually protest against my insistence that the people's laws are safe; that the trust's laws are dangerous; that the people should control the State administration throughout and sweep the railroads' agents and lobby out of our government. I charge that he does not declare in any speech the Democratic doctrine that the trusts under every circumstance should be controlled, their charges limited and their tax valuation adjusted; that the influence of these trusts should be banished from the policies and politics of the State and their agents left out of our active government.

Reflection on Common Sense.

He has openly stated that when he voted for this measure in 1903 that he did so against the interests of his political friends, and are not those same people his political friends today? And is it not a very dangerous proposition for the State for the citizens who sincerely expect reform in the rates and methods governing our business relations with the railroads and express companies to join in with such political friends and elect a Governor? Is not his "11:55 letter" to the railroad commission on the last day that he was acting Governor—stating that if the freight rate comparison on fertilizers that I had submitted to the commission, and which showed great discrimination against the people of Alabama was correct, that he would call the Legislature together and make a freight rate for the State, and his recent speeches claiming that this was the move of a great statesman, and charging me on account of my negligence to answer him in that matter and prosecute it before the Governor—is not his "11:45 letter" in the highest sense of the word a reflection on common sense, and simply shows what folly a man can commit in his own selfish supposed political interest. When that letter was received by the railroad commission he was no longer Governor, and it was an inane method to escape a responsibility, which he says existed.

The People Sustained Our Appeal.

Will further call Dr. Cunningham's attention that soon after the meeting of the last Legislature, at which meeting the railroad commission through our effort was made elective and given more power, that the Famers', Merchants', Manufacturers', Laborers' and Consumers' Association of the State, through Capt Frank S. White and myself, appealed to the railroad commission for the Georgia classification and standard of rates; that I made a six hours' speech before the railroad commission, the railroads' presidents, traffic managers and lawyers, submitting the comparisons of Alabama freight rates with the freight rates of Illinois, Iowa, North Carolina and Georgia, showing great discrimination and extortion by the same railroads, and the same class railroads, against the shippers of Alabama as soon as they crossed the Alabama line. Mr. W. D. Nesbitt, of the Farmers', Merchants', Manufacturers', Laborers and Consumers' Association, also made a speech showing a comparison of the local rates on cotton and domestics between the States of Texas, Georgia, South Carolina and Alabama, showing great discrimination against Alabama. We also submitted the history of those States, showing that their rates were put in over the protest of the rail roads; that these rates, after years of trial, had proven beneficial to both railroads and the States, and notwithstanding this evidence, the railroad commission of Alabama, composed of John V. Smith, president, W. T. Sanders and Wiley Tunstall, three railroad environed men, declined to give the people of Alabama any satisfactory relief. We appealed from their decision to the people of the State, and the people by an overwhelming majority, in the election of myself over John V. Smith, declared that our claim was right and sustained the appeal.

He Did Not! Why Would He?

Why did not Mr. Cunningham, after this election and after the people had spoken, because in Governor Jelks' absence he became Governor, assemble the Legislature and pass these freight measures for the relief of the people? He had all the freight comparisons, he knew all the facts or should have known them, and if he was Governor in the interest of the people, and wanted to do what he now says he will do, why did he not do it then, when he had the opportunity, and not wait until a few minutes before he went out of office, when he knew he could not do it, to say he would do it? This would have made, whether the Legislature acted with him or not, his record clear and shown to the people that he was with the people, instead of as now, suspicioned as playing politics. What greater reason should the people have to believe that he will do it, in the event he is ever elected Governor, than when he had the opportunity, and was Governor in fact, and neglected to do anything?

False Leaders and Advisers.

The Farmers', Merchants', Manufacturers', Laborers and Consumers' Association has advanced this vital issue step by step, frequently against great odds, always against the greatest power in the State or United States—the railroads—until it is now the paramount issue. The very people, whether as individuals or press, who have always fought us, always hindered and delayed us, now essay to become the leaders and advisers in this great issue—a most dangerous proposition. Quoting from an old text, "Unless the people have vision, they will perish."

The People Must Stand Firm.

The railroad, express, telegraph and telephone companies doing business perforce with everybody, alone of everybody, charge without competition their own price, and according to their own admission, what the traffic will stand. We ask nothing new or untried when we ask that their rates and rules of business and settlement be made commensurate with Georgia, North Carolina and Virginia, and that proper laws protecting the people be enacted. To secure this the people must stand firm. They should have the whole State government; any break would be weakness and dangerous. They cannot afford to take a chance.

NATIONAL GAME.

George Stone, of St. Louis, has been stinging the ball hard.

Pitcher Witherup, of Boston, stands six feet high and weighs 185 pounds.

Al Orth has been pitching remarkably fine ball for the Highlanders of late.

The New York Club has transferred outfielder Eddie Hahn to the Chicago Club.

President Ebbetts, of Brooklyn, now believes there should be legislation for more batting.

Congalton has replaced Jackson in the Cleveland outfield. Jackson has not been hitting.

In view of Frank Schulte's great work there is no regret in Chicago over Sebring's defection.

Both Lajoie and Wagner haye fallen off in batting this season. Who will be the new king of swat?

Walsh, of Chicago, is the only pitcher who has ever held Cleveland down to one hit in a nine-inning game.

The Cleveland boys are not as sure of that bunting as they were during the practice trip in the South.

Five Chicago Nationals are hitting over .300. They are Chance, Schulte, Steinfeldt, Kling and Reulbach.

Fred Parent has improved his fielding twenty-five per cent. over last season, playing speedy, up-to-date ball.

The poor hitting catchers in the American League are Kittredge, McGuire, Buelow, Spencer and Powers.

In the game at St. Louis May 10 Joe Tinker, of the Chicagos, stole home while the pitcher was delivering the ball.

If young Clarkson keeps coming he may some day acquire the skill and effectiveness of his famous brother, John.

The three S's are doing great work for Chicago. Sheckard, Schulte and Slagle make a fine trio of outfielders and hitters.

BALLADE OF THE BURIED PAST.

Where are the girls I used to know?
Tell me, has anyone seen fair Jane?
How I adored her—and Fan, and [illegible]!
(List to the throbbing of my refrain.)
Gone are the maidens, and gone the swains;
Gone are the summers, and also the falls.
I, only I, of the past remain.
What has become of the ping-pong balls?

Where are the vows of the long ago?
Where are the castles of sunny Spain?
Where are the gifts that the gods bestow?
(List to the throbbing of my refrain.)
Tell me, who welded the clanking chain
That bound romance to the yoke that galls?
Whose were the losses, and whose the gain?
What has become of the ping-pong balls?

Where is the holly and mistletoe?
Where is the laughter, the dry champagne?
Where are the bubbles that upward flew?
(List to the throbbing of my refrain.)
Where are the poems that seared the brain?
Where is the handwriting on the walls?
Pray, where is Abel, and where is Cain?
What has become of the ping-pong balls?

ENVOY.

Prince, may my pleading not be vain.
(List to the throbbing of my refrain.)
Tell me, I pray you—the thought appals—
What has become of the ping-pong balls?

An Impartial Judge.

On one occasion, having heard a certain famous suit, the late Judge F. M. Tuley, of Chicago, found himself impelled to hand down a decision repugnant to his own inclination.

"Do you mean you think the defendant was not at heart a swindler?" demanded an intimate friend, who dared complain of the finding.

"Billy," said Judge Tuley, solemnly, "I took that evidence to Arkansas with me and studied it two weeks. Then I brought it home and spent ten days more on it. Then I said in my decision:

"'So far as the evidence shows, the defendant is an upright and honorable Christian gentleman.'

"'So far as the evidence shows,'" repeated the jurist, slowly and with emphasis. Then he leaned forward in his chair, placed a hand on the other's knee, and exclaimed, with an air of vindication:

"But, Billy, I didn't say I believed it!"

Strange Pledges.

London pawnbrokers are frequently asked to take strange things in pawn. The other day a Holborn pawnbroker lent $100 on a fine horse, which one of his daughters rode until it was redeemed. The same pawnbroker once took in pledge a medical chest of poisons that were strong enough to kill 10,000 men. It was, however, a valuable deposit, as some of the poisons were very rare. J. M. MORGAN.

IN announcing as a candidate for re-election, Sheriff Morgan does so with the knowledge that he has made Chilton county a capable and effective officer, one who has fearlessly and conscientiously done his duty in all particulars. Polite and courteous to all, he carries out the duties of his office in a thorough manner, showing partiality to none. For many years he has been a valued citizen of this county, and since his appointment to the office of Sheriff has been unsparing in his efforts to uphold the law. He asks the support of the voters of the county, in the belief that they realize the importance of a cool and impartial sheriff, and hopes they will nominate him by a handsome majority.

LIKE a bolt from a clear sky, most unexpectedly comes the announcement of Congressman Bowie that he will not be a candidate for re-election. With an unopposed nomination confronting him, and his election a moral certainty, he declines to run, asserting that, in the interests of his family, it is time for him to return to the practice of law, having already given six of the best years of his life to the service of the public. He has entered into partnership with E. H. Cabaniss, of Birmingham, and will make his home in that city at the expiration of his present term.

Mr. Bowie has made an excellent representative of this district, devoting himself to the best interests of his constituents, and we do not ask for a better representative, only give us one as good. A number of names of possible candidates are being mentioned, and doubtless from among them a good man will be selected.

The Fourth district, composed of the counties of Calhoun, Clebourne, Talladega, Shelby, Chilton and Dallas, is well supplied with men of ability, and among the names mentioned as possible candidates are H. D. Merrill, of Calhoun; C. C. Whitson and T. S. Plowman, of Talladega; Bradford Brown of Shelby; Tipton Mullins, of Chilton; W. W. Quarles and H. S. D. Mallory, of Dallas.

Chilton has never yet furnished a congressman, and we are of the opinion that if Mr. Tipton Mullins will allow himself to become a candidate, there is reason to believe that the district would unite upon him and elect him.

There will be even more writers than usual in Indiana next month, the occasion being the twenty-first convention of the National Editorial Association at Indianapolis, which will bring together newspaper publishers and editors from all parts of the country. Indianapolis is the home of at least a regiment or two of the vast army of Indiana authors, editors, playrights, poets, etc., and it is expected that the Hoosier literati will do their share in contributing to the entertainment of the newspaper men.

Indianapolis is the fifth largest publishing city in the United States, and is making as rapid strides in this line as in any other. This fact should lend an added interest in the National Editorial Convention to the hundreds of editors who will convene there June 12th, as well as interesting those who have not known of Indianapolis' commanding position in the publication world.

CIRCUIT COURT.

Court adjourned Friday evening, the Grand Jury making the following report:

REPORT OF GRAND JURY.

To Hon. S. L. Brewer,
Judge of the Fifth Judicial Circuit of Alabama:

We, the Grand Jury empanelled for the Spring Term, 1906, of the Circuit Court of Chilton County, beg leave to submit this, our final report.

We have investigated a very large number of cases, and as a result of this investigation have returned into your Honor's court 44 indictments. As a further result of the above investigation we find that a large majority of the violations of the law in this county are directly attributable to the illegal sale of liquor. In a number of towns and communities in this county we are convinced that the sale of whiskey is carried on to a shameful extent. We have found it very difficult to secure evidence in connection with this class of crime, and we respectfully urge the good citizens of this county to assist future Grand Juries in the suppression of the sale of liquor, which we again repeat is the direct cause of a majority of the crime committed in the county, and we may add that but for the sale of whiskey our county would not have such heavy criminal dockets.

From reports made to this body we find the public roads in fair condition, but desire to urge the proper officers to use all efforts to improve the same.

We have examined the several bonds of our county officers and are satisfied that the same are good and sufficient.

We have examined the books and records of the several county officers as best we could in the limited time at our command, and as far as we can determine they are correctly and neatly kept especially those of the County Supt. of Education.

We find from the report of the County Treasurer that there is a cash balance on hand of $4,449.52; this report or statement is hereto attached and made a part of this report.

The committee from this body appointed to visit and investigate the County Poor House, report that they find the bedding of the inmates in very bad condition, that new springs are needed, and that the beds should be made more comfortable; that the floors should be cleaned oftener than just prior to the meeting of the Grand Jury, and that some effort should be made to get rid of bed bugs.

We regret to see so large an amount of land advertised for sale for taxes. We have made inquiry into this matter, and find the cause is brought about by the failure to assess the lands owned by taxpayers. Whether the taxpayer failed to furnish the Tax Assessor with the correct description of his lands, or the Assessor failed to copy the description furnished, we are unable to say; we are convinced however that our present Tax Assessor has used every means at his command to correctly assess land from the information furnished to him.

We find that our County Tax officers, in connection with the Court of County Commissioners, have discharged their duty, and we would suggest that in the future, where taxpayers are not familiar with the numbers of their land, that they carry their deeds to the Tax Assessor and avoid trouble.

It is with pleasure that we congratulate our Commissioners upon the improvements in the County Court House and Jail. We now have a jail in which prisoners may be confined without detriment to their health, and we have a court house in which there is ample space not only for the county officers but also for the use of our courts. We would, however, suggest to our Court of County Commissioners that they take such steps as will result in the court house being properly lighted.

We beg to say that in connection with our examination of the offices of the Circuit Clerk and Sheriff, we find that executions in State cases have been issued by the Clerk for $625, and that only the sum of $110 has been collected, as shown by returns made to the Clerk. Our Sheriff informs us that these amounts were promised him by responsible parties who failed to make the expected payments. We are sure no loss will be sustained by the State or county, but would suggest that in the future the Sheriff insist upon the prompt payment of all executions placed in his hands for the use of the State or county.

We desire to thank your Honor for the able charge given us, and by following which we have been able to more fully discharge our duty. We also desire to thank our able Solicitor for the assistance so kindly tendered, and our Bailiff for the promptness for which he has discharged his duty.

Having now completed our duties we respectfully beg to be discharged.

Respectfully submitted,
W. A. REYNOLDS, Foreman.

To the Hon. Solicitor and Gentlemen of the Grand Jury:

Gentlemen: I beg to report to your honorable body that I have cash on hard to the credit of the following funds:

KRUMP ON HIS TRAVELS.

Talking about politics, this town is full of "Publicans and sinners." "Pops." were no where to be found, except those that came in on the Baptist train. After I got through looking over the Chattanooga Wagon Factory, Mr. Milburn, its president, asked me how I would like to vote for "Teddy" for third term. I told him "Teddy" was a very clever fellow, but he did not like white folks well enough for me.

I took in all the factories I could while in this wonderful city and would like to tell you about it, but statistics are always dry to me, but if I did not tell you a few you might get offended, so here goes: 1764-5 factories; 451⅜ articles manufactured; 12,225½ persons employed in the factories; 27 per cent colored (most all of them Baptists) the balance, 73 per cent, are divided up among the churches in all kinds of per cents that I did not have time to figure out; but I run up on one live thing I did not figure out and that was a Chilton county boy, and his name was Joe Johnson. I thought I would drop in on him at 5½ East Eight Street, and see how he would look in a city like Chattanooga. Joe was glad to see me, he said, and of course I was glad Joe was glad, and the next thing he wanted was to drive me around the city. I said Joe, my life is insured and will, all fixed up by your brother-in-law, Tip. Mullins, down in Alabama, but I am in no hurry to draw, and you young fellows generally drive these fool horses that stand first on one end and then the other, and though I have not seen your "turn out" to know it, yet I'll bet two bits that fool team I saw down there in the street at the bottom of the stairs, with that big nigger sitting up on the box with those yellow buckskin gauntlets, is your team; I'll bet two bits, Joe, its yours. Joe looked sideways out of one eye down through the window, and said with a regular diplomat's smile, let's go down and see. Well, I was persuaded to get into that turn out because Joe smiled so good natured and looked just like there would be no harm in a fellow getting killed by a thousand dollar team. Then again my imagination got on fire and I could see in tomorrow's Chattanooga Times, a paragraph something like this:

"Dr. J. W. Johnson, the widely known physician of this city, and with a national reputation too, while driving out a visitor friend, Hon. Krump Korner, from the State of Alabama, happened to a serious catastrophe. His driver lost control of his thousand dollar pair of Arabian steeds and they ran against a street car, demolishing the magnificent coach that cost the Doctor $750, seriously injuring the Doctor, who will be laid up for two weeks in hospital, instantly killing Hon. Krump Korner, and his remains will be shipped to his bereaved family in Alabama this morning. The negro driver being the only fortunate occupant of the carriage, he having landed on his head and escaped unhurt."

Now, who would mind dying if he could get a thing like that in the papers next day. So I said here goes, Joe, but I know a woman in Alabama who would be praying if she knew this, and I guess she is anyway on general principles when I am off from home. Well, they changed ends two or three times, and two or three policemen and the driver finally got the pair started and we had a fine drive, and put me in the notion of being a millionaire or a doctor, they are about the same thing, you know. Joe bowed to the ladies on the porches along Millionaire avenue, and I bowed too, like an old fool, but as I was in the carriage with Dr. Joe they bowed and smiled twice, one for Dr. Joe and one for me too, I suppose. But I tell you Joe is alright. Though he is at the top of the ladder, president of the medical society, director in the medical department of the Volunteer Life Insurance Co., and stands 'way up yonder in all particulars, he won't forget his old time friends. He took me around to his club—but my, my, this is enough for this time; my space is out, and if Bro. Crichton will print it, I will finish about the convention what up to date I have not gotten to.

Yours truly,
KRUMP KORNER.

TAX SALE.

The sale of land for taxes will be found on page 2, "Owner Unknown" being largely in the majority.

J. M. MORGAN.

IN announcing as a candidate for re-election, Sheriff Morgan does so with the knowledge that he has made Chilton county a capable and effective officer, one who has fearlessly and conscientiously done his duty in all particulars. Polite and courteous to all, he carries out the duties of his office in a thorough manner, showing partiality to none. For many years he has been a valued citizen of this county, and since his appointment to the office of Sheriff has been unsparing in his efforts to uphold the law. He asks the support of the voters of the county, in the belief that they realize the importance of a cool and impartial sheriff, and hopes they will nominate him by a handsome majority.

LIKE a bolt from a clear sky, most unexpectedly comes the announcement of Congressman Bowie that he will not be a candidate for re-election. With an unopposed nomination confronting him, and his election a moral certainty, he declines to run, asserting that, in the interests of his family, it is time for him to return to the practice of law, having already given six of the best years of his life to the service of the public. He has entered into partnership with E. H. Cabaniss, of Birmingham, and will make his home in that city at the expiration of his present term.

Mr. Bowie has made an excellent representative of this district, devoting himself to the best interests of his constituents, and we do not ask for a better representative, only give us one as good. A number of names of possible candidates are being mentioned, and doubtless from among them a good man will be selected.

The Fourth district, composed of the counties of Calhoun, Clebourne, Talladega, Shelby, Chilton and Dallas, is well supplied with men of ability, and among the names mentioned as possible candidates are H. D. Merrill, of Calhoun; C. C. Whitson and T. S. Plowman, of Talladega; Bradford Brown of Shelby; Tipton Mullins, of Chilton; W. W. Quarles and H. S. D. Mallory, of Dallas.

Chilton has never yet furnished a congressman, and we are of the opinion that if Mr. Tipton Mullins will allow himself to become a candidate, there is reason to believe that the district would unite upon him and elect him.

There will be even more writers than usual in Indiana next month, the occasion being the twenty-first convention of the National Editorial Association at Indianapolis, which will bring together newspaper publishers and editors from all parts of the country. Indianapolis is the home of at least a regiment or two of the vast army of Indiana authors, editors, playrights, poets, etc., and it is expected that the Hoosier literati will do their share in contributing to the entertainment of the newspaper men.

Indianapolis is the fifth largest publishing city in the United States, and is making as rapid strides in this line as in any other. This fact should lend an added interest in the National Editorial Convention to the hundreds of editors who will convene there June 12th, as well as interesting those who have not known of Indianapolis' commanding position in the publication world.

CIRCUIT COURT.

Court adjourned Friday evening, the Grand Jury making the following report:

REPORT OF GRAND JURY.

To Hon. S. L. Brewer,
Judge of the Fifth Judicial Circuit of Alabama:

We, the Grand Jury empanelled for the Spring Term, 1906, of the Circuit Court of Chilton County, beg leave to submit this, our final report.

We have investigated a very large number of cases, and as a result of this investigation have returned into your Honor's court 44 indictments. As a further result of the above investigation we find that a large majority of the violations of the law in this county are directly attributable to the illegal sale of liquor. In a number of towns and communities in this county we are convinced that the sale of whiskey is carried on to a shameful extent. We have found it very difficult to secure evidence in connection with this class of crime, and we respectfully urge the good citizens of this county to assist future Grand Juries in the suppression of the sale of liquor, which we again repeat is the direct cause of a majority of the crime committed in the county, and we may add that but for the sale of whiskey our county would not have such heavy criminal dockets.

From reports made to this body we find the public roads in fair condition, but desire to urge the proper officers to use all efforts to improve the same.

We have examined the several bonds of our county officers and are satisfied that the same are good and sufficient.

We have examined the books and records of the several, county officers as best we could in the limited time at our command, and as far as we can determine they are correctly and neatly kept especially those of the County Supt. of Education.

We find from the report of the County Treasurer that there is a cash balance on hand of $4,449.52; this report or statement is hereto attached and made a part of this report.

The committee from this body appointed to visit and investigate the County Poor House, report that they find the bedding of the inmates in very bad condition, that new springs are needed, and that the beds should be made more comfortable; that the floors should be cleaned oftener than just prior to the meeting of the Grand Jury, and that some effort should be made to get rid of bed bugs.

We regret to see so large an amount of land advertised for sale for taxes. We have made inquiry into this matter, and find the cause is brought about by the failure to assess the lands owned by taxpayers. Whether the taxpayer failed to furnish the Tax Assessor with the correct description of his lands, or the Assessor failed to copy the description furnished, we are unable to say; we are convinced however that our present Tax Assessor has used every means at his command to correctly assess land from the information furnished to him.

We find that our County Tax officers, in connection with the Court of County Commissioners, have discharged their duty, and we would suggest that in the future, where taxpayers are not familiar with the numbers of their land, that they carry their deeds to the Tax Assessor and avoid trouble.

It is with pleasure that we congratulate our Commissioners upon the improvements in the County Court House and Jail. We now have a jail in which prisoners may be confined without detriment to their health, and we have a court house in which there is ample space not only for the county officers but also for the use of our courts. We would, however, suggest to our Court of County Commissioners that they take such steps as will result in the court house being properly lighted.

We beg to say that in connection with our examination of the offices of the Circuit Clerk and Sheriff, we find that executions in State cases have been issued by the Clerk for $625, and that only the sum of $110 has been collected, as shown by returns made to the Clerk, Our Sheriff informs us that these amounts were promised him by responsible parties who failed to make the expected payments. We are sure no loss will be sustained by the State or county, but would suggest that in the future the Sheriff insist upon the prompt payment of all executions placed in his hands for the use of the State or county.

We desire to thank your Honor for the able charge given us, and by following which we have been able to more fully discharge our duty. We also desire to thank our able Solicitor for the assistance so kindly rendered, and our Bailiff for the promptness for which he has discharged his duty.

Having now completed our duties we respectfully beg to be discharged.

Respectfully submitted,
W. A. REYNOLDS, Foreman.

To the Hon. Solicitor and Gentlemen of the Grand Jury:

Gentlemen: I beg to report to your honorable body that I have cash on hand to the credit of the following funds:

May 15, 1906. To cash on hand

General Fund	$4,347.37
Fine & Forfeiture	55 43
Redemption of Land	46.72
Total	$4,449.52

I, W. T. Callen, Treasurer Chilton county, Ala., do hereby certify that the above is a true and correct statement of the finances of Chilton county, as appears from my books.

Respectfully submitted,
W. T. CALLEN, Treasurer.
Clanton, Ala., May 15, 1906.

KRUMP ON HIS TRAVELS

Talking about politics, this town is full of "Publicans and sinners." "Pops." were no where to be found, except those that came in on the Baptist train. After I got through looking over the Chattanooga Wagon Factory, Mr. Milburn, its president, asked me how I would like to vote for "Teddy" for third term. I told him "Teddy" was a very clever fellow, but he did not like white folks well enough for me.

I took in all the factories I could while in this wonderful city and would like to tell you about it, but statistics are always dry to me, but if I did not tell you a few you might get offended, so here goes: 176 4-5 factories; 451⅛ articles manufactured; 12,225¼ persons employed in the factories; 27 per cent colored (most all of them Baptists) the balance, 73 per cent, are divided up among the churches in all kinds of per cents that I did not have time to figure out; but I run up on one live thing I did not figure out and that was a Chilton county boy, and his name was Joe Johnson. I thought I would drop in on him at 5½ East Eight Street, and see how he would look in a city like Chattanooga. Joe was glad to see me, he said, and of course I was glad Joe was glad, and the next thing he wanted was to drive me around the city. I said Joe, my life is insured and will, all fixed up by your brother-in-law, Tip. Mullins, down in Alabama, but I am in no hurry to draw, and you young fellows generally drive these fool horses that stand first on one end and then the other, and though I have not seen your "turn out" to know it, yet I'll bet two bits that fool team I saw down there in the street at the bottom of the stairs, with that big nigger sitting up on the box with those yellow buckskin gauntlets, is your team; I'll bet two bits, Joe, its yours. Joe looked sideways out of one eye down through the window, and said with a regular diplomat's smile, let's go down and see. Well, I was persuaded to get into that turn out because Joe smiled so good natured and looked just like there would be no harm in a fellow getting killed by a thousand dollar team. Then again my imagination got on fire and I could see in tomorrow's Chattanooga Times, a paragraph something like this:

"Dr. J. W. Johnson, the widely known physician of this city, and with a national reputation too, while driving out a visitor friend, Hon. Krump Korner, from the State of Alabama, happened to a serious catastrophe. His driver lost control of his thousand dollar pair of Arabian steeds and they ran against a street car, demolishing the magnificent coach that cost the Doctor $750, seriously injuring the Doctor, who will be laid up for two weeks in hospital, instantly killing Hon. Krump Korner, and his remains will be shipped to his bereaved family in Alabama this morning. The negro driver being the only fortunate occupant of the carriage, he having landed on his head and escaped unhurt."

Now, who would mind dying if he could get a thing like that in the papers next day. So I said here goes, Joe, but I know a woman in Alabama who would be praying if she knew this, and I guess she is anyway on general principles when I am off from home. Well, they changed ends two or three times, and two or three policemen and the driver finally got the pair started and we had a fine drive, and put me in the notion of being a millionaire or a doctor, they are about the same thing, you know. Joe bowed to the ladies on the porches along Millionaire avenue, and I bowed too, like an old fool, but as I was in the carriage with Dr. Joe they bowed and smiled twice, one for Dr. Joe and one for me too, I suppose. But I tell you Joe is alright. Though he is at the top of the ladder, president of the medical society, director in the medical department of the Volunteer Life Insurance Co., and stands 'way up yonder in all particulars, he won't forget his old time friends. He took me around to his club—but my, my, this is enough for this time; my space is out, and if Bro. Crichton will print it, I will finish about the convention what up to date I have not gotten to.

Yours truly,
KRUMP KORNER.

Macedonia.

Well, Mr. Editor, if you will give the Wondering Boy a small space in your paper he will come one more time speaking something of God's wonderful world all around our community. things essential and things non essential Right here I have set and wondered all of my life why it was that there was a class of people who would sit still and be governed by some other class. Now, Mr. Editor, mind you I am not looking at the beam that is in the other fellow's eye but am trying to get the mote out of our own eyes. By so doing we will ask the Lord to be with us while we wonder about the things that we are going to speak about just now. Why is it dear reader that we have only one class of people to worship God together, (now then I may strike someone pretty heavy, but remember I am a wondering boy and will have to learn a heap) and when we come to our worldly affairs will ask the devil to help us out. Right here, as some have said before in our God loved country, we have had so much trouble all of our lives about our schools and are now. We go and hire a teacher to teach our children and behold, our surrounding districts crowd in and crowd our children out and if we get any benefit from the school will have to have an assistant teacher, yes, and pay the money out of our own pockets to school somebody else's children. I wonder if this is right. Why no, I shouldn't think so, it is all we can do to work and educate our own children besides having to do the same for some one else. That is why today I have barely got education enough to read and write, and if I had not have taken my school at home I doubt very much whether I would ever have learned to write my name. It is no new thing, it has been going on for a long time and is still going on.

I hope the dear people who have been doing wrong so long will take to wondering and will quit and not do us that way any more.

The health of our community is very good. Everybody is getting along well with their work.

With many kind wishes to the Editor, Banner and its many readers. The Wondering Boy.

A good complexion is impossible with the stomach out of order. If pasty sallow people would pay more attention to their stomachs and less to the skin on their faces, they would have better complexions. KODOL FOR DYSPEPSIA will digest what you eat and put your stomach back in right shape to do its own work. Kodol relieves palpitation of the heart, flatulence, sour stomach, heart burn, etc. Sold by Upchurch Drug co

Macedonia May 12, 1906

Editor Banner—Will you please allow me space in your valuable paper for a few lines from this place in regard to the way things are going on in our part of the county. Seeing some letters from this place, not knowing who they were from, one against Uncle and the other for him, we don't say which one was right. I think our church is doing very well now, we have good preaching and a good Sunday school and some good church members and some not so good, and a good Farmers' Union and I don't know how many more good thing But the tide will turn some day with bad things we are hindered, slandered, troubled, misrepresented and lied about. Bad men make false statements, good men believe them; and you find yourself condemned, unheard and cast out and scorned and if you defend yourself you will be counted quarrelsome, and if you expose the hypocricy of your assilants they will put on the garb of injured innocence, and claim to be persecuted for righteousness sake and you will find your last state worse than the first. What can you do? Rest in the Lord Do not try to compete with Satan or his; wait on the Lord; let liars lie; let slanderers slander; let men have plenty of rope and they are quite likely to hang themselves. The men who wrong you today will wrong some one else tomorrow, and sometimes their evil deeds will come to light: The men who wrongly accuse you now will be accused themselves by and by and will have plenty to do defending themselves without troubling or hounding you. The men who have believed lies and acted upon them will by and by find that their turn has come and the venomous tongue which has stung others will turn and sting them and compell them to speak in their own defense.

Do not fret, the tide will turn; men will find out who lies and who tells the truth. The tide will turn, if not now, by and by; if not here, hereafter; if not in time, then in eternity. And we shall see that all things work together for good for those who love the Lord Men who are right can afford to wait; men who are to live forever need be in no hurry; men who have God for their friend not not fear what man can do unto them. Wait on the Lord; keep his way; trust in Him at all times, He will never forsake you, and by and by the tide will turn and right will flourish, and wrong will fail and die.

With good wishes to the dear old Banner and its many readers.

Paint! Paint!

Now is the time to give your house a new coat of paint, and we have the paint that will wear well and please you.

Our Sun Proof has proven to be what we claim for it, a thoroughly good paint. The handsome school house in Clanton is painted with it; the new two-story hotel belonging to Mr. W. M. Wilson, will be an attractive building indeed when Mr. R. J. Lake finishes it with a few coats of Sun Proof Paint. The Capitol of Alabama is also painted with Sun Proof, just recently finished, and if this paint was not good it would not be used on the above buildings.

The old reliable Hammar Paint is too well known throughout the county to need further praise, has been sold in Clanton eight or ten years. So let us furnish you the paint you may need from time to time, will appreciate your trade.

BEAUTY MORE THAN SKIN DEEP.

A Good Complexion Must Come From Within

The natural desire of every ambitious woman is to have a clear skin and a beautiful complexion. Not every woman can be a Diana or Juno, but the beauty of freshness and the bloom of a clear skin are within the reach of every woman who will make the effort

It is all a matter of intelligent trying. If the bowels are inactive, if the liver is not working properly, if the poisonous waste and refuse are not expelled promptly from the system the complexion is sure to show the effects.

The only right way to remove pimples, moth spots and blotches and clear up a muddy, cloudy complexion is to go right to the root of the trouble with the proper remedy.

The one remedy that will cure constipation, improve the complexion, brighten the eyes, tone up the liver, cure sick headache and insure a clear, velvety skin is Laxakola Tonic Tablets.

To inspire confidence, and to protect both you and the druggist, we have issued a Guarantee Contract to Florence Drug co., authorizing them to pay back the 25 cents if the tablets do not benefit you as claimed.

HERBINE

The Popular Liver Medicine Will Keep You Well

A GUARANTEED CURE for all diseases produced by TORPID LIVER and IMPURE BLOOD. Do not fill your system with Arsenic, Calomel and Quinine. They act as rank poisons which vitiate the blood, debilitate the system, and leave a trail of bad symptoms which require years to obliterate. HERBINE is purely vegetable and contains no mineral or narcotic poisons, is absolutely harmless and is the simple remedy of nature. It carries off all poison in the system and leaves no injurious effects.

CURED BY HERBINE AFTER OTHER REMEDIES FAILED

Mr. L. A. Hicks, Iredell, Texas, says: "I was sick in bed for eight months with liver trouble, the doctor seemed to do me no good. I was told to try Herbine, and it cured me in a short time. I cannot recommend this wonderful medicine too highly."

HABITS OF THE HOUSE FLY.

Harold Somers, H. A. Tells Whence He Comes, Whither He Goes.

The common house fly (Musca Domestica) is a creature of such secretive habits, that although from the very earliest times he has been with us, and the most ancient writers have mentioned and described him, still very little was known of his origin and history.

It remained for the eminent Boston biologist, Dr. A. S. Packard, in 1873, to make known his origin, habits and transformations from the egg through the larva state with its two changes to the pupa state, then to the perfect fly.

Near the first of August the female lays about 120 eggs of a dull gray color, selecting fresh horse manure in which to deposit her eggs, and so secretes them that they are rarely seen; it takes only twenty-four hours for them to hatch into the first form of larva, a white worm one-quarter of an inch in length and one-tenth in diameter. They feed on the decaying matter of their environment, and two changes or casting of skins occur before they turn into the pupa state; this change comes very suddenly. The entire period from the egg to the pupa state is from three to four days. If moist food is wanting when in this condition they will eat each other and thus decrease their number. Heat and humidity greatly assist their development, as upon careful computation each pound of manure around stables and outhouses develops, under favorable conditions over one thousand flies. It is no wonder that where these conditions exist, we have such a veritable harvest of the fly pest.

In the pupa state when the fly is about to emerge, the end of the pupa case splits off, making a hole through which the fly pushes a portion of its head; but here it seems to encounter a difficulty; the pupa case is too stiff and hard to pass through, but nature comes to its assistance, and a sort of bladder like substance forms behind the head, which swells out apparently filled with air; it acts as a means of pushing away the pupa case and releases the fly. When the fly first emerges it runs around with its wings soft, small and baggy; it is pale and the colors are not set; its head rapidly expands and the bladder formation passes away—within a few hours the wings grow and harden, it is now a perfect fly.

The whole time from the depositing of the egg to the perfect fly is not over ten days in duration. Many persons who observe small flies in midsummer suppose they are the young, but such is not the case, they are flies that are imperfectly nourished in the larvae and pupae states, and do not attain full size, in fact, they are the dwarfs of their race. The male fly differs from the female in the front of the head between the eyes, being at least one-third narrower, though in size the female is rather smaller.

In the pupa state they are often fed upon by the larvae of some of the beetles, notably that of the carpet beetle, whose pupa, the dreaded buffalo "moth," will attack the young fly in the pupa case and eating it possess the case for itself.

Adult flies, like most other creatures, have parasites of minute size that prey upon them; these can often be seen as presenting small red specks over the body of the fly.

Another enemy in the form of a fungus often attacks the fly in the early autumn. This makes its appearance as a white swelling and the white spores of the disease can be seen penetrating the body of the fly, which it finally distends and ruptures.

The fly hibernates in winter, but with his usual secretive habit, it is very difficult to find him in his winter quarters. With the first chill of autumn the flies feeling the cold, seek temporary warmth in houses, and clustering together form bunches in the corners of walls and other places. They are then sluggish and not so active as in the warm weather. However, they do not make a permanent stay indoors, but on the first mild, sunny day, seek the windows to get out and find their permanent winter hiding place; many prefer to make their homes in the roots of grass on lawns where they hide themselves so effectually that the ice and snow of winter does not destroy them in their hibernating state. If in the first warm days of spring when the snow is gone and the grass on the lawns becomes dry and warm, long before the yellow dandelion shows its head, a close observer may see numbers of flies crawling up on the grass to get the welcome sunshine, their wings standing out stiff and useless; but they soon acquire the power of flight in the warm rays of the sun. A great many days, however, elapse before they appear in the homes of men, where they are such unwelcome visitors.

In recent years, the medical profession have demonstrated that while the fly itself does not propagate disease, it is one of the most industrious carriers of disease germs which by contact adhere to his feet, hairy legs and body, distributing them to innocent victims.

If every house-keeper could know all these interesting facts which have never before been brought to their attention, they would realize the importance of securing the very best fly exterminator.

Voracious Vultures.

Hungry vultures have attacked men and women in the Valley of Couchs, canton of Valais; a bull was so seriously injured in a fight with them that it had to be killed.

Cheapening the Doctors.

Women are to be admitted to be doctors of medicine by the University of Prague, which, however, refuses to admit them as doctors of philosophy.

Jefferson's Ten Maxims.

1. Never put off till tomorrow what you can do today.

2. Never trouble another for what you can do yourself.

3. Never spend your money before you have it.

4. Never buy what you do not want because it is cheap; it will be dear to you.

5. Pride costs us more than hunger, thirst and cold.

6. We never repent of having eaten too little.

7. Nothing is troublesome that we do willingly.

8. How much pain have cost us the evils which have never happened?

9. Take things always by their smooth handle.

10. When angry count ten before you speak; if very angry, a hundred.

West Indian Cotton.

Cotton cultivation is proving a great success in the British West Indies, according to the commissioner of agriculture for those colonies, the volume and quality of the product being extremely satisfactory. The bales exported in 1905 were 3,964, against 2,546 in 1904, the sea island variety bringing 25 cents a pound and the more ordinary quality 12 cents. The value of the crop was $316,500, though the industry is but four years old. The crop of the present year is still better, and the Barbadoes shipments have brought 33 cents a pound. Applications for seed are being received from Cuba and the United States, in view of the superior quality of the West Indian cotton. It is said to excell our sea island variety.

Dried Milk.

Australia has adopted the system of drying milk, which is said to have been very successful in London, England. The milk is dried between steam rolls and sold as a powder, from which nothing but water has been extracted, and to which nothing but water requires to be added to make wholesome, clean and sterile milk. A leading medical officer is reported to have said that the adoption of dried milk at some of the asylums for consumptive patients and in general hospitals has proved a success.

Postman's Long Walk.

William Thomas, rural postman from Minsterley to Bog Mines, has just retired, after thirty-three years' continuous service. It is estimated that during his career he has walked a total distance of 165,000 miles, which is nearly seven times around the world. Thomas has his six good conduct stripes and is entitled to the imperial service medal.

The world's cocoa crop amounted to 146,552 tons in 1904, or 16 per cent over that of 1903, according to figures just published by the German Cocoa Trade Journal. The United States led the world in cocoa consumption, using 33,159 tons; Germany following with 27,101 tons, France with 21,799, the United Kingdom with 20,552 and the Netherlands with 21,124 tons. Switzerland, using 6,839 tons, leads the remaining countries. Italy consumed only 479 tons in 1904.

BABY'S AWFUL HUMOR.

Thin Skin Formed Over Body and Under It Was Watery Blood—Cured in One Week by Cuticura Remedies.

"When my little girl baby was one week old she had a skin disease. A thin skin formed over her body and under it was watery blood, and when she was washed it would burst and break. She was in that condition for weeks, and I tried everything I could think of, but nothing did her any good. When she was three months old I took her to San Antonio to see a doctor, but the doctor we wanted to see was not at home, so my sister gave me a cake of Cuticura Soap and half a box of Cuticura Ointment, and told me to use them, which I did in time. I used them three times, and the humor began to fade, and in one week she was sound and well, and it has never returned since. I think every mother should keep the Cuticura Remedies in the house. Mrs. H. Aaron, Benton, Texas, July 3, 1905."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

A Word for Canada.

In boasting of the commercial prosperity of the United States we are apt to overlook the great prosperity of Canada, as disclosed by its trade statistics. During the first seven months of the current fiscal year the aggregate of our exports and imports shows a total of $1,752,338,434. Estimating our population at 80,000,000, this indicates a per capita of $32 which is regarded as an index of great prosperity. But a similar calculation as to Canada will show a still greater degree of commercial and industrial thrift. The exports and imports of that country, with its population of 6,000,000, for the same period were $307,000,000, which is in the ratio of $51 per capita.

The Unabashed Horse.

The horse refuses to go, and his value has advanced. On January 1, 1897, there were 14,364,000 horses in this country. On the first day of 1906 there were 18,718,000. In nine years there has been an increase of 30 per cent. The gain in the number of mules has been great, but not so large. In 1897 there were 2,215,000. This year, notwithstanding the heavy purchases made by the British government during the Boer war, there are 3,400,000.

Forecasting Great Floods.

Early in 1897 telegrams were posted in a hundred cities along the Mississippi, warning the inhabitants to prepare for tremendous floods, writes John Elfreth Watkins in Technical World Magazine for May.

These warnings went so far as to name the exact date—sometimes two or three weeks off—when the coming flood would be at its height, and even stated the number of feet above low water mark which the water would reach. They were signed by the chief of the weather bureau at Washington.

The inhabitants of Cairo, of New Orleans and of the towns and cities between read these sensational messages, looked out at the shrunken Father of Waters flowing calmly along within his banks, and sniffed contemptuously. They were not going to be scared by a lot of fool scientists in Washington. Only a comparatively few timid people were at all alarmed or even impressed. These went so far as to move their valuable property up onto high ground, and were well laughed at for their pains. Even the newspapers took the matter up, and scolded the government for allowing the weather bureau to frighten needlessly a lot of silly old women.

Finally the date set for the coming of the flood arrived, and with it came the water. The greatest flood for more than half a century swept down the Mississippi and overflowed more than 13,000 square miles of land. The main streets of a hundred towns and cities were under water, and at some points practically the only property not damaged was that of the ridiculed people who had heeded the despised warning of the weather bureau. An it was estimated that property to the value of $15,000,000 was saved, which would certainly have been destroyed but for the advance notice which its owners had been wise enough to heed.

Pigeon Races With Train.

The passengers on the mail train from Moorehead City due here in the morning are greatly interested in the peculiar conduct of a pigeon, which is owned by a man in Wildwood, and engages the train in a race from Wildwood to Havelock every morning, a distance of fifteen miles.

The bird apparently watches for the approach of the train and flies along with it, sometimes ahead of it, but it never fails to accompany the train. It flies so near the cars that passengers can almost touch it.

When the train stops at Newport the bird perches near by and waits for it to start, then returns to its home, evidently with the impression on its little brain that it has discharged some duty.

The pigeon is handsome, being white with a black head. No other bird seems to take this freak, nor does this one attach itself to any other train, and the wonder grows how the bird appears to prefer this train to any other. It will be sadly missed when for any reason it discontinues its regular flights.

A West Virginian's Awful Distress Through Kidney Troubles.

W. L. Jackson, merchant, of Parkersburg, W. Va., says: "Driving about in bad weather brought kidney troubles on me, and I suffered twenty years, with sharp, cramping pains in the back and urinary disorders. I often had to get up a dozen times at night to urinate. Retention set in, and I was obliged to use the catheter. I took to my bed, and the doctors failing to help, began using Doan's Kidney Pills. The urine soon came freely again, and the pain gradually disappeared. I have been cured eight years, and though over 70, am as active as a boy."

Chinese Fishing.

Very curious is the method of fishing followed by the Chinese in the Straits of Malacca. The fisherman lets down from the side of the boat a screen of white canvas stretched on wood. The shoal of fish mistake this for some floating obstruction and try to leap over it, with the result that the fish jump into the boat and are thus captured. This method is employed by Malays in their waters.

A WOMAN'S ORDEAL

DREADS DOCTOR'S QUESTIONS

Thousands Write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., and Receive Valuable Advice Absolutely Confidential and Free

There can be no more terrible ordeal to a delicate, sensitive, refined woman than to be obliged to answer certain questions in regard to her private ills, even when those questions are asked by her family physician, and many continue to suffer rather than submit to examinations which so many physicians propose in order to intelligently treat the disease; and this is the reason why so many physicians fail to cure female disease.

This is also the reason why thousands upon thousands of women are corresponding with Mrs Pinkham, daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. To her they can confide every detail of their illness, and from her great knowledge, obtained from years of experience in treating female ills, Mrs. Pinkham can advise sick women more wisely than the local physician.

Read how Mrs. Pinkham helped Mrs. T. C. Willadsen, of Manning, Ia. She writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:

"I can truly say that you have saved my life, and I cannot express my gratitude in words. Before I wrote to you telling you how I felt, I had doctored for over two years steady, and spent lots of money in medicines besides, but it all failed to do me any good. I had female trouble and would daily have fainting spells, backache, bearing-down pains, and my monthly periods were very irregular and finally ceased. I wrote to you for your advice and received a letter full of instructions just what to do, and also commenced to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I have been restored to perfect health. Had it not been for you I would have been in my grave to-day."

Mountains of proof establish the fact that no medicine in the world equals Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for restoring women's health.

Dear Sir:—I want to thank you, your Secretary and Treasurer, A. P. Longshore, of the Shelby County Division, and T. A. Leathers, Division Agent of the same, for $829 00 received in full payment of my husband's policy. I not only think this is the best, safest and cheapest plan of insurance on the market today, but a plan appealing to the patriotism of every Southern man and woman to enlist their aid, influence, patronage and endorsement in fostering a home institution that protects the people at actual cost in lieu of supporting those that drean our lovely Southland of money that leaves it never to return, to enrich foreign corporations and build up foreign enterprises. It only cost my husband $7.15 to leave me the above amount.

Mrs. Sarah L. Davis.

MAKE MONEY.

Here is an interesting study: Make out a list of all the people you know, and estimate the amount of money each one earns in a year. Total it up. The amount will be surprisingly large. Now, of all those people, only the few who SAVE SOMETHING really MAKE anything at all. Simply earning money isn't making it; what slips through the earner's fingers is finally "made" by somebody else. Don't forget to count yourself in on the list, and if you are not "making" money, begin now to save with us. One dollar will open your bank account.

Gordo, Ala., June 16, 1906

Dear Editor: Please allow me a small space in your valuable paper to say a few words in regard to Gordo, Ala., which is in Pickens county, on the M. & O. R. R. I have been doing some brick work out here and I find a lot of good old Chilton county people, who have got a good eye for business, have come out here and are doing well. The finest crops I ever saw is out here in Pickens county, and that is not all, they are in a fine fix.

Mr. W. H. Lowe, and uncle of the writers, owns a magnificant farm of 238 acres, and in course of a few years will be worth several thousand dollars. The town of Gordo is only about 8 years old. It has 18 business houses, two saloons and a handsome band, and in course of a few days they are going to have waterworks; already have a telephone system, a oil mill and a cotton factory. Property is advancing every day. Anyone would do well to invest in Gordo property.

Well, this is just an outline to let the people know what Gordo citizens were doing.

Enterprise, June 9, 1906.

Editor Banner: Did you know that Chilton county is good enough for me? On the 4th day of Jan. 1906, I left Coopers for Shubuta, Miss., and worked for the Kaupp Lumber Co. until the 2nd day of June, and on account of bad weather, I only lost 6½ days work.

That county is so low and flat and damp that I was afraid to stay through the summer months. So I remembered that I had a home in old Chilton and I decided to come back. Miss Mandy and myself started back, and from Meridian, Miss. to Coopers we traveled in the day time. I observed the crops along the railroad, and to say the prospects are poor but mildly expresses it. There are thousands of acres that have not been chopped, and nearly all that has been worked is such poor stands that they have replanted with corn. There is so much replanted corn that I don't see how it can make anything like a crop of cotton.

The best prospect for a crop that I noticed was this side of Montgomery. One thing I noticed was at Spiegner, there the crops seem to be in good shape and was growing nicely.

I think that the day has come that if the farmers will only plant the amount of acres that they can cultivate themselves they will, or may, make a success of it. But if they depend on hired labor they will be left. I believe that if the farmers will reduce their acreage and fertilize their crops and improve their lands more, there will be more prosperity in the land. And one other item, that is for the people that have to trade on a credit to buy less, or, if you will allow the expression, to reduce the acreage of debt. I will advise those that have not homes to buy land on time, work hard and live hard until the home is paid for.

Respt. yours,
G. A. Conville.

Shoults.

The health of this community is very good so far as I know.

Crops are small but are looking well and in good shape. The good Lord has given us a good Spring to work our crops. He always does His work well.

Charles Walker is first to report having corn tassels and cotton blooms.

Come boys, we have had a good rain, let's look after that grass.

We are glad to know that our school is moving off nicely under the management of Mr. Haggard.

How is the election going over your way? I am glad to to think that the people are going to vote for the man and not for the party. I like to see men vote that way. I speak of this end of the county, you see I have got hold of this end of the rope and I don't know who has hold of the other end, he don't pull like Hayes, he pulls more like Fitts. Now Lee I am just talking, just talking for fun, but I think in this race you are going to make a bad run. You see we are all after the money, so its the devil after all

The Somerville Journal has just discovered that to a boy a white fence sugests charcoal and a black one chalk.

The stork has driven a Massachusetts birth insurance company to the wall. Will it sue President Roosevelt? asks the New York Herald.

Somebody, some party, must take the bull of Plutocracy—that is the only name for it—by the horns, and turn him out of the garden, where he is making such havoc, and into the pasture, where he belongs, suggests the Louisville Courier-Journal.

While the Powder Trust sandbagged individual customers no attention was paid to its operations, but when it assailed Uncle Sam also he proceeded to investigate its methods, notes the Birmingham Age-Herald. The Powder Trust's methods are not at all novel. All trusts have simply copied the early and the late plans of the Standard Oil. All plot to crush the life out of the lesser concerns, until they are brought to a point where they will sell their plants for a song in order to save from the wreck anything at all.

Governor Vardaman, of Mississippi, must be credited with energy and perseverance in the prosecution of a big gang of whitecappers who four years ago made life a burden to the people of three counties, observes the Hartford Courant. The Governor succeeded in having 332 of them indicted, and though at first these men showed a disposition to fight, they finally concluded that the executive was not to be trifled with. The punishment is a fine of $25 and three months' imprisonment in each case. It is a good piece of work.

Nothing can take from it the quality of its citizens, its climate, its port, or its record of prosperity. No gold mine ever discovered possessed such potentiality of annual income as San Francisco had demonstrated. In language of the street, observes the New York Times, it was not a "prospect," but an earner. An annual product of $137,788,233 of manufactures is not a prize to be abandoned because of a shake or a fire, and less by San Franciscans than others, for they are showing themselves ignorant of what it means to be quitters. No one grudged them what they had, and when they win it again it will be doubly theirs.

Here is the lineup of the Onondaga Indian lacrosse team, says the New York Sun: Goal, Chinganc; point, Pale Raven; cover point, Two Horns; first defense, Jones; second defense, Mildu; third defense, John Buffalo; centre, Fleet Water; first attack, Mike Buffalo; second attack, Mussum; third attack, Hiatontha; outside home, Creola; inside home, Red Beak. There's a good deal in those names; but how tame to these modern redskins must seem the game of twenty-two, in the light of those contests whose glory has descended in tribal tradition—contests wherein we are told from 600 to 1000 young athletes competed simultaneously, in preparation for the warpath!

The New York Sun thinks the cornfield seismologist will be glad to learn, on the authority of Professor Angelo Heilprin, that the man of science is hardly in a position to be "more authoritative regarding the San Francisco earthquake than is the layman." Professor Heilprin has the moral courage to say that earthquakes are due to so many causes and occur so unexpectedly that they baffle "that form of examination and study which belongs to true science." Therefore, he will not venture to assert that the Atlantic border of the United States, or any locality in the East, is in no danger from seismic disturbances. After the Charleston shake-up who would be dogmatic?

Speaking at a meeting of the British Union for the Abolition of Vivisection, Bernard Shaw criticised the attitude of the medical profession toward vivisection. When, he said, it was a question of earning sixty guineas in an afternoon it was a very strong temptation to a man who could do that by performing an operation to believe that an operation was necessary when it was not necessary. He did not think it was good public policy for any person to have a strong pecuniary interest in mutilating his fellows. He did not say that the surgeon actually knew that an operation was unnecessary, but if they gave a man sixty guineas to believe a thing he would have a strong

ARMED UPRISING

Social Democrats and Revolutionists in Russia Are Seeking That End.

SITUATION EXTREMELY GRAVE.

Parliament Will Not Obey Order for Recess, Which Is a Purely Revolutionary Step.

St. Petersburg.—The gravity of the general situation grows hourly. The bourses of St. Petersburg and Moscow are in a panicky condition, and the social democrats and social-revolutionists, considering parliament to be a negligible quantity, are pushing their campaign for an armed uprising with increased vigor.

Demonstrations are daily occurring in the streets of Moscow in favor of a general strike, with which the proletariat leaders are trying to precipitate a conflict. The agitation among the workmen here has reached the boiling point and patrols are again in heavy force in the industrial quarters.

In the country the rural guards are throwing in their lot with the peasants, refusing to protect the landlords. The progress of the revolutionary propaganda in the army is seriously alarming the government, and to add to the popular excitement comes the massacre of Jews at Bialystok.

While the reports conflict as to the immediate responsibility for the outbreak, the authorities here cannot escape responsibility for the provocative Black Hundred telegrams which they caused to be printed throughout Russia, appealing to the worst passions of the mob against the Jews as the enemies of the country.

Government Frightened.

The government is undoubtedly frightened at what has occurred. Martial law has been declared at Bialystok and troops are being rushed to the scene, but according to the latest reports the hunting down of unfortunate Jews continues unabated, accompanied by indescribable horrors.

The commission despatched to Bialystock by parliament can be relied on to prevail on the emperor to order a recess of parliament, and they have taken the important resolution not to obey the imperial order. This amounts to open defiance and is a purely revolutionary step.

The plans of the leaders were secretly formulated, but it is known that if the government turns the lower house out of the Taurine palace the leaders contemplate an attempt to continue the sittings independently. In other words they will try to seize the reins of power.

The eternal parallel of the French revolution, which keeps recurring, is thus again in evidence. The members would probably be required to swear, as did those of the French assembly at the Tennis court, to meet wherever circumstances require it until a constitution is established on a solid foundation.

Leishman Appointed.

Washington, D. C.—Just before the adjournment of the senate Saturday afternoon the president signed the appointment of John G. A. Leishman to be ambassador of the United States to Turkey. Mr. Leishman is now United States minister to Turkey. The legation recently was raised to the rank of an embassy. The nomination of Mr. Leishman would have been sent to the senate earlier had not the body adjourned sooner than was expected. It went to the senate on Monday.

Castro to Resume the Presidency.

Washington, D. C.—President Castro will resume the presidency of Venezuela July 5. The state department has received a dispatch by way of Willemstadt announcing that on June 11 President Castro declared this intention to Vice-President Gomez and a delegation that visited him at La Victoria and requested him to resume the presidency.

Seven Asphyxiated in Mexican Mine.

El Paso, Tex.—A report has been received from Santa Eulalie, a mining camp in Chihuahua, Mexico, 300 miles from here, that the Bueno Tierra mine is afire and that seven men are known to have been asphyxiated. A candle set fire to timbering in the mine.

San Francisco, Cal.—The thirty-two insurance companies that rejected the suggestion of a 75 per cent compromise put forward by sixty-one of their associates in the underwriters' bureau have received two additions to their number. The Insurance Company of North America and the Niagara of New York have announced that they will pay up dollar for dollar on

SEVERE EARTHQUAKE

San Francisco, Cal.—A severe earthquake was felt here Friday evening. It lasted about five seconds. It was probably not heavy enough to do damage, though possibly it may have caused some of the walls of ruined buildings to fall.

Will Extend Alaskan Road.

Seattle, Wash.—The stockholders and trustees of the Alaskan Central railroad at their annual meeting amended the company's by-laws and trust deed to provide for the purchase by a syndicate of London and Holland bondholders of $8,000,000 of Alaskan Central bonds with which to finance the construction of the line. An agreement was signed with the Tanana Construction Company to complete the road as far as the Chicalon coal fields, 185 miles north of Seward, not later than eighteen months from July 1 of this year.

F. Augustus Heinz, of Butte, Mont., was made a trustee. With this exception the old board of trustees was re elected.

New York Carpenters' Strike Settled.

New York.—Greater New York Council, Botherhood of Carpenters, has ratified an agreement between the carpenters and the Master Carpenters' Association, therby bringing to an end the carpenters' strike. The men returned to work Monday.

By the agreement the master carpenters will raise the wages of the Brooklyn men from $4 a day to $4.50 a day and of the Manhattan men from $4.50 a day to $4.80 a day. The new wage scale of the Brooklyn men will go into effect August 15, and the new scale for the Manhattan men July 1.

First Notice Served on Packers.

Chicago, Ill.—The city health department Friday sent its first official written notice to the packing companies at the Union Stock Yards to improve the sanitary conditions of their plants.

The packers were instructed that they must within three days discard the filthy tables and benches, provide cleaner rooms and tools, and correct some of the present unsanitary conditions. Structural changes in the buildings, including new toilet rooms and more ventilation and light, must be made within thirty days.

Lester Dead.

Washington, D. C.—Representative Lester, of Georgia, who was injured Friday by falling through a skylight, died at 6:22 p. m. Saturday.

About 8 o'clock Mr. Lester took the elevator for the top floor in the apartment house. Nobody saw him after he left the car until he was found terribly mangled thirty feet beneath a shattered skylight, through which he had fallen. Mr. Lester was in search of his grandchildren at the time of the accident, and the supposition is that he went to the roof thinking that the little girls might be there looking at an airship which was to make an ascent at a local amusement park.

Mr. Lester was a native of Georgia, having been born in that state 69 years ago, and was prominent in southern politics for more than forty years.

Florence Infirmary Closed.

Florence, Ala.—After six years of splendid service, during which time about 50 patients were cared for, the City and County Infirmary has closed its doors, the reason assigned by the trustees being lack of funds. The institution has been supported by voluntary subscriptions, the city and county also appropriating small sums annually to aid in the work. The subscription has dwindled until the trustees found it impossible to meet their obligations, and the institution was closed.

Sentence Commuted.

Washington, D. C.—President Roosevelt has commuted the sentence of First Lieut. Lanier Cravens, of the artillery corps, who was sentenced to dismissal by court-martial for duplication of pay accounts. Upon the recommendation of the secretary of war the president changed the sentence to reduction to the foot of the list of first lieutenants of the artillery corps.

Baseball Bats Used to Kill.

Mt. Sterling, Ky.—The baseball ground at Grassy Lock was the scene of a murder Saturday afternoon, and possibly, as the brother of the first victim seriously and perhaps fatally wounded his brother's assailant. A ball game among local youths was in progress when John Karrich, aged 19, became involved in a fight with E. E. Puckell. He struck Puckell with a baseball bat, crushing his skull and causing almost instant death. While the other players stood about the stricken man Puckell's brother rushed upon Karrich with another bat and inflicted injuries which may cause his death.

Railroads in Philippines.

Manila.—Preliminary work on the Philippine Island railroads will be begun at once. Forty engineers and physicians, who arrived at Manila on June 9 and 10, have left for Iloilo to begin operations. The line on the island of Panay will be surveyed first, some changes in the original survey being necessary. The actual work of construction will probably commence this [illegible]

Tightens Quarantine.

New Orleans, La.—A quarantine order prohibiting all passenger traffic from all tropical fruit ports to this state has been issued by Dr. C. M. Irion, president of the Louisiana state board of health. The order was issued because of a report received here from the resident medical inspector at Port Limon, Costa Rica, stating that within the last few days 150 persons from Colon had arrived there, many of them having left Colon because of fears of yellow fever.

Bluefields, Nicaragua, and Beliz, British Honduras, are shut off from passenger traffic by this order, all other tropical fruit ports having been previously quarantined against.

Work on Dreyfus Case.

Paris.—The supreme court, behind closed doors, Saturday completed its examination of the secret documents of the ministries of war and foreign affairs concerning the Dreyfus case. The public session began Monday, when the attorneys for the prosecution and defense summed up.

A rumor has gained circulation in the corridors of the palace of justice that a careful canvass showed that a majority of the court were already in favor of quashing the judgment of Rennes court-martial without further trial of proceedings. According to this report twenty-five out of the forty members of the court are in favor of setting aside the judgment.

Girl Caused Wreck.

Marietta, O.—Little Alice Kyle, a school girl and daughter of a farmer residing between Macksburg and Elba, has confessed to having caused the wreck of the Pennsylvania flyer near the latter town on Thursday night, in which two passenger coaches were overturned and the engine, tender and mail car hurled down an enbackment.

The girl, who is 12 years of age, said that she wedged a rail bolt between the ends of two rails, just to see the train smash it, as it had smashed nails and pennies.

The girl will not be arrested, as the railroad officials are satisfied that it was a childish prank.

Another Star Is Added.

Washington, D. C.—Another star was added to the Union when President Roosevelt signed the bill admitting Oklahoma and the Indian Territory as one state. The measure also provides that Arizona and New Mexico may be admitted to statehood as the state of Arizona, provided the people of the territory vote in favor of admission on the terms submitted to them by congress.

The signing of the measure was made the occasion of an interesting ceremony. Senator Beveridge and Repreman of the house and senate committees on territories, who have worked long and hard to bring about the enactment of the measure, were present as also were Delegate McGuire, of Oklahoma, and a delegation of residents of Oklahoma, Denegate Andrews, of New Mexico, Secretary Loeb and several others.

St. Petersburg.—Emperor Nicholas has issued a rescript to the Siberian Cossacks granting them in perpetuity the lands which they now occupy.

From now until the end of the month no more cases will be introduced in the high court, although the members will continue their deliberations of cases already handed in until June 30.

Soldiers Killed in Warsaw.

Warsaw.—A band of thirty revolutionists Saturday attacked a branch postoffice which was guarded by a small detachment of military, killing several of the soldiers and wounding three of them. After a further fight the band was driven off, but seven of its members were captured. A sergeant of police has been killed in the streets and a policeman and soldier wounded. The assassins escaped.

Melitopol, Russia.—A hail storm of unprecedented severity destroyed 200,000 acres of crops and killed cattle in the fields. Some of the stones weighed three pounds.

Simferopol, Province of Taurida, Russia.—Seven revolutionists, including two students, who were agitating for a political strike here, were killed by a mob Friday.

ALABAMA NEWS

Montgomery, Ala.—The cash in the state treasury was counted this week at the instance of the two bond companies on the bond of Treasurer J. Craig Smith. This is done from time to time, as is also the cash counted at stated intervals by request of the governor, according to statute. An expert from each of the bond company offices was here. The treasurer was present, as was Judge Wilkerson, one of the state examiners.

After giving two days to the work it was reported that the vaults contained $2,250,775.14. The bookkeeping was highly complimented by the two experts. Every cent was accounted for and properly shown in the books and the cash account. The system of the office was very satisfactory to the visitors and to the state examiner.

Over $300,000 in securities are in the vaults, deposited there by security companies doing business in the state, and in addition to the cash account.

Standard Warehouse in Opelika.

Opelika, Ala.—A standard warehouse is a mammoth new enterprise for this city, backed by capitalists from Baltimore and Birmingham. This warehouse will be a handsome brick structure, erected on the site of the old baseball park, near the Central of Georgia railroad, with trackage and splendid outlets. The strong and handsome building will cost $25,000. The following excellent business men promoting this enterprise makes it a sure success and a paying investment: J. M. Lewis, of Baltimore; Ned Lewis, of Birmingham; Bartow Smith and R. H. Lindsey, of this city.

Politics in Morgan.

Decatur, Ala.—New life has been injected into the politics of this county since Chairman James Simpson, of the county executive committee, has called a meeting of the committee for June 28, to be held in Hartselle. The meeting of the committee is for the purpose of fixing a date for the holding of the county primary and for such other business as may come before the committee. It seems to be the general belief that the county primary will be held on the same date of the state primary, August 27.

The candidates for the legislature will start out on their campaign of speech-making within the next few weeks, and things of a political nature are expected to warm up to a high pitch at that time. John R. Sample, of Hartselle, has entered the race for the state legislature, making six now in the race for that office, with two to be elected.

Mayor Henry A. Skeggs is in South Alabama this week in the interest of his candidacy for the office of associate railroad commissioner and has met with much encouragement in his trip over that portion of the state.

Two Boys Killed on Trestle.

Mobile, Ala.—At the tank at Hurricane Bayou, on the Louisville and Nashville railroad, early Friday morning, according to a report received here, the bodies of two white boys were found beside the track, their heads crushed. Indications showed the boys had been asleep on the track, and it is thought both were killed by a northbound freight.

J. A. Huggins, of this city, found the bodies. He identified them as C. H. Busbee and Webb. Busbee was identified by his cap, which had his name inside. Webb had been seen with him and it was thought by this he was identified. The boys were about 16 years of age, five and a half feet tall. Busbee wore a blue serge suit, with overalls above, the other wearing blue overalls. The bodies were brought here. It was impossible to recognize either.

Petition for Pardon.

Cullman, Ala.—Frank Williams, a son of John Williams, who is under sentence of death for the murder of Senator R. L. Hipp, is circulating a petition for the pardon of his father. Williams is in the Jefferson county jail for safe keeping. The supreme court has set Friday, July 27, for his hanging.

Jasper, Ala.—The county commissioners have decided to have the present county court house remodeled and have authorized the architects to prepare plans so that bids may be advertised for. A sum approximating $35,000 will in all probability be expended on the present building, which it is claimed will give the county a building worth over $50,000. The building used at present will be enlarged and remodeled, so that when the work is done the new structure will be one of the handsomest court houses in the state. It is stated that the work is to begin within a very short time. General satisfaction seems to prevail with the decision of the commissioners.

Greensboro, Ga.—Judge W. M. Weaver died at his home Monday morning. He was one of the oldest and most prominent citizens of Greensboro. His funeral was largely attended, and was conducted by Dr. J. S. Hopkins, of Athens, who was his classmate, attendant at his marriage many years ago and his lifelong friend.

Judge Weaver was a prominent Mason, and was buried by their impressive ceremony.

Race for Congress Provokes Interest

Anniston, Ala.—Much interest is being shown in the coming primary for the nomination of a congressman from the Fourth Congressional district. It is understood that Chairman Hale will call a meeting of the committee for June 21. Thus far there are but two announced candidates for congress—W. B. Craig, of Dallas and Leon Greer, of Calhoun.

The friends of J. C. Wilson, of Talladega, who was defeated for state senator in the county, are urging him to enter the congressional race. Wilson was defeated by Castleberry by the narrow margin of thirteen votes, the main issue at stake being the dispensary question, Wilson being straight for a dispensary and Castleberry in favor of leaving it to a vote of the people.

Bradford Brown, of Shelby is also spoken of as one of the possibilities as a candidate for congress from the Fourth district.

Erect Statue to Memory of Wheeler

Decatur, Ala.—Maj. W. R. Francis, of this city, chairman of the Wheeler Memorial Association of the Eighth Congressional District, has just received a letter from Capt. Milton Humes, of Huntsville, in which Captain Humes says that he and his wife have just returned from a visit to New York, and while there he called upon Charles F. Pike in regard to having him make an equestrian statue of Gen. Joe Wheeler. Captain Humes says that Mr. Pike will made a model of the statue and submit it to the committee of the Wheeler memorial in this district about October.

This statue of General Wheeler is to be placed somewhere in the Eighth district of Alabama. The location is to be voted on by the members of the memorial association at a later date.

May Affect Thousands.

New Orleans, La.—Official cognizance of a water famine, affecting several thousand persons in some outlying districts of New Orleans, was taken Saturday by Mayor Behrman. As a result of his relief measures hydrants have been left running at street corners, public school buildings have been open day and night, in order that water may be drawn in them, and sprinkling carts stationed on Carrollton avenue near Athletic Park as water supply for the surrounding neighborhood.

The district affected is that in which the city water mains have not yet been generally extended. The section has relied on cisterns, and these have run dry because the amount of rainfall is now about 15 inches under the normal for this period of the year. Such of these cisterns as still contain water have been condemned as disease tainted by the health board.

Mayor Behrman said that the water famine will not affect other parts of the city.

Pope's Health Good.

BRITAIN'S ELEPHANTS

WEALTH OF THE EMPIRE IN THESE BIG BEASTS.

They Are Located in India and Africa and Are Very Valuable in Industrial Enterprises—Three Interesting Babies.

What with the wealth of India and Africa Great Britain possesses more elephants than any other power in the world. The Indian elephant differs very considerably from the African in several points notably in the size of the ears, which are much smaller than the African's. Again the African has an arched forehead while that of the Indian is concave. While the Indian males are about ten feet at the shoulder the African males are a foot higher. The prince of Wales recently had the opportunity of seeing in the famous MacGregor timber yards at Rangoon to what a pitch of usefulness the elephant can be trained in moving large logs of wood. His intelligence at his work is extraordinary. An ordinary elephant can carry half a ton continuously on a level road. A native instructor sits on the back of each elephant and controls his movements, but really the sagacious creatures need little attention.

As a mere figure in pageants the elephant plays a very conspicuous part in the receptions given to the prince and princess, notably at Jammu and Gwalior.

Among the large and varied collection of wild animals, reptiles and birds brought back by Capt. Stanley Flower, of the British army, in his recent expedition to the Blue Nile the first as regards importance and interest are three baby African elephants captured by Arabs in the upper waters of the Blue Nile. One of these was presented by Capt. McMurdo, D. S. O., director of the slave trade department, and the other two were purchased. These elephants are from eight to ten months old and are rarely found so young in captivity, those now in Cairo being most probably the first ever brought there, only about half a dozen others being known to exist in the different zoological gardens in the world. Walking about the gardens in charge of their keeper Kocutsh, Zakieh and Dandy form a most attractive trio, particularly when they lift their large leaflike ears and salute by raising their little trunks to their foreheads and afterwards put these same trunks into the pocket of the visitor in search of something toothsome. It is to be hoped that these fascinating babies may long continue to delight the visitors to the Ghizeh gardens, where they are now attracting much attention.

GREAT SALT DEPOSITS.

One of the Wonderful Resources of North Western Canadian Provinces.

At first sight it would appear that the scene depicted is a winter one, with a river flowing past snow-covered banks, but what looks like snow is in reality the purest salt. It furnishes excellent table salt without further preparation. Some six feet underneath it a coarser quality, similar to "Liverpool salt," is found. Springs of water running through this saltbed are surcharged with salt and deposit their residue in the form shown in the picture. The trees in the background are underlaid with pure white salt, and on the removal of the top soil to a depth of some three or four feet, a solid hill of salt is reached.

BRITAIN'S ELEPHANTS

WEALTH OF THE EMPIRE IN THESE BIG BEASTS.

They Are Located in India and Africa and Are Very Valuable in Industrial Enterprises—Three Interesting Babies.

What with the wealth of India and Africa Great Britain possesses more elephants than any other power in the world. The Indian elephant differs very considerably from the African in several points, notably in the size of the ears, which are much smaller than the African's. Again, the African has an arched forehead while that of the Indian is concave. While the Indian males are about ten feet at the shoulder the African males are a foot higher. The prince of Wales recently had the opportunity of seeing in the famous MacGregor timber yards at Rangoon to what a pitch of usefulness the elephant can be trained in moving large logs of wood. His intelligence at his work is extraordinary. An ordinary elephant can carry half a ton continuously on a level road. A native instructor sits on the back of each elephant and controls his movements, but really the sagacious creatures need little attention.

As a mere figure in pageants the elephant plays a very conspicuous part in the receptions given to the prince and princess, notably at Jammu and Gwalior.

Among the large and varied collection of wild animals, reptiles and birds brought back by Capt. Stanley Flower, of the British army, in his recent expedition to the Blue Nile the first as regards importance and interest are three baby African elephants captured by Arabs in the upper waters of the Blue Nile. One of these was presented by Capt. McMurdo, D S O., director of the slave trade department, and the other two were purchased. These elephants are from eight to ten months old and are rarely found so young in captivity, those now in Cairo being most probably the first ever brought there, only about half a dozen others being known to exist in the different zoological gardens in the world. Walking about the gardens in charge of their keeper Kocutsh, Zakieh and Dandy form a most attractive trio, particularly when they lift their large leaflike ears and salute by raising their little trunks to their foreheads and afterwards put these same trunks into the pocket of the visitor in search of something toothsome. It is to be hoped that these fascinating babies may long continue to delight the visitors to the Ghizeh gardens, where they are now attracting much attention.

GREAT SALT DEPOSITS.

One of the Wonderful Resources of North Western Canadian Provinces.

At first sight it would appear that the scene depicted is a winter one, with a river flowing past snow-covered banks, but what looks like snow is in reality the purest salt. It furnishes excellent table salt without further preparation. Some six feet underneath it a coarser quality, similar to "Liverpool salt," is found. Springs of water running through this saltbed are surcharged with salt and deposit their residue in the form shown in the picture. The trees in the background are underlaid with pure white salt, and on the removal of the top soil to a depth of some three or four feet, a solid hill of salt is reached.

ODD TEAM OF MOOSE.

Broken to Drive in Harness by Edward Crossman of Ely, Minnesota.

Edward Crossman, of Ely, Minn., owns one of the oddest teams in America. He has succeeded in the unusual task of breaking a pair of moose to drive in harness. In his buggy Mr. Crossman spins about as rapidly behind these animals as if drawn by a prancing span of horses. Ordinary reindeers have long figured in the mythical doings of Santa Claus, and are actually driven by the Laplanders, but the moose is a much larger and different representative of the deer family, and should not be confused with the reindeer.

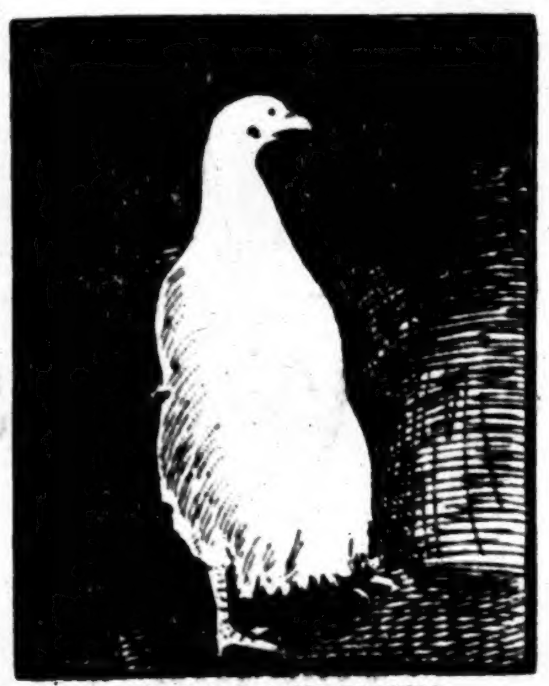
These moose shown in the photograph were captured at Bear Island lake, a few miles to the southwest of Ely, three years ago. The mother had been killed by an Indian and a trapper in the vicinity, hearing his dog barking furiously, hurried to the spot where he found the two moose calves. Mr. Crossman bought these calves from the trapper and secured a permit from the governor to keep them in his possession.

At first the moose didn't relish behitched up, but, as they are young, they became accustomed to it much sooner than if they had been full-grown. Their antlers are now growing and, by the time the animals are five years of age, will be of large size. At first the problem of feeding them was no small one. When running wild they live on pond lily roots, leaves of trees or tender shoots of willow, and to get the lily roots it is very common to see them wading in the shallow water of their native haunts. At first Mr. Crossman fed them willow twigs and young birch, but this became quite a task, for they required about three wagon loads a week. To-day they eat hay, turnips and cabbage, and seem to enjoy the diet as much as the one to which they had before been accustomed. One of these moose will eat as much as two horses. They nibble at something most of the time except when lying down during the middle of the day. Each weighs about 700 pounds or thereabouts. When full-grown their shoulders will be higher than those of a horse. Their antlers will then add materially to their weight, often weighing from 50 to 60 pounds. The moose have a coarse brown hair.

A FREAK CHICKEN.

It Is Hard to Tell Whether It Is a Hen or a Duck.

Policeman Joseph Lussier, of Willimantic, has a queer freak chicken. The question which perplexes the observer is whether the freak is a hen or a duck. The hen-duck was hatched last May, and it has always borne the eccentricities herewith described. Its breed is the white Wyandotte. It has the head of a pullet and other characteristics, but its walk, posture, etc., are like the duck's. When walking its body assumes the upright position, as in the picture. Its tail is short and stubby, and has that peculiar wag such as only the duck can give it, and its legs and feet resemble those of a duck, though the feet lack a web. When it tries to cackle it makes a sound which is seemingly a mixture of a cackle and a quack. It eats from the ground like a duck and drinks a great amount of water. As yet the freak has not laid an egg or essayed to swim, and these may determine later to which family it belongs.



IS IT HEN OR DUCK?

PUT MONEY TO GOOD USE

Not Enough in the Office, So the Candidate Bought Himself a Farm.

In a small Indiana town there is an officer designated as inspector of streets and roadways, who receives the munificent salary of $250 per year. There was a lively campaign for this small plum not long ago, no other elections being near. The Democratic candidate was an old fellow by the name of Ezekiel Hicks, and it looked as though he would be successful, as a neat little sum had been subscribed and turned over to him as a campaign fund. To the astonishment of everybody, however, he was defeated. "I can't account for it," one of the Democratic leaders said, gloomily. "With that money we should have won. How did you lay it out, Ezekiel?" "Hum," Ezekiel said, slowly pulling his whisker, "yer see, that office only pays $250 a year salary, an' I didn't see no sense in payin' $900 out to get the office, so I jest bought me a little truck farm instead."

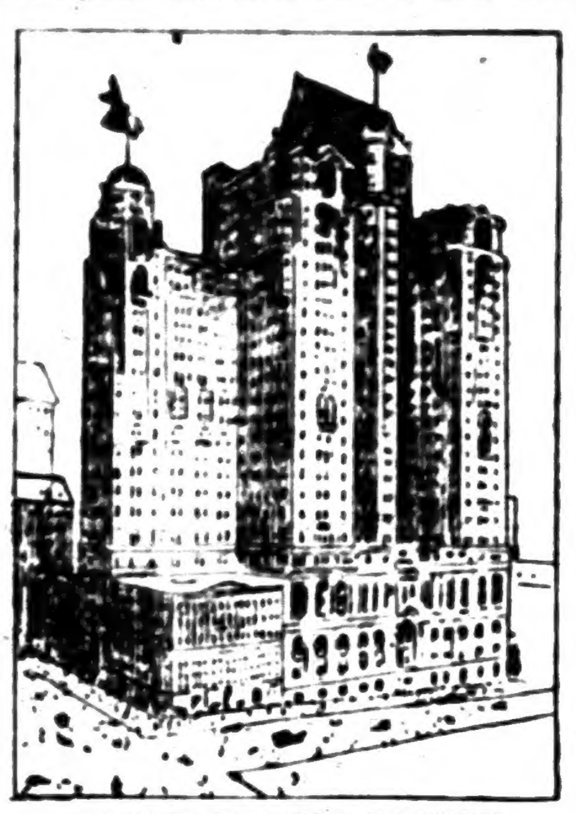
A GIANT BUILDING

NEW YORK TO HAVE HIGHEST OFFICE STRUCTURE.

It Will Be Thirty Stories High and Will Cost $3,250,000—To Be Located on Lower Broadway at Cortlandt Street.

Giant among office buildings of the world, the City Investing Building company will tower above the great structures of lower Broadway, New York city. This latest product of the architect and builder's art is to be 20 stories high in its central part and 25 stories throughout the remainder.

It will cover a ground area of 27,000 square feet at Broadway and Cortlandt street, surrounding the old Benedict building. The western part will cover the site of the Coal and Iron Exchange, at Cortlandt and Church streets, with a frontage in Cortlandt street of 209 feet and of 103 feet in Church street. The Broadway entrance will be in Nos. 165 and 167, and a main corridor 38 feet wide will run through to Church street, a distance of 315 feet.



TOWERING UNTO HEAVEN.

The cost of this pile will be more than $3,250,000. In line with the policy of Robert E. Dowling, president of the City Investing company, to give to tenants quick and abundant transportation facilities, the building will have 21 elevators.

It is probable that the building will have an entrance to the McAdoo tunnel, which will come up to Church street, under Cortlandt street, and will turn north under the south side of that thoroughfare. This has not yet been decided upon.

In style of architecture the building will be what is technically known as free Italian. The adoption of this type of architecture has given the architect, Francis H. Kimball, an opportunity to produce a structure whose massive appearance will be imposing.

THE MAJESTY OF THE LAW

Not Essential to the Drawing of an Understandable Will.

Every man who has ever tried to guess one of those conundrums known as insurance policies, or who has ever attempted to translate into intelligent English any legal document, with all its whereases and its herebys and its aforesaids, will appreciate the sentiments of Deacon Elphonzo Youngs, of Washington, who, when making his will, harkened to the lawyer's opening paragraph, and then exclaimed:

"Rats! all there is about this is that at my death I want by ever-faithful and devoted wife, Amelia, to have and control everything I possess."

If that will would not hold in law, says the Four-Track News—there being no possible room for doubt as to the intent thereof—the fault is with the law, not the will.

QUAINT OLD JURY BOX.

It Was in Use in Lynn, Massachusetts, from 1732 to 1903.

A little lacquered, wooden box, now in the possession of the Lynn Historical society, and labeled simply "Old Jury Box," could, had it a tongue, tell a long and most interesting story of the growth of the town and city of Lynn during the past 200 years.

The box itself is like most other boxes made in the early part of the eighteenth century, dovetailed at the corners and glued together. It is not a large box, yet the names of many of Lynn's best citizens have been drawn from it for service on a jury sitting in judgment on their fellowmen.

On the bottom of the box are the figures "1732," and it is thought that this is the date the box was made. By whom it was constructed nobody seems to know, and nothing can be found in the old town records regarding its use. However, it is known that it was used nearly 200 years, and that it is probably the oldest box in Lynn to-day.

From the time it was constructed until 1903 it was in constant use. But as the years rolled by and the town grew into a city, and a small city into one of great proportions, the box proved too small to hold the names of the jurors.

In 1903 City Clerk Joseph W. Attwill ordered a new jury box to be made. This is of oak and much larger than the old box. Soon after the completion of the new box the old box was presented to the Lynn Historical society, and at present rests in a large wall cabinet.

The box has a ball of hand-wrought iron and an old-fashioned lock and hinges of the same material. A little slot in the top admits of dropping the names into the box. The inside is left in the natural wood, but the outside is lacquered, and is about the color of old mahogany.

ODD TIMBER RAFTS.

The Lumber Industry of America as Seen by an English Paper.

America is so rich in timber—she possesses 300 species of trees of which the smallest grows as high as 30 feet—and has such magnificent rivers that the timber trade is carried out on a scale which we in our little country can scarcely imagine, says the London Sphere. Many of these rafts float of their own accord, while others are hauled by curious vessels known as "alligators." They are specially used on the Canadian lakes and rivers and have been described as a cross between a boat and a grasshopper, for they can navigate a dry and dusty road or make their way through a swamp or over a windfall. The Lumber Jack is said to be losing some of his old picturesqueness, but he retains enough individuality to mark him off from other classes of workers. He is simple and natural, generous and fearless, manly and independent. The picture shown in this column illustrate the method of lumbering in western Washington. When the logs are cut they are either skidded down to the rivers or are floated thither and bound together with enormous chains. In many cases they are built into a sort of floating cage which is released from beneath them when the pile is completed. It is no uncommon sight to see a raft containing logs worth $1,000,000.

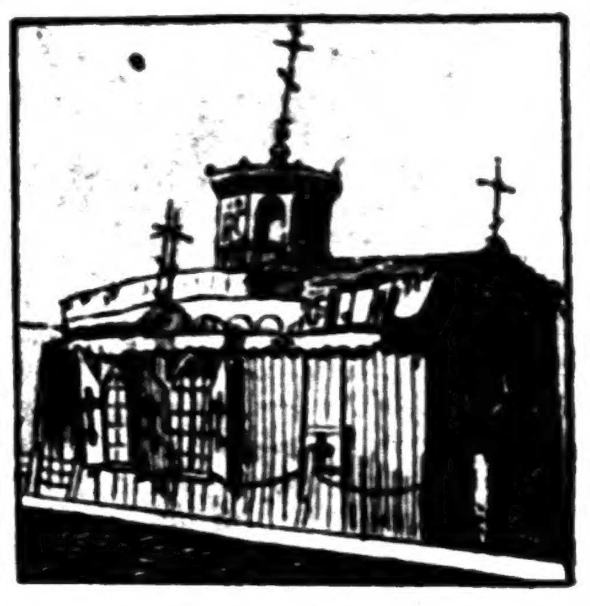
A CURIOUS CHURCH

ODD PLACE OF WORSHIP IN WINNIPEG, MANITOBA.

Constructed of All Sorts of Material and Used by Russian Settlers—A Tribute to the Priest.

Necessity is known to be the mother of invention, and the Canadian west is full of examples of how the enterprise and adaptability of pioneers has roughly fashioned to the uses of civilization the virgin resources of nature. The accompanying picture represents the place of worship of the Greek Orthodox Church of Canada, situated on Stella street, Winnipeg, and it is an example, the most curious in our acquaintance, of how the energy and inventiveness of determined persons may accomplish their end by the use of the most unlikely and extraordinary means. The materials out of which this amorphous place of worship is constructed consist principally of old lumber, scrap iron, odd pieces of tin, with divers miscellaneous articles of domestic and commercial use added in apparently promiscuous fashion. The lumber has been nailed from the outside with little regard to the perpendicular or horizontal, and fastened together with ties of every size and variety from a shingle nail to a railway spike. To summon laggard worshipers to service there is a locomotive bell hanging over the entrance door, the panels of which are elaborated with old picture-frame molding. Pieces of broken machinery, garden tools, etc., are scattered over the building as ornaments, and from the dome on top stands out a cross made of two curtain poles. The commercial value of the whole structure is only a fraction of the worth of the lot on which it stands. It is a testimony—curious but inspiring—to the devotion and resourcefulness of the priest who built and still occupies it.



ODD CANADIAN CHURCH.

WASN'T A "DARNED FOOL."

What a Farmer Thought When the Telephone Was Still a Novelty.

Years ago, when telephones were still a novelty, a farmer from the outskirts of Manchester, N. H., came to town one day and called on a lawyer friend of his, now United States Senator Henry E. Burnham, whom he supplied with butter, and who had had a telephone recently put in his office.

"Need any butter this morning?" asked the farmer.

"Well, I don't know," answered the lawyer. "Wait a minute. I'll ask my wife about it."

After speaking through the 'phone, he went on: "No; my wife says no."

The farmer's face was a study for a moment. Then he broke out with: "Look a-here, Mr. Lawyer, I may be a 'rube' and have my whiskers full of hay and hayseed, but I'm not such a darned fool as to believe that your wife is in that box!"

Memories of his Youth.

A hard-headed old Pittsburg manufacturer who made his fortune, as he expresses it, "with his coat off," was induced by his daughters to accompany them to a Wagner concert, the first he had ever attended, relates Success Magazine. The next day he happened to meet an acquaintance who had seen him the night before, who asked:

"I suppose you enjoyed the concert last night, Mr. Brown?"

"Yes; it took me back to the days of my youth," the old man said, with a reminiscent sigh.

"Ah, summer days in the country, girl in a lawn dress, birds singing, and all that?"

"No, the days when I worked in a boiler shop in Scranton."

LAST OF THE BLOOMERS.

One Lonely Old Woman the Sole Survivor of the Once Famous Band.

All that remains of the famous "Bloomer Band" of half a century ago is one lonely old woman and a new word in the dictionary. The term "bloomers" has survived, but few know that the word had its origin in a movement of half a century ago for the revolutionizing of woman's costume as a first step toward the enforcement of equal rights with men. The woman who led this band was Mrs. Anne Bloomer, of New York. Mrs. Bloomer was a famous advocate of woman's rights, but she attained world-wide fame only when she called upon her enslaved sisters to break the shackles, defy convention and the male sex and step into the light of day wearing trousers, the uniform of liberty. Not all at once did the little band of women who responded to the Bloomer call cast aside the garb of the down-trodden sex. A compromise was effected in the form of a costume part trousers part skirt. It was hideous, a nightmare, a thing to make both sexes shudder and seek the woods. But many women set their teeth and marched into the limelight wearing the new "Bloomer" costume.

The entire world shrieked. The Bloomerites were lampooned in type and picture, even Punch considered the subject important enough for his satirical shafts. The nerve of some of the Bloomerites failed them after a time and the costume became less and less familiar in the streets of American cities. It was generally supposed that nothing remained of the Bloomer movement but the name, now applied to more than one kind of nether garment. But there is one "Boomer" woman still living and still boldly facing a mocking world, wearing the costume adopted at the time of the futile movement of half a century ago. This last survivor of the famous Bloomer brigade is Susan Fowler, of Vineland, N. J. For 40 years she has tilled her farm, gathered her harvest and, clad in the costume to which she has ever remained faithful, has driven to market to sell her produce. Indifferent to the attention she attracts, the only living Bloomer woman walks the streets of Jersey town or toils on her farm, dressed in the garb over which the comic papers of the world cackled with merriment in the fifties. It may be funny to some, but it is a little pathetic, too, to see the lonely old woman (for she is 80 years of age and works and lives in solitude), clinging stanchly to the dress she undertook to wear when women were calling on their sisters to discard the skirt of thraldom and be free like men.

INDIAN CRUCIFIX.

Life-Size Carving of Christ Erected by Tribe of British Columbia Indians.

Life-size carving of Christ on the cross, executed and erected entirely by the Squamish tribe of Indians at their reservation, North Vancouver, B. C. The cross is one piece, cut from mahogany, and the figure is also in one piece, carved from a hard white ivy tree which grows in the mountains around the reservation. The carving is a masterpiece, and shows every vein and muscle that a living figure would show. A close inspection with a magnifying glass will reveal the following inscription on the base of the cross: "Memorial of Solemn Homage to Our Lord Jesus Christ. Erected by the Squamish Indians, A. D. 1900."

NEGLECTED OPPORTUNITIES

Chances Lost Sight Of by Man Who Was Making His First Public Speech.

Mr. Sidener had made his first public speech. His subject was good—the iniquities of industrial economy—and he hoped his treatment had been adequate. He was not sure. He waited for his wife's verdict, but she was strangely silent, relates Youth's Companion.

She had listened to him from the gallery of the town hall, and he had half-expected her to meet him at the door afterward, and to say, as soon as they were out of hearing: "Oh, it was simply great, Eddy!" But they were half-way home, and she had said nothing of the kind.

"Well," he began, awkwardly, when he could bear it no longer, "what did you think of my speech?"

"What you said was all right," she answered, with guarded enthusiasm. "But it seemed to me you didn't make the most of your opportunities."

"Opportunities?" repeated Mr. Sidener. "What do you mean, Effie?"

"Why," Mrs. Sidener replied, "you had ever so many chances to sit down before you did."

SCOTT—HAYES.

On last Sunday morning as the sun in her magnitude rose to illuminate this glorious Southland of ours, the people from all directions were to be seen moving as if it was a great holiday, and they were going to a barbecue. About 9 o'clock there was gathered at the home of the bride an immense crowd of friends and relatives, to witness the marriage of Mr. John Scott to Miss Laura Hayes. In the presence of this large assembly Rev. Gibson spoke some beautiful words that made the young couple happy.

The groom is a young planter of our section, and is loved by every one that knows him, and the bride is a beautiful young lady of loveable disposition and kind spirit.

A promising future lies out before them. Their single life has been a blessing to our community and we hope their married life will be happy and filled with many showers of sunshine. AMO.

A Wonderful Ride.

The most wonderful straightaway ride ever made by man was the gallop of Francis Xavier Aubrey, ci-devant Canadian voyageur and a famous pony express rider, from Santa Fe, N. M., to Independence, Mo., in 1853—800 miles in five days and thirteen hours. In 1852 he had covered the same distance in a little over eight days, and his record was on the wager of $1,000 that he "could do it in an even eight." In the whole distance he did not stop to rest, and he changed horses only with every 100 or 200 miles. He was a stocky French Canadian, light hearted, genial, adventurous and absolutely fearless. For some time he was an overland freighter, and he also made the enormously difficult and dangerous drive of a flock of sheep from New Mexico to California across the deserts of the Colorado. He was killed in Santa Fe.—McClure's Magazine.

Early Autograph Hunters.

A certain Atossa in early Roman days seems to have been the mother of autograph collectors. Cicero had a collection, which must have been a fine one, for he speaks of it with particular pride. The fever, even in those far back days, was contagious. Pliny speaks of Pompeius Secundus, at whose house he had seen autographs of Cicero, Augustus, Virgil and the Gracchi, and his own collection was valued at $15,000 of our money. Then came the inrush of barbarians, and we do not again meet with the collector until the beginning of the sixteenth century, when he reappears in the person of a Bohemian squire, who kept a book to record his exploits in the chase and enriched it with the signatures of his great hunter friends.

When Death Cools His Sting.

There is a curious superstition in Jamaica that if a death occurs in the house all the water in it is poisoned at once and must be thrown away, the reason given being that "death" cools his "sting" after destroying life in the first water he finds, and as no one can tell—death being invisible—what jar he may choose it is safest to throw it all away. Careful people to save trouble even carry all water out of the house immediately before a death is expected.

Already Well Made.

"Miss Deepley does make some of the most inapt quotations," remarked Bragg.

"Yes?" queried Newitt. "What, for instance?"

"Well, last night I remarked that I always avoided political discussion because I didn't want to make a fool of myself, and she said, 'One cannot paint the lily or gild refined gold.'"—Philadelphia Press.

She Paid on the Investment.

"Here," complained the aggrieved father, "I have spent nearly $15,000 on that girl's education, and now she goes and marries a $2,500 a year clerk."

"Well," said the friend of the family, "isn't that all of 15 per cent on your investment? What more do you want?"

Carelessness.

The Young Doctor—Just think, six of my patients recovered this week. The Old Doctor—It's your own fault, my boy. You spend too much time at the club.

INVITATION EXTENDED.

To all candidates of each and every party: I extend to you a cordial invitation when in this section of Chilton county to visit me in my home, and I especially invite my opponent or opponents, either in the Democratic or other party, to come spend your leisure moments, that I may introduce you to my friends and neighbors and that we may discuss the issues together, and I want to assure both the candidates as well as the voters of Chilton county, that so far as I am concerned the present campaign will be conducted upon a high plane—no mud slinging by me, unless I have it to do in self defense, in which case I will only repel force with force. On the other hand I faithfully promise that my opponents shall at all times be free from abuse by myself and I urge my friends to refrain from any word or act that would bring reproach upon me or my candidacy. Remember fellow countrymen that abuse and slander by all parties has for past two years been the rule in Chilton county. Let this year be the exception and not the rule. We have nothing to fight over in Chilton county. The recent constitution put all men on equal footing, so let us all pull together for one common cause. To-witt: the upbuilding of our county and its people, and to this end I append Mr. Editor a letter from Commissioner Poole which I heartily approve, and will suggest that at the next meeting of our Southern Cotton Association we take suitable steps to bring the resources of our county prominently before the public at the coming State Fair to be held at Montgomery Oct. 22 to 27th, and in this connection I want to urge all to attend our next meeting on 1st Saturday in August, and let us discuss this fair proposition and the resources of Chilton county.

Yours for the good of all,
F. A. GULLEDGE.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE AND INDUSTRIES.

Montgomery, Ala., June 11, 1906
Mr. F. A. Gulledge, Verbena, Ala.

Dear Mr. Gulledge: Referring to our frequent conversations in regard to a County exhibit from Chilton county at the State Fair in Montgomery this fall, I want to urge upon you and your people the advantages to be derived from such an exhibit to your county and her people. Chilton county is one among the very best counties in Alabama, while her resources are little known to the outside world. Madison county has the reputation of being the best agricultural county in the State; how was this reputation gained, and why have the lands so increased in value? Simply for the reason that she has made exhibits at the various State Fairs, thereby advertising her resources to the world at large.

The Managers of the Fair Association hope to have excursion trains from the North and West with people who are looking for desirable locations in Alabama, and this will be a wonderful opportunity for your county to display her marvelous resources to these people. I believe that every dollar spent on an exhibit will bring a hundred fold return. With best wishes, I am yours very truly,

R. R. POOLE,
Commisioner.

Mount Moriah.

Dear Editor—I will give you a few dots from this place, as I never see anything from here. The singing class from this neighborhood went to the all day singing at Mineral Springs last Sunday. We went at the request of Mr. Arch Glass, who taught the class to sing. We had a fine singing and a good time all around.

We are going to have Children's Day services at Mount Moriah, the second Sunday in July. We also have an invitation to attend an all-day singing at Pleasant Grove M E. church, on Saturday before the second Sunday in July. Also there will be an all-day singing at Oak Grove school house, the fourth Sunday in June.

SUNDAY SCHOOL GIRL.

The sincerest tribute that can be paid to superiority is imitation. The many imitations of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve that are now before the public prove it the best. Ask for DeWitt's. Good for burns, scalds, chaffed skin, eczema, tetter, cuts, bruises, boils and piles. Highly recommended and reliable. Sold by Upchurch Drug co.

Thorsby.

With the "Good old summer time" comes the work of caring for the fruit, but none complain of the "honest sweat," when rewarded by a good harvest.

Death From Lockjaw

never follows an injury dressed with Bucklen's Arnica Salve. Its antiseptic and healing properties prevent blood poisoning. Chas. Oswald, merchant, of Rensselaerville, N. Y., writes: "It cured Seth Burch, of this place, of the ugliest sore on his neck I ever saw." Cures Cuts, Wounds, Burns and Sores. 25c at Upchurch Drug co.

Thorsby "Introduced."

After sending word in advance that they intended to take both games, the Thorsby ball team came to town Saturday and went down in two humiliating defeats. The Clanton boys have been putting in some good practice lately and were entirely to fast for Thorsby. They stole 9 bases, got 19 hits, and won the game 14 to 1. It was evident from the start that Thorsby was out-classed, and the spectators, and even some of the Clanton players, rooted for Thorsby in both games but could do no good. The Blue Darters were a little more merciful in their game with Thorsby, and contented themselves by taking the game 11 to 8. Clanton and the Blue Darters play at Verbena Saturday. Thorsby has also been challenged, and it is very probable that all three of the teams will meet again Saturday.

You cannot induce a lower animal to eat heartily when not feeling well. A sick dog starves himself, and gets well. The stomach, once overworked, must have rest the same as your feet or eyes. You don't have to starve to rest your stomach. KODOL FOR DYSPEPSIA takes up the work for your stomach, digests what you eat and gives it a rest. Puts it back in condition again. You can't feel good with a disordered stomach. Try Kodol. Sold by Upchurch Drug co.

There was a singing at Mineral Springs last Sunday. Mr. Archie Glasscock brought his class from Cedar Grove and sang untill noon, and Prof. Johnie Gore brought his class from Collins Chapel and sang in the afternoon, and we had some as good singing as we have had in some time.

Providence and Union Grove will play ball on the latter's ground Saturday.

I would like to correct the correspondent in last weeks' Union about the ball game between the Clanton second nine and Waddy. Mahan pitched the first inning and they made 4 runs, Dorminy then went in the box and they made 2 runs, Kilgore pitched the next 2 innings and they made 4 runs, and then Mahan went back in and for the next 3 innings Clanton did'nt score. What It Means We're tired of answering questions!

"Fewer Gallons, Wears Longer" means that you don't have to paint your house so often, and you don't have to use so much paint. Costs less for the job, and you don't have to do the job so often.

The new paint is not new at all. Its the biggest selling paint in the United States, and the firm is 152 years old.

Devoe Lead and Zinc—fewer gallons than mixed paints, wears twice as long as lead and oil.

THE WOMAN BEAUTIFUL

Florence Drug Co. Tell Why Laxakola Tonic Tablets Beautify the Skin.

For the short time that Laxakola Tonic Tablets have been on sale at Florence drug store probably no other laxative remedy has ever given such universal satisfaction.

But great success never comes without great merit. These little tablets contain in proper proportion just enough dandelion, cascarin, and other mild vegetable extracts to make Laxakola a perfect tonic, laxative, and a remarkable skin beautifier as well. One lady in Clanton suffering from biliousness, impure blood, costiveness, an a muddy, cloudy complexion declares that Laxakola tablets are worth $10.00 a bottle.

By their benificial action upon the liver and the bile pigments, they have worked wonders in this lady's case, and her skin is now so clear and healthy that her friends are complimenting her on her improved appearance.

Just try a 25 cent bottle on Florence Drug co's. guarantee, and this grand tonic laxative will do more to purify your blood, bring color to your face, clear up your skin and complexion, and make you vigorous and healthy than any other remedy you ever heard of.

Death of Mrs. W. M. Gore.

Mrs. W. M. Gore died at her home near Clanton, last Sunday evening, and was buried on Monday, Rev A. C. Swindall performing the ceremony. She had been an invalid for two or three years, and was about 64 years old. The deceased leaves a husband and five children to mourn her demise.

There is no need worrying along in discomfort because of a disordered digestion. Get a bottle of KODOL FOR DYSPEPSIA, and see what it will do for you. Kodol not only digests what you eat and gives that tired stomach a needed rest, but is a corrective of the greatest efficiency. Kodol relieves indigestion, dyspepsia, palpitation of the heart, flatulence, and sour stomach. Kodol will make your stomach young and healthy again. You will worry just in the proportion that your stomach worries you. Worry means the loss of ability to do your best. Worry is to be avoided at all times. Kodol will take the worry out of your stomach Sold by Upchurch Drug co.

Paint! Paint!

Now is the time to give your house a new coat of paint, and we have the paint that will wear well and please you.

Our Sun Proof has proven to be what we claim for it, a thoroughly good paint. The handsome school house in Clanton is painted with it; the new two-story hotel belonging to Mr. W. M. Wilson, will be an attractive building indeed when Mr. R. J. Lake finishes it with a few coats of Sun Proof Paint. The Capitol of Alabama is also painted with Sun Proof, just recently finished, and if this paint was not good it would not be used on the above buildings.

The old reliable Hammar Paint is too well known throughout the county to need further praise, has been sold in Clanton eight or ten years. So let us furnish you the paint you may need from time to time, will appreciate your trade.

FIRE.

Some time ago, I said in an article published in the Banner, regarding the San Francisco fire, that I would give detailed estimate of the losses there by my companies as soon as final settlement could be made, and while as yet the adjustment is not entirely over, yet we are able to approximately estimate our losses The Liverpool & London & Globe will lose $4,248,000, all of which will be paid from the home office in England, without using any of their United States assets. This will make over $100,000,000 paid to policy holders in the United States by this company. My other three companies' losses, towit: The London & Lancashire, the Phenix of Brooklyn and the Atlanta-Birmingham are in proportion; all has, and will be paid without shocking their assets in the least.

Weight of the World.

The world is to be weighed once more, doubts being entertained by scientists as to the accuracy of previous estimate, but whether the error be a case of short weight or over weight has yet to be settled. So an expedition is to set out to Egypt, where, strange as it sounds, the great pyramids will be utilized by the investigators. First the weight of the pyramid will be ascertained, and then the weight of the earth estimated from its proportionate size. The swinging of pendulums will be the gauge, for the pendulum is affected by the power of attraction exerted by a large or small body—a mere question of arithmetic to the man of science. From the force exerted by the pyramid in pulling the swinging pendulum from its natural course the weight of the pyramid can be estimated, and that of the earth—the exact size of which is known—can then be easily calculated.

The most gigantic of fishes is the great whale shark (Rhineodon typus). It is not uncommon in the Indian ocean, where it reaches a length of sixty feet, living lazily near the surface and rarely approaching land. With a mouth sometimes four feet wide, it has very small teeth, its food being mostly minute crustaceans.

The value of the products of the soil of the United States for several years has reached $5,000,000,000 annually, while for 1905 it was $6,315,000,000. A loss of 10 per cent on all growing crops caused by insect injuries is estimated by the netomologist of the department of agriculture, with $200,000,000 further damage to crops in storage and to our forest interests.

Where Britain Keeps Ahead.

The British are still far and away ahead of any other nation in the matter of shipbuilding. Lloyd's returns show that in 1904 the United Kingdom launched 712 ships, with a total displacement of 1,205,162 tons. Thirty-seven ships of war were also launched within the year, the tonnage being 127,175. One of these, the Caronia, has the enormous displacement of 20,000 tons, while the Victoria, of 14,000 tons, is the biggest turbine warship afloat.

England's most formidable shipbuilding rival is the United States, which launched 227 merchant ships of over a hundred tons each, the total tonnage being 238,518. Uncle Sam also launched 19 ships of war, with a total tonnage of 170,885.

Germany is third on the shipbuilding list, with 149 new merchant vessels, aggregating 200,000 tons, to her credit in 1904, besides 11 warships, with a tonnage of nearly 45,000.

Next comes France, with 80,000 tons in 67 merchantment and 43,600 tons in 9 ships of war. In ordinary times Russia might have had fifth place, but instead of her Italy enjoyed the distinction, with the modest output of 8 merchant vessels and 8 warships, with a total tonnage of 58,662.

First Newspaper Telegram.

The newspaper which received the first telegrapihc report was the London Morning Chronicle, May 8, 1845. During the railway mania of 1845, a meeting of consideramle importance was convened at Portsmouth to take into consideration the respective merits of the proposed lines from London. A great desire existed to know the result of the meeting, and as it was not to take place at Porsmouth until after the last London train, recourse was had to the telegraph.

A full report of the meeting, headed "Portsmouth Lines, Communicated by Electric Telegraph," appeared in a London paper next morning. The editor called attention to the fact in the leading columns as follows: "In our article on railways will be found a report of a meeting held yesterday evening at Portsmouth which was transmitted by electric telegraph. This is the first example of the electric telegrahp being used for such a purpose and it indicates the important and numerous services which that valuable invention will soon render to the public."

A Continent of Ice.

The largest mass of ice in the world is probably the one which fills up nearly the whole of the interior of Greenland, where it has acumulated since before the dawn of history. It is believed to now form a block about 600,000 square miles in area and averaging a mile and a half in thickness. According to these statistics the lump of ice is larger in volume than the whole body of water in the Mediterranean, and there is enough of it to cover the whole of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland with a layer about seven miles thick. If it were cut into two convenient slabs and built up equally upon the entire surface of "gallant little Wales" it would form a pile more than 120 miles high. There is ice enough in Greenland to bury the entire area of the United States a quarter of a mile deep.

WHAT JOY THEY BRING

as with joyous hearts and smiling faces they romp and play—when in health—and how conducive to health the games in which they indulge, the outdoor life they enjoy, the cleanly, regular habits they should be taught to form and the wholesome diet of which they should partake. How tenderly their health should be preserved, not by constant medication, but by careful avoidance of every medicine of an injurious or objectionable nature, and if at any time a remedial agent is required, to assist nature, only those of known excellence should be used; remedies which are pure and wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, like the pleasant laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. Syrup of Figs has come into general favor in many millions of well informed families, whose estimate of its quality and excellence is based upon personal knowledge and use.

Syrup of Figs has also met with the approval of physicians generally, because they know it is wholesome, simple and gentle in its action. We inform all reputable physicians as to the medicinal principles of Syrup of Figs, obtained, by an original method, from certain plants known to them to act most beneficially and presented in an agreeable syrup in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to promote the pleasant taste; therefore it is not a secret remedy and hence we are free to refer to all well informed physicians, who do not approve of patent medicines and never favor indiscriminate self-medication.

Please to remember and teach your children also that the genuine Syrup of Figs always has the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package and that it is for sale in bottles of one size only. If any dealer offers any other than the regular Fifty cent size, or having printed thereon the name of any other company, do not accept it. If you fail to get the genuine you will not get its beneficial effects. Every family should always have a bottle on hand, as it is equally beneficial for the parents and the children, whenever a laxative remedy is required.

DISFIGURING SKIN HUMOR.

Impossible to Get Employment, as Face and Body Were Covered With Sores —Cured by Cuticura.

"Since the year 1894 I have been troubled with a very bad case of eczema which I have spent hundreds of dollars trying to cure, and I went to the hospital, but they failed to cure me, and it was getting worse all the time. Five weeks ago my wife bought a box of Cuticura Ointment and one cake of Cuticura Soap, and I am pleased to say that I am now completely cured and well. It was impossible for me to get employment, as my face, head and body were covered with it. The eczema first appeared on the top of my head, and it had worked all the way around down the back of my neck and around to my throat, down my body and around the hips. It itched so I would be obliged to scratch it, and the flesh was raw. I am now all well, and I will be pleased to recommend the Cuticura Remedies to all persons who wish a speedy and permanent cure of skin diseases. Thomas M. Rossiter, 290 Prospect Street, East Orange, N. J. Mar. 30, 1905."

Insensible to Pain.

A mother's love for her children is always being illustrated, not only in books, but in real life. A true story is told of a lady whose baby was very ill and who sat watching the child with absorbed attention, every instant fearing another convulsion and praying for deliverance from it. At her side stood an older child, who had stolen into the room unobserved and who was trying to prick the little black spots in mamma's muslin sleeve with a needle he had found. Presently the father came in, and the little child was seen and sent away.

"What is the matter with your arm?" whispered the gentleman to his wife when at last they turned to each other and smiled their thankfulness that the baby had fallen asleep.

"I don't know," said she. "Nothing that I am aware of."

She put up her hand and found that the thin muslin sleeve was soaked with blood. The little boy had become so absorbed in his sport that he had jabbed with all his might, and she in her terrible anxiety had not felt the thrusts.

Cleaning Men's Clothes.

A tailor of fifty years' experience gives the following information:

All men's clothing to be cleaned should be thoroughly beaten and brushed. Some things are so dirty it is absolutely necessary to wash them as any other woolen goods. Iron on the wrong side. To remove spots, use the following:

Two ounces of hartshorn, an ounce of castile soap, a quarter of an ounce of saltpeter. Dissolve in a quart of rain water.

He has used many cleaning mixtures, but considers this the best. Put a wad of soft cloth (like an old towel) under the spot, saturate well and rub hard. The secret of success lies in hard rubbing, which will drive the grease through into the wad of cloth. Rub dark goods with dark woolen and light goods with light. Press on right side with damp cloth between iron and garment.—Buffalo News.

Indian Summer.

Indian summer is the short spell of warm days in October or November accentuated by the first chill of autumn which has preceded it. Sometimes it lasts as long as a fortnight, and it has been observed to recur twice or thrice in a season, though this is quite rare. An atmospheric phenomenon of the same nature has received the name of "St. Luke's summer" in Germany, "St. Martin's summer" in England, the feasts of these saints being Oct. 18 and Nov. 11 respectively. The name Indian summer is of an unidentified origin. It has been established that it does not appear on any record earlier than 1794, but when first recorded it was as a term in general use. The use of the expression in 1778 by Horace Walpole clearly referred to the torrid summer of the West Indies and not to this pleasant period of the northern autumn.

A Suggestive Sermon.

The Rev. Dr. Howard, chaplain to Princess Augusta, was so fond of good living that he ran into debt with many of the tradesmen in his parish. It was in their special interests that he one day preached from the text, "Have patience, and I will pay you all." He spoke at great length on the virtues of patience and then proceeded, "I now come to the second part of my discourse, which is, 'and I will pay you all,' but that I shall defer to a future occasion."—London Standard.

The Alexandrite.

Don't think that your knowledge of wonder gems is complete till you have seen an "alexandrite," green by day and red by night. And such a green—olive bronze, with a potent suggestion that red is there. Green when held in the sunlight. The Tearless Battle.

The Tearless battle was fought between the Spartans on one side and the Arcadians and Arjives on the other 367 B. C. Not a Spartan fell in the engagement, and so, Plutarch says, the Lacedaemonians called it the Tearless battle.

DIGESTION DECIDES IT.

Good Digestion More than Half the Battle

Life is a constant struggle for success because success is supposed to insure happiness.

Ambition and ability make for success, but without health too, failure is more than probable.

If the digestion is poor, the nerves unsteady, the blood thin, the weight less than it should be, and ambition and energy at a low tide because of stomach trouble, failure is almost a certainty.

Whether you make much or little of life, whether you fail or succeed, your digestion largely decides it. So confident are Florence Drug Co. that Pepsikola Tablets will renew your energy, steady your nerves, drive away that tired feeling, give tone to the digestion, improve your appetite, bring up your weight to where it should be, put new color into your cheeks and new life into your stomach, that they continue to sell this grand dyspepsia remedy on the money-back plan.

Have confidence. The guarantee absolutely protects you. Florence Drug Co. will gladly pay back your quarter if at the end of the ten days' treatment you have not been cured or decidedly benefitted.

American Exuberance.

A prominent English statesman who visited this country a few years ago was talking with friends about the national characteristics of Americans and gave it as his opinion that the westerner is the most truly humorous of the citizens of the United States.

"Why," said the Briton in explanation, "a relative of mine who frequently visits the States for purposes of sport tells me that he was entranced by the reply made to him by the proprietor of a hotel in Nebraska when he asked if there were any quail in the vicinity.

"'Quail!' exclaimed the proprietor. 'I should say so! Why, they've got to be a regular nuisance round here. My cook complains that she can't throw a piece of toast out of the window without four or five fat quail fighting to see which shall get on it!'"—Woman's Home Companion.

The Antiquity of Football.

If it is not the oldest game in the world football is not far from it. But it has never been a game in which puny nations played. The Greek game was originally called pheninda, or feinting, later it was called episkyrus, epikoinos, and lastly harpaston, under which name it came to resemble football. The Roman game was follis and was less rough. There was a center runner in harpaston, around whom the game was fought out. One side was given the ball; the other side chose a center. The side with the ball stood some distance back from a line on which the center runner was posted, and at signal the ball was thrown past the middle man. Players could be held back from securing the ball in any way, though the Greek youths had no rush formation, never seeming to have learned the value of team work.—Outing.

Acute Sense of Hearing.

"Yes," said the prosperous lawyer in speaking to a friend, "I had a long wait before I got any practice, but I am certainly satisfied now with my profession and its emoluments.

"The early days, the waiting for clients, was hard, though. Why, do you know that I got so after awhile that when I heard a footstep on the stairs I could tell ninety-nine times out of a hundred whether or not the person was coming to my office?"

"Well, that is strange," replied his friend. "Your sense of hearing must have been very acute."

"Not so much that," replied the lawyer. "You see, I made up my mind that they were not coming to my office, and ninety-nine times out of a hundred I was right."

WILL CURE CONSUMPTION.

A. A. Herron, Flinch, Ark., writes: "Foley's Honey and Tar is the best preparation for coughs, colds and lung trouble. I know that it has cured consumption in the first stages." You never heard of any one using Foley's Honey and Tar and not being satisfied." Upchurch Drug co.

A man who is in perfect health, so he can do an honest day's work when necessary, has much for which he should be thankful. Mr. L. C. Bodgers, of Branchton, Pa., writes that he was not only unable to work, but he couldn't stoop over to tie his his own shoes. Six bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure made a new man of him. He says, "Success to Foley's Kidney Cure." Upchurch Drug Co.

MAKE MONEY.

Here is an interesting study: Make out a list of all the people you know, and estimate the amount of money each one earns in a year. Total it up. The amount will be surprisingly large. Now, of all those people, only the few who SAVE SOMETHING really MAKE anything at all. Simply earning money isn't making it; what slips through the earner's fingers is finally "made" by somebody else. Don't forget to count yourself in on the list, and if you are not "making" money, begin now to save with us. One dollar will open your bank account.

Nocatee, Fla., June 19, 1906

Dear old Banner—When we get you it always makes us think of our loved ones and friends we have in that dear old county, the land of our childhood. I often think of how people toil and labor through all the long years and how little they have to show for it at close of harvest. Here one can plant beans, pepper, etc., and in 7 weeks are realizing on crop. I hired Mr. Vance, a young man from your county, for 4 months and he kept 10 acre orange grove in fine fix and raised $60 worth of beans, $50 worth peas, and nice lot of cabbage, cucumbers, turnips, cantaloups, 50 bushels corn and over $300 worth melons. On the same ground I will now make tons and tons of fine crab grass hay. I have never seen a finer place than this for anyone to accumulate wealth. There is plenty of work here all the year round and people are able and willing to pay for same. We have no dull season here. We are just now getting through with vegetable crop and in short time oranges will be moving, and if you want to see people hustle, and see the money on trees, just visit us along in the fall.

A great many people in Alabama imagine that we simply burn up in summer, but not so. We have much pleasanter weather here in summer than you have. It rains nearly every day in summer and that makes air cool. Our nights are simply fine. We have no hot sultry nights as you do in Alabama. Let me say to the young men who are toiling to raise cotton, come to Florida and get you out an orange grove and raise vegetables and cultivate your grove and in a few years you can have money growing on trees. I have 10 acres in grove just coming into bearing and yesterday was offered 4 times what it cost me 18 months ago and my wife said no that she would not take $5000,00 for it, that she expected her children to gather money from those trees and that she expected to arrange so they could not sell it. but that for the next 100 years she expected her heirs to gather fruit from that grove.

There is plenty of room here for all who are willing to work. So we have many good Alabamians here and hope to see many more coming and settling among us.

Merchants Involved in Rebates.

Kansas City.—Proceedings may be brought against shoe and dry goods merchants of St. Louis, Omaha and Kansas City on a charge of accepting rebates from railways secured for them by George L. Thomas, the New York freight broker, who, with his chief clerk, L. B. Taggart, were in the federal court here fined and given sentence. These firms, numbering seven, were mentioned by Judge McPherson in sentencing Thomas and Taggart. He declared that the rebate taker was as guilty as the rebate giver and added:

"I assume that these concerns will be proceeded against for receiving these unlawful rebates, which can be done either by indictment or information."

While not admitting that such action would be begun against these merchants, A. S. VanValkenburgh, the district attorney who prosecuted the cases, intimated that the matter probably would be brought to the attention of the grand jury next fall.

Summary of Senate.

Washington, D. C.—The three hours of Saturday's session of the Senate previous to the closing of the doors for executive busines were divided between the discussion of the agricultural appropriation bill and a resolution by Senator Long calling on the attorney-general for information concerning the suits brought by him under the anti-trust laws.

The meat inspection debate occurred on a motion of Senator Proctor to send the agricultural bill to conference, and after speeches by Senators Bailey and Gallinger the motion was adopted.

The Long resolution was amended at the instance of Senators Foraker and Baker, but its consideration was not concluded.

The Sundry civil bill was sent to conference report on the bill, leaving only one item of disagreement to be acted upon.

A number of bills to which there was no objection were passed late in the day after the executive session.

Changes Made in Membership.

Washington, D. C.—The house Saturday adopted unanimously the election committee report that Ernest Wood was not elected to membership to the house from Missouri and that Henry M. Coudrey was elected to such membership.

There was no opposition on the republican side when, by request of Mr Bartholdt, of Missouri, Mr. Coudrey presented himself at the bar of the house to take the oath.

The house also adopted a resolution that A. J. Houston was not elected a member of the Fifty-ninth congress from the Second congressional district of Texas. The sitting member, M. L. Brooks, therefore retains his seat.

The bill prescribing the duties of deputy collectors was passed without debate.

Death in Mud.

New York.—After more than twenty-four hours of pumping and digging the bodies of the two men trapped by a blow-out in one of the Pennsylvania Company's East river tunnels have been recovered.

Instead of being blown out into the river through the break at the base of the shield, as had been supposed, they were caught by the inrush of soft mud and water in the lower chamber of the shield, after the air pressure had found vent, and were found in postures indicating that they had strangled by inches.

Their feet were fast to heavy mud, and there were indications that they had made desperate efforts to release themselves. Both bodies were found in standing postures.

Pensacola Gets No Graving Dock.

Washington, D. C.—Senator Hale has presented a further report on the naval appropriation bill, leaving but one item of disagreement. Among the recessions on the part of the senate was included the provision for a graving dock at Pensacola, Fla. Senator Mallory expressed disappointment over this surrender, but did not resist the adoption of the report.

One Killed in Collision.

Birmingham, Ala.—One man was killed and five more or less severely injured in a head-on collision between a Southern freight train and a Louisville and Nashville freight train near Seymore, in Bibb county. The accident occurred about noon Saturday, and the trains colliding were westbound No. 148 of the Louisville and Nashville and eastbound No. 83 of the Southern.

Professor Moissan declared at the Paris Academy of Science that he had succeeded in boiling copper at a temperature of 2,100 degrees by means of a powerful electric current.

Wilson Elected Mayor.

Cordele, Ga.—Hon. R. L. Wilson was elected mayor of Cordele Thursday without opposition to fill the unexpired term of Mayor C. C. Cutts, de-

HARMONY IN SEVENTH.

Republican Differences Were Settled Outside Committee Meeting.

Gadsden, Ala.—Contrary to expectations the meeting of the Seventh district congressional executive committee passed off very harmoniously. It was stated that their differences were settled outside of the committee meeting. The meeting was called to order by Chairman Thomas H. Stephens, and proceeded with the business on hand. There was some division and much discussion as to the date, July 25 finally being decided upon. The basis of representation was fixed at one for each 100 republican votes or fraction thereof cast in the last presidential election. Nearly all the committeemen were present.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—The republican congressional committee for the Sixth district met in Tuscaloosa Saturday and passed resolutions unanimously endorsing the national administration and the state republican organization under the leadership of James O. Thompson and Charles H. Scott. The committee determined to call a district convention to meet in this city on September 8.

LOSE DISPENSARY FIGHT.

County Committee Decides That the Question Is Not Proper Subject for It to Pass Upon..

Decatur, Ala.—The advocates of dispensaries for Decatur and New Decatur met defeat before the county democratic executive committee, which met at Hartselle. Rev. S. E. Wasson and Capt. Samuel Blackwell presented petitions from the people of the Decaturs asking for a primary election on the question. Judge O. Kyle, Judge John C. Eyster and E. Ed Albert offered petitions and took the position that it was not a question for the committee to pass upon. A heated debate followed and the anti-dispensary advocates won.

August 27 was fixed as the date for holding the primary election. The following committeemen were elected to fill vacancies: C. Ed Albes, Decatur; J. C. Sparkman, Oak Rridge; Tom Holt, Shady Grove.

Teachers Elected in Cullman.

Cullman, Ala.—The trustees of the public school elected the following teachers for the next school term at a meeting held Wednesday night: Prof. J. L. Gibson, principal; Miss Nora Goff, Mrs. Mae Hickman and Miss Margarette Ehrensperger were elected assistants. Prof. William M. Woods, who is now teaching in Colorado, will be tendered a position in the faculty, and the Cullman people would be very much pleased to hear of his acceptance, as he is considered one of the best educators in the state.

Selma and Inspection.

Selma, Ala.—A special meeting of the city council of Selma was held for the purpose of reading a special report of the board of health on the matter of the condition of the slaughter houses around the city. The report of the board of health showed that the condition of the slaughter houses was even worse than those those of the packing houses made public by the investigation in Chicago. At the conclusion of the report the matter was referred to the committee on hygiene with Mayor Atkins and with power to act. Some months ago the council passed an ordinance providing for the establishement of a union slaughter house and for a meat and milk inspector. The committee on hygiene will meet immediately, and as they have the power to act they will immediately secure the services of a competent meat inspector and use their best endeavers to give the people of the city better meats.

Anniston, Ala.—The contest for the new court house to be built in Clay county has been resumed. The citizens of Lineville have out new petitions, and about 100 of these petitions are being circulated in different portions of the county. A defect has been found in the contract, and the failure to get the money on the warrants will give the people of Lineville time to thoroughly canvass the county. It is thought that a sufficient number will be secured in a few days to authorize ernor. Ashland and Lineville are both anxious for the new court house, and it is very probable that the town that gets it will pay several thousand towards the new building.

Day Current Provided.

Newnan, Ga.—For the purpose of encouraging manufacturing enterprises to locate in Newnan, as well as to meet the present needs and demands, the city council has provided for a day current of electricity. Some months since the electric plant, which has been owned by private parties, was purchased by the city and is now ope-

CONTRACT LET.

The Tidewater Development Company Gives Job to Cleveland Concern.

Birmingham, Ala.—The Roberts & Abbott Company, engineers of Cleveland, O., have secured the contract to do the engineering for the Gadsden and Tuscaloosa electric line. The contract was closed last week in Washington, where Mr. E. P. Roberts, president of the company, met Mr. J. M. Dewberry, president of the Tidewater Development Company, of this city, who has the project in hand.

The report of Mr. Roberts upon the proposition while in the district early this month caused the promoters to determine to put it through as rapidly as possible.

The surveys begin July 7, and construction will be let in the fall. The electric line and sidings will be about 150 miles of track. It is a great undertaking, and has for its object an independent freight line to the sea. Connecting with the Warrior river at Tuscaloosa it is stated that it will not only give the business interests of Birmingham the advantages of interurban passenger and freight service, but places the advantages of the river at the disposal of the mining, manufacturing and mercantile interests.

Alabama Home-Coming.

Birmingham, Ala.—A meeting of the directors of the Commercial Club was held at the club rooms Saturday morning. There was a large attendance, the following directors being present: President Robert Jemison, Jr., W. W. Crawford, C. W. Ufford, T. G. Bush, T. H. Molton, F. M. Jackson, S. A. Ward, Ross Smith, F. I. Tarrant, Hill Ferguson, Henry Hiden, Culpepper Exum, W. T. Archer, J. W. McQueen, W. D. Nesbitt and M. V. Joseph.

It was proposed to the directors that a home-coming of Alabamians who have left the state be inaugurated as a feature of the State fair in October, and that invitations be sent out for them to assemble in Birmingham during the week from October 15 to 20. It was decided to adopt the plan, and Mayor Ward will be asked to issue a proclamation to that effect. The governor of the state will also be asked to issue a similar proclamation

Executive Committee.

Birmingham, Ala.—The sub-committee of the Jefferson county democratic executive committee met Saturday and decided that the sum of $3,500 will be needed to defray the expenses of the primary, August 27.

While the amounts of the assessments against the different candidates were not determined, the sub-committee made a rough estimate based on the present probable number of candidates for the respective offices. This is the way it was figured out:

Senior Judge (two), $100; associate judge (two), $100; sheriff (seven), $250; auditor (two), $60; road supervisor (three), $50; senator (two), $40; representatives (twenty), $25.

New Railroads.

Anniston, Ala.—Local papers have contained several references to a railroad projected from Nashville through Huntsville, with lines there diverging via Birmingham to Pensacola and via Anniston to Talladega, making one of the most valuable railroad systems in the south. At Nashville on Saturday afternoon was consummated a trade, whereby the building of the road is said to be assured. President J. H. Connor, of that road, who has projected and and financed its building to the present time, has disposed of the road to New York capitalists, and he and the old directors of the company will retire, though the new owners will have the co-operation and hearty support in the building of the road that will conect Nashville by a direct route with the Birmingham district and the dock facilities of Pensacola, Fla.

Centre, Ala.—A loss of $500 was sustained by Mrs. J. L. Pitts near Centre by the burning of her dwelling and smoke house and the contents of the two buildings. The family were absent in the field when the fire originated and succeeded in saving only a small portion of their household effects from the flames. There was no insurance.

Madrid.—The Duke of Almodovar, minister of foreign affairs, who acted as president of the conference on Moroccan reforms, held at Algeciras early in the present year, died at 2:50 o'clock Saturday afternoon. He was born in 1854.

Prominent Speakers Heard.

Buchanan, Ga.—County Superintendent J. W. White held the annual teachers' institute at Haralson, being assisted by Prof. E. H. Hamby. Several very able talks and speeches were made by Col. J. T. Latham, Prof. G. D. Frazier, Dr. G. M. White, Col. E. S. Griffith, Rev. B. H. Green, Hon. J. R. Lovern, of Cedartown, and Edgar Turner of Carrollton.

BRYAN PRESENTED

First Levee Held by Newly Crowned Ruler of Norway.

THE KING RECEIVED AMERICANS.

Norwegians Who Went From This Country Were Given Special Audience—Coronation Crowds.

Trondhjem.—King Haakon and Queen Maud Saturday held their first levee, and the palace was the town's center of interest. All the special embassies, statesmen, officials and other prominent persons attended. The American special ambassador, Charles H. Graves, with his staff and the ladies of the American party, were present. Mr. Graves presented Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Bryan, Mrs. Marshall Field, Mrs. Eddy, Mrs. Meade, Miss Eddy, of Chicago, Mrs. Slater and Miss Gwynn, of Washington, and Mr. and Mrs. Myer, of New York.

The sun shone warmly and Trondhjem was made brilliant by the uniformed and brightly costumed assemblage, presenting an exceedingly attractive scene.

King Haakon received in audience the Norwegian American delegates to his coronation on Monday. Dr. Daae, of Chicago, on that occasion presented to the king a congratulatory address, and the Norwegian consul at Chicago, F. G. Gade, gave the king a portfolio containing music, poems and drawings in behalf of the Norwegians of that city. The Norwegian American delegations numbered about a dozen.

The great bulk of the Norwegians, who came to Norway from America ostensibly for the coronation did not come to Trondhjem, but instead scattered to their former homes in various parts of the country, love of their old homesteads and kinsmen proving stronger than their desire to visit Trondhjem. In any case the trip here is difficult and somewhat expensive, and besides the coronation festivities are not confined to Trondhjem, but are universal throughout Norway.

The crowd which came to see the king and queen crowned is already breaking up, but the special embassies remained until Tuesday or Wednesday. The formal leavetaking of the embassies took place Tuesday. The first to depart left here by train Friday night, and Saturday foreign excursion steamers hoisted their anchors and steamed down the fiord. The formal program closed Wednesday, June 27, with an excursion around the fiord, but King Haakon and Queen Maud will remain at Trondhjem until Emperor William comes here, July 8.

ANOTHER MASSACRE FEARED.

Citizens Panic-Stricken Over Rumor That Rioting Is to Be Renewed.

St. Petersburg.—Dispatches from Bialystok report that the citizens there are panic-stricken owing to uncomfortable rumors that the excesses will be revived. There is a general display of ikons and crosses before the houses to protect the inhabitants from attack. Patrols are to be seen everywhere and strict martial law is enforced. Three men, two of whom were were Christians, were recently shot for failing to obey orders to halt.

In St. Petersburg a sergeant of police was killed Friday night in the turbulent Karvn district, which is the center of an armed revolutionary organization.

Louisville, Ky.—The Louisville Packing Company, said to be the largest owned by the Cudahy Packing Company south of Chicago, has been closed down for an indefinite period. The Louisville Packing Company was established in 1892, employed about 350 000 sheep, 20,000 cattle and 300,000 hogs. The plant and its equipment are valued at $800,000 and furnished about 60 per cent of the local meat supply.

Costly Right of Way.

New York.—After a stubborn legal battle, which lasted about six years in New York state courts, work on the New York and Port Chester railroad was started Saturday. The road will run through a private right of way from Port Chester to New York and will cost more than $30,000,000.

Carries Out Death Sentence.

Voronezh, Russia.—The peasants of the village of Krutnyaforki, enraged at the killing of a cow by two members of the rural police, called a commune meeting, formally condemned the two men to death and carried out the sentence.

Special License Bill.

Washington, D. C.—The following bill has been passed by the senate:

Amending section 2871, revised statutes, relative to special licenses for the loading and unloading of vessels from foreign ports.

In the town of Tollesbury, England, a place of 2,000 inhabitants, there is only one physician and there is no [illegible]

STANDARD OIL PROSECUTION.

Rockefeller, Rogers and Archbold Believed to Be Beyond Reach.

Washington, D. C.—Although the department of justice has announced that it proposes to begin criminal proceedings against the officials of the Standard Oil, the intimation is given that it is doubtful if indictments may be found against such men in the Standard Oil Company as John D. Rockefeller, H. H. Rogers and John D. Archbold.

An official of the department of justice indicated that while the government would press the prosecutions vigorously, he did not have an idea that the officials of the Standard Oil Company would be reached in criminal proceedings any more than the presidents of railroads personally are reached through similar proceedings.

"It may be," he said, "that we will get some of the officials half way up. We are not after mere clerks, but if responsible officials have been violating the law, we desire to bring them to book."

Attorney-General Moody has had a conference with the president regarding the proposed prosecutions, but at the conclusion of the interview he declined to indicate when or where the proceedings of the government against the Standard Oil Company would be instituted.

Cramp Company Gets Contract.

Washington, D. C.—William Cramp & Sons Ship and Engine Building Company, of Philadelphia, was the lowest bidder for ships of the Michigan and South Carolina type with the machinery as prescribed by the navy department. The department plans for machinery will probably be accepted by the navy department in preference of plans of bidders as submitted in other proposals. The bids for the prescribed machinery were known as Class 1 bids, and the Cramps offered to build a ship of this type for $3,540,000. The New York Shipbuilding Company offered the next bid in this class $3,585,000. As one firm is allowed to build only one of the ships, this second bid will doubtless be accepted in case the department decides to accept the class 1 plan.

Bailey Finds Defect.

Washington, D. C.—That there is a fatal defect in the meat inspection provision of the agricultural appropriation bill as it came from the house of representatives is the opinion of Senator Bailey as expresed in the senate when consideration of Senator Proctor's motion to send the bill to conference was resumed.

Mr. Bailey based his criticism on the clause relating to the inspection of stock entering the packing houses, saying it gives a police supervision that the federal government cannot exercise. He suggested that the provision should be made to read so as to make it unlawful to transport from one state to another any beef or beef products that have not been inspected as provided for by law.

Macaroni Trust Latest.

New York.—Considerable interest has been manifested in financial circles over an announcement of a combination of macaroni manufacturers The capital will be $2,500,000, and the organization will be known as the Flour Products Company. The concerns which will go into the combine, according to the prospectus, are:

The Hotaling-Warner Company, Syracuse, N. Y.; the Cleveland Macaroni Company, Cleveland, O.; the Foulds Milling Company, Chincinnati, O.; National Macaroni Company, Libertyville, Ill.; Minnesota Macaroni Company, St. Paul, Minn.; Crescent Macaroni and Vicker Company, Davenport, Ia., and San Antonio Paste Works, San Antonio, Tex.

They have combined and have an annual output of 27,000,000 pounds.

Washington, D. C.—The house has resumed consideration of the pure food bill. According to the decision of the chair, the committee of the whole, having under consideration the pure food bill, must under the rule adopted report the bill at 3:50, when it was put upon its final passage.

Grain Elevators Burn.

Chicago, Ill.—The Mabbatt Elevators "A" and "B," located at Archer avenue and Wood street, have been destroyed by fire. Both of the buildings were four-story structures and contained 100,000 bushels of grain. So great was the heat that three adjacent buildings were destroyed and twenty-five families were driven from their homes.

Several explosions, which shook the surrounding buildings, followed soon after the fire was discovered. Spontaneous combustion in the dust room is supposed to have been the cause of the fire. The loss to the elevators and their contents is estimated at $250,000.

Elect Old Officers.

Mobile, Ala.—The fourth annual convention of the Alabama Wholesale Grocers' Association at Grand Hotel Point Clear, was brought to a close Friday after a busy session. The old officers of the association were reelected for the ensuing term, and R. M Henderson, of Montgomery, was added to the executive committee. While the next meeting place was discussed, no action was taken.

he passed her on the street his heart would beat faster.

The one great thought the piece in the paper gave Bob was that to acquire this divinity he would have to lift himself to a plane somewhat approaching hers. He was confirmed in this idea by overhearing a bit of conversation between Miss Carson and Stokes, the assistant secretary of the company, who was very sweet on Miss Carson and whom Bob hated with corresponding vigor and consistency. Whenever Miss Carson came to the shop to see her father the assistant secretary, who was a nephew of the president, would find business in the finishing room and improve the opportunity to bask in the sunlight of her smiles—on the company's time, as Bob put it savagely.

"No, it was not Stokes," he said simply.

One day they stood near where Bob was working and he overheard their conversation. It was all about books and authors and plays and philosophy and poetry and theories of life and things of which Bob had a very dim comprehension. But his love was overmastering and when once he recognized his passion he set about finding a way to gratify it with the same dogged persistence that had made him the best workman in the shop. Grasping the idea that learning was the first step to put him within hailing distance of the maiden of his choice, he enrolled himself in a night school and began slowly to master the rudiments. It was uphill work, but ever before him, behind every task, was Minnie's face. He learned slowly but he learned well. Besides this he went further. As he got to read more fluently he bought books and read them assiduously as he ate his meals and at every spare moment. Of course such work counts fast and it was not many months before Bob was a changed man. His whole appearance and attitude changed. The other men recognized the change, although they could not account for it and regarded Bob with an involuntary respect that was new. He felt the new atmosphere and responded to it without knowing it by assuming a sort of natural superiority to the others.

In the meantime Stokes had been intrenching himself more and more in Miss Carson's heart. He was handsome, college bred, of a good family, with a position in the best society, drawing a good salary and with every reason to anticipate rapid advancement and a liberal inheritance. It was altogether natural that Miss Carson should regard him with favor.

But Bob knew that Stokes was not all that the husband of Miss Carson should be and he bided his time. His opportunity came. He was waiting for a street car one day when Stokes came down the street. Just as he was passing Bob a woman met him. She greeted him with a broken-hearted cry.

"Harry, Harry," she cried. "Oh where have you been? Why have you deserted me?"

Stokes pulled the pathetic, weeping creature into a hallway out of sight, but Bob could not help hearing what was said.

"You promised to marry me, you know you did, a hundred, five hundred times. And after it was too late you ran away and I found that you had lied to me and that I do not even know your real name."

What Stokes said was in so low a voice Bob did not hear it. But the woman replied:

"I don't want to be taken care of in that way. I want an honest name for myself and my child. I can work my fingers off for food and shelter, but I want an honest name—and I want you, Harry, because I love you."

Stokes said something else and they went up the stairs in the office building.

"Mr. Timmins."

Bob turned and encountered a white face close to his. It was that of Minnie Carson. She evidently had heard the conversation in the stairway. His heart gave a great, triumphant leap.

"Was that Mr. Stokes talking to that girl in there? I came along just after they went in. From the glimpse I got I thought it was he. Was it?"

Bob never thought so fast in his life. As he looked into the anxious eyes and drawn face of the girl he realized in a flash that she loved Stokes and that the truth would break her heart. But it would save her from a scoundrel and it might give her to him. But the blow would break her heart. All this he thought like a flash, for he did not hesitate when she had finished.

"No, it was not Stokes," he said simply.

"Thank God," said the girl, breaking into a sunny smile. "Thank you and pardon me for my idle curiosity."

And she tripped lightly down the street, leaving Bob with a leaden heart.

MEET TO HONOR GREAT WOMAN.

Gathering Shows Appreciation of Susan B. Anthony's Services.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt presided at a meeting of appreciation on the life and work of the late Susan B. Anthony held in the Hudson theater, New York, and attended by several hundred women. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Interurban Political Equality Council of New York. Mrs. Lillie Devereux Blake spoke of Miss Anthony and the civil rights of women; W. H. Ivins, the republican nominee for the New York mayoralty last fall, read an address on "Miss Anthony, the Reformer." Other addresses were made by Ella A. Bocle, Mrs. Mary Church Terrell of Washington, D. C., who spoke of Miss Anthony's connection with the higher education of women; Rev. Antoinette Brown Blackwell, Anna Garlin Spencer and Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch.

Care of Lambs.

Sheep owners should keep a sharp eye at the present time to the condition of their lambs. If they notice that they are troubled with scours, they have reason to suspect the presence of some intestinal parasites. If the scouring is accompanied by marked emaciation, it is almost certain that the trouble arises from the presence of tape worms or stomach worms. The gasoline treatment should at once be resorted to where any considerable number of animals are affected.

Woman Sculptor Secures Prizes.

Miss Evelyn B. Longman, the sculptor whose figure of "Victory" in Festival hall at the St. Louis fair first gained her public attention, has won by unanimous vote in the competition for the bronze entrance doors of the chapel at the United States Naval academy at Annapolis over twenty-eight sculptors. She will make about $6,000 out of it.

Long Years in Public Service.

Enoch Howlett, city paymaster and one of the oldest public servants of Cambridge, Mass., has just returned to his post at the city hall after a ten days' absence caused by illness. He was 80 years old March 22 and it worries him considerably to have been forced to spend his eightieth birthday at home instead of in the city's service.

Governor a Man of Attainments.

Gov. Pennypacker of Pennsylvania is a man of many sides. For fourteen years he sat as a judge, after having been a farm hand and a business man. He has given a great deal of study to certain branches of chemistry and can compound a prescription with most drug clerks. French, Latin, German, Dutch and Spanish are familiar tongues to him.

Last Book Confederacy Published.

S. P. Mayberry of Portland, Maine, has in his possession the last book published under the confederacy. It is an interesting story of the author's capture and escape from the Yankees. This particular copy of the book was smuggled into Washington by a spy, and President Lincoln exhibited it to his cabinet as an example of the feeling in Richmond.

Miners Resent Paternalism.

A mining company which built a $40,000 clubhouse for its men at Bisbee, Ariz., four years ago, found the building a hindrance, as the men refused to be paternalized, and it was turned over to the Y. M. C. A., which is making a success of the enterprise, and now has twice as many men enrolled as could be secured for the club.

New York City's Debt.

In less than two years New York has issued $132,500,000 of bonds, offset to a small extent, however, by the payment of maturing issues and by an accumulating sinking fund. Deducting the sinking fund, the debt on Jan. 1, was $472,575,000, against $376,000,000 two years before and $279,000,000 on Jan. 1, 1901.

Home-Made Beef Tea.

Dr. Willoughby, lecturing in London on "Popular Food," said that home-made beef tea was only found to contain 1 per cent of albumen, and this was often strained off, leaving only discolored water, more delectable to the nose than nourishing to the body.

BRITAIN'S LOST LAND

SEA ANNUALLY CLAIMS TRIBUTE FROM ISLANDS.

Soft Chalk Cliffs Disappear at a Really Alarming Rate—Towns of Historic Importance of Which There Is Now No Trace.

Dr. Andrew Wilson writes: "Year by year the subject of the lost land of Britain grows in importance. If, as the geologists tell us, we lost annually a mass of land equal to Gibraltar, it may be an easy matter to calculate the period it will take well-nigh to annihilate certain areas of our country. We are told that on our east coast alone there is swept away every year a land mass equal to the island of Heligoland. The rate at which erosion takes place depends on the nature of the materials on which the waves wreak their force and vengeance. When the materials consist of soft clay, gravel and chalk, the rate of sea inroad is very rapid. Where we find hard rocks the rate of wear and tear is appreciably lessened. The sea, moreover, in dealing with even hard rocks, has a very distinct plan of invasion. It will undermine a cliff, for example. It will use the detached boulders as a kind of marine artillery, the waves seizing them and hurling them against the rocks. The undermined cliff topples over and falls, and the waves play round the detached mass until it is worn away. Sometimes the attack assumes a different guise. The waves beat against a cliff and tunnel it through, leaving thus a natural archway such as the locality around Torquay illustrates very aptly. Then, in time, the top of the arch falls in, and the outer side appears as the lone seastack or pillar. This in due season is also worn down by degrees, until it appears as the tangle-covered rock over which the waves are ever breaking.

"To be convinced of the immense loss of land for which the sea is responsible, one has only to consult geological works and ordnance survey records. Prof. Phillips said that the rate at which the cliffs recede from Bridlington to Spurn, a distance of thirty-six miles, equals on an average two yards and a quarter yearly. Estimated for thirty-six miles of coast, the total amount of loss is about thirty acres. Further calculated, the loss since the Norman conquest amounts to one mile in breadth, and more than two miles since York, the old Eboracum, was occupied by the Romans.

"In old Yorkshire maps there are sites of towns marked as Auburn, Hartburn and Hyde. To-day these sites are represented by sandbanks. Near Hornsea there was a street called Horusea Beck, which has long ago been swallowed up. Ravenspur, or Ravensburhg, a rival as a port to Hull, was well known in 1332, for Edward Balliol and the English barons sailed from it to invade Scotland. In 1399 Henry VI. landed here to adjust matters with Richard II. Now not a trace of Ravenspur remains."

ALL TRUE LOVERS OF NATURE.

Preachers, Doctors and Actors the Best Fishermen.

The best fishermen in the world are preachers, doctors and actors. And some of them are mighty hunters. Dr. Robert Collyer once said: "I think a trout really loves to be caught by a nimble angler and breathe out its life on the beautiful green grass." Bishop Dudley of Kentucky lived in the mountains a part of each year and was regarded as the crack shot of the blue grass state. Joseph Jefferson was one of the most expert anglers President Cleveland ever knew. It used to be said of Jefferson: "The fish held a meeting one day while Joe and Grover were wetting their lines and the spokesman said: 'Fellows, I want the first nibble at the old man's bait. All of you stand back. He may be smarter than I am, but I don't believe it. However, accidents happen in the best regulated families. If Rip lands me don't worry. It is always an honor to be a straphanger on his line.'"

Castle Yesterday.

In the Valley of Contentment, just beyond the Hills of Old,
Where the streams are always silver, and the sunshine always gold,
Where the hour is ever morning and the skies are never gray,
In the yellow haze of springtime stands the Castle Yesterday.

Oh, the seasons that we spent there when the whole wide world was young;
The friends we've had as maid and lad, the songs that we have sung!
The echoes of their music can not quite have died away,
But still must thrill the rooftree of the Castle Yesterday.

And the loving hearts we knew there in the time of trust and truth,
Surely still they wait behind us in the Pantheon of youth!
But the angel of the valley at the portal bars our way,
And a flaming sword forbids us from the Castle Yesterday.

When the pilgrimage is ended, may we turn then, may we change
To the vanished and familiar from the present and the strange?
Who so chooses to his heaven—I shall be content to stay
Where the ghosts of dead years wander through the halls of Yesterday.

Work for Yale Man in China.

The largest commission handed out to a Yale man recently is the job which has been offered to Yu Chuan Chang, 1903, by the emperor of China. He has invited Chang to look up the legal system of Germany and to make an official report of it to the imperial government. Chang has just accepted the invitation and has gone to Berlin to begin his task. His report will be made to the imperial Chinese commission which is now touring this country. Chang was given the degree of doctor of common law from Yale law school three years ago, graduating with high honors.

ACTUAL CASH ON EARTH

Let us see how much actual cash there is in the pocketbooks of various nations and understand by comparison how rich we really are. The total stock of money in gold, silver and uncovered paper in the whole world amounts in round figures to $12,000,000,000. In the United States the total stock of money amounts to about $2,000,000,000. Hence, we have in our own purse one-sixth of all the cash of the globe.

These figures—and this is a fact which must be emphasized—do not represent the wealth of nations. Far from it. The figures represent merely the available hard cash. Divide this hard cash of the earth among the inhabitants thereof and each man, woman and child would have $10. But divide the hard cash of the United States among the people thereof and each of us would have $25. And here is one respect in which the people of a foreign country would have the better of us, individually.

Were each nation to divide its cash among its own people each living human being in France would have $35, or $10 more than each person in our country under similar circumstances. Meanwhile, the divided cash of Great Britain would give each Briton only $18; in Germany the cash per capita would amount to only $17, Russia $8, and Japan $3, while in Cuba each person would get a $2 bill.

Of the world's $12,000,000,000 in cash $2,000,000,000 are right here in the United States. And one-twenty-fifth of all the cash in gold in the world is stored in New York alone. This gold, this symbol and synonym of wealth, comes, like all things else, from the ground, from mines. Here, again, we lead all nations for we ourselves produce one-third of all the gold of the earth, as we produce one-third of all the silver.

Our chief contributors to this product are the mines of Colorado, South Dakota, California, Idaho, Montana, Oregon, Arizona, New Mexico and Alaska. Consider merely Cripple Creek! As under a magician's wand, that region has in fourteen years developed until it now covers at least 130 square miles with many cities and towns connected one with another by rail. Here is an earnest, sober population, engaged in the business of extracting precious metals from the mountains to the time, some years, of $25,000,000. So much for the work of man in securing the raw material for money.—Leslie Weekly.

PHYSICIAN MAN OF HUMOR

Old Dr Chase of Andover, Vt., was of sterling character, but somewhat eccentric. He sometimes had business with a Mr. Field of Springfield which took them to a distance.

Once after a long drive they arrived at the doctor's home too late for the regular dinner, but a lunch for the two was placed upon the table. Mr. Field, of course, expected to be asked to share it, but the doctor, without a word, drew up and fell to eating, soon remarking, however: "When folks see food on the table and don't know enough to sit up and eat, I say let them go hungry."

Some time afterward the two men were again at the doctor's under similar circumstances. This time the doctor was detained outside some time after the meal was ready. Mr. Field, not wishing to be caught again, drew up to the table, and was well on with his dinner when the doctor entered the room.

Said Mr. Field: "When folks see food on the table and don't know enough to sit up and eat, I say let them go without."

But the doctor could take a joke as well as give one.

Once when badly off with rheumatism he was called late one very stormy night to a distance to see a man who already owed him a large bill. He got there with great difficulty, but did not dare attempt to return, as the roads were badly washed.

The bed he occupied was more than damp, being under a leaky roof, and he was sure it would be almost, if not quite, the death of him. But, strange to tell, his rheumatism was better from that night, and the doctor, being a just man, entered on J. Jones' bill this item: "Cr. To curing my rheumatism, $10."

THOUGHT MIMIC ACTION REAL

The late Joseph Jefferson used to say that his career came very near being nipped in the bud in a small western town. He at that time was a member of a small pioneer company which progressed by means of three "bull teams" from one mining camp to another. They were always heartily received by the miners and cowboys, who readily paid the five dollars in gold required to witness their performance. Mr. Jefferson was the traditional melodramatic villain, and in the third act was supposed to kidnap "the child." The supposed mother, hearing its cries, rushes upon the scene just as he is about to escape, and fires a fruitless shot from a revolver.

Upon this particular occasion all had gone well until this scene was reached, and the audience, many of whom had never before seen any kind of theatrical performance, sat as if spellbound. At the crack of the mother's revolver, however, the spell was rudely broken.

"By heaven, she missed him!" a red-shirted miner in the front row shouted, drawing his own "six-shooter" and leaping to his feet. "Round to the back door and head him off 'fore he can git a hoss, boys!" he yelled, and, following him, half the audience stampeded for the exit.

The excitement was finally allayed by the "mother" and the villain's appearing hand in hand before the curtain, and the manager's explanation of the situation. When the performance had been concluded, the audience insisted on paying another admission price and having an immediate repetition from beginning to end.—Success Magazine.

WHERE HE NOTICED CHANGE

In the days of Democratic strength in New Hampshire the Patriot of Concord, under the editorial heads of Butterfield and Hill, and later William Butterfield, was sustained by the rank and file of that political faction to such a degree that its presence in the households had been noted from generation to generation, and as its readers in various towns visited Concord it was regarded as a sacred duty to call upon "Bill" Butterfield. Butterfield was a very tall man, very spare in build, and of a deathly pale countenance.

About 1870 the Patriot passed from the hands of Butterfield into those of Col. E. C. Bailey. He was the very opposite in appearance to his predecessor, being of medium stature, very stout, and of a decidedly florid countenance.

Upon one occasion, when the writer was engaged upon the Patriot, one of the visitors from Rumney called at the sanctum, explaining his purpose, place of residence and scores of years the paper had been in the family. As he sat conversing and answering questions as regards family, crops and markets, Col. Bailey entered, and was introduced to the stranger as the "editor of the Patriot," who wrote the numerous argumentative and virile articles which warmed the blood of Rumney's Democracy.

Col. Bailey soon withdrew, having been closely studied by the visitor, who was about to leave, when a parting inquiry, "Do you find many changes in Concord since you were last here?" was met with, "Yaas, a great many; but there's the d——dest change in Bill Butterfield."

Humorous "Spoonerisms."

Oxford students have lately adopted the fad of going mountaineering at midnight on the roofs of the college buildings. One of these adventurers was recently caught on the roof of the house occupied by Dr. Spooner, from whose funny mistakes in speaking comes the term "Spoonerism." Dr. Spooner is reported to have said "shoving leopard" when he meant to have said "loving shepherd." Already, no doubt, he is credited with rejoicing that, in the case of the student who was captured on his house, he had "rotted him on the spoof." Dr. Spooner once made a disastrous confusion of the names of two undergraduates, Bell and Headlam, turning these words into "Hell" and "Bedlam." And it is said that he once wasted hours at Greenwich asking for the "Dull Man" inn, when what he really wanted was the "Green Mann' at Dulwich.

Proper Care of Cattle.

Lice on cattle indicate lack of attention and poor feed. Grease of any kind will destroy lice on cattle, but grease should not be used if it can be avoided. First wash the animal with kerosene emulsion and follow with clear water. When the skin is dry dust every portion of the body with a mixture of a peck of carbolate of lime and a bushel of clean, dry dirt. If a single animal is infested with lice the others will soon be in the same condition unless remedies are used as preventives.

HURRAH for the Fourth! Let all hurrah!

Judge Adams has just returned from North Alabama, and he says he finds many Adams men, many that knew him in '92 and '94, and with few exceptions the people are back in the Democratic party. He says that he has the first man to find in that section who voted for him in 1892 and '94 but that says he is for Adams yet. The Judge is greatly encouraged.

HON. D. J. Meadow, of Marengo county, candidate for Lieutenant Governor, was a visitor to Clanton last Monday. He is a pleasant, affable gentleman, who will worthily fill the office to which he aspires.

NEXT Wednesday is the Glorious Fourth, and Thorsby purposes celebrating it in a glorious manner. There will be races and a grand display of fireworks, and everybody and his wife are invited to be present. Go to Thorsby.

IT appears probable there will only be one candidate for Congress from this district—Hon. W. B. Craig, of Selma, whom we were pleased to meet in Clanton Wednesday. Mr. Craig is a sturdy scion of the old South, who having served his apprenticeship in politics as State Senator, will worthily represent this district in Congress.

F. A GULLEDGE.

WITH much pleasure we call the attention of our readers to the "declaration of principles" of Mr. F. A. Gulledge in this issue. Mr. Gulledge is so well known in Chilton county that it is superfluous to name his many characteristics, and moreover his manly declaration should appeal to all lovers of fair play in Chilton. He says what he means, and he means what he says. That he is a man of ability is proven by his success as a business man, and that in the event of his nomination and election he will reflect great credit upon his constituency goes without saying.

TO THE VOTERS OF CHILTON COUNTY.

In asking your support of my candidacy for representative of Chilton county in the next Legislature, am not unmindful of my duty, if elected, first to my God; second to the people of my county and lastly to the great State of Alabama, pledging strict fidelity to the whole people without regard to political creed or station in life.

In entering this campaign, I do so as a life long Democrat of the conservative type, granting to each voter the right to vote for whom he pleases.

If you think me capable, honest and with courage to stand for the right, then I ask your suffrage; if not, I naturally cannot expect it.

The following are my views and upon which I shall stand or fall, having due regard, at all times, for the rights of my people involved in any new issues that may arise.

First: I am in favor of the prompt and strict enforcement of all our laws, municipal, county, State and National.

Second: I oppose the sale, carrying and use of concealed weapons, and if elected will do all I can to abolish each branch of this evil.

Third: I favor such amendment of our general law as will work toward the better treatment of county convicts throughout the State.

Fourth: I oppose the present system of working the public roads which, in my judgment, should be done by graduated taxation, thus placing the burden where it justly belongs.

Fifth: I would favor such laws as would give us better public schools and secure the best possible attendance by all the children, to the end that our white boys and girls may secure better educations and thereby become more useful men and women.

Sixth. I oppose the legal technicalities by which the robber, murderer and other hardened criminals escape punishment at the hands of our courts.

Seventh: I favor settling all local questions by direct vote of those concerned, such as stock law and all other such local questions.

Eighth. I condemn the non-enforcement of our vagrancy laws, which is doing so much against our farmers, business men and manufacturers

Ninth. I favor a reasonable expenditure by our State, in advertising its resources to the outside world, to the end that Alabama may take its proper place, viz: at the head of all States.

Tenth. I advocare nominations for office by primary election, conceding to each voter the right to vote without questioning his past political affiliations or future intention, presuming his vote to be actuated by honesty of purpose.

Eleventh. I would favor, if elected, such additional laws, or our present laws so amended, as would guarantee the old war veterans of Alabama security against want in their declining years.

Twelfth: I would favor a pure food law for both man and beast and would vote and work for same.

Thirteenth: I am in hearty sympathy with the efforts of our State and Nation to regulate railway freight rates, believing that all carriers and shippers should stand on equal footing, that the burden of life should rest on all alike, granting full justice to all.

Fourteenth: All other questions involving the rights and liberties of my people shall have my most earnest consideration and active attention, with the desire, on my part, to get for them, in so far as I may, what a majority of them wish.

Fifteenth: I favor and solicit a free discussion from the stump of all the foregoing with my opponents, that the people may not be misled as to my efforts in their behalf, and, in this connection, I will add that I oppose and shall not join in any newspaper controversy, unless the methods of the campaign absolutely demand it.

With the above, I ask your kind consideration and loyal support.

F. A. GULLEDGE.

Mountain Creek.

As I have not seen anything from this part of the county in some time, I will give you a little of the news. The first thing the wedding bells are ringing, and the young man looks as if he was the only pebble on the beach.

As I am a traveling man, I will tell you something about the crops. The crops are all clean, but small for the time of year, and the worst of it is, cotton! cotton! cotton! and but little corn, peas, potatoes and ground peas. But I see more watermelons and cantalopes planted this year in Chilton county than I ever saw before. Don't you know it would have been much better for the farmer to have had corn, peas, groundpeas, potatoes and a fine lot of hogs, and made his meat at home, and next year he would not have to depend on Tennessee for his corn crib and smoke house?

There is going to be an all-day singing at Wadsworth on the 2nd Sunday in July. So you must all come out and bring a well filled basket and let us have a big time.

I have been informed that F. A. Gulledge is out for representative of Chilton county. Well, there is one thing I can say for Mr. Gulledge, he is a man that is true to good principles, and I don't think you could put out a better man for the office. So now, brother, come across and vote for the man that would stand to you and your rights. This is the kind of man we want.

Some one told me that T. J. Traywick was out for sheriff of Chilton county. So boys he is the man that would make you the best sheriff you ever had, I think. Of course I don't live in Chilton county, but I wish I did, I would give him my vote and get all the other boys I could to come across.

Well, I will make 600 or 700 gallons of wine this year on one acre of land. Don't you think this will beat Mr. Cotton? Good luck to the Banner and its readers. J. L.

Blue Darters Won.

The Blue Darters taken Clanton down a button hole in the ball game at Verbena Saturday, winning the game 11 to 9. The contest was not one-sided by any means and the score was tied and untied, both teams taking the lead in an exciting manner. Simpson, who pitched for Clanton, had a bone broke in his ankle in the 5th inning, and had to depend on the fielders after the the 6th, and had they given half support the game would not have been lost. The Thorsby boys could not get their team together in time to go down. The Clanton team will play no more games until after the Fourth.

The workings of the flesh and of the spirit met in delightful harmony and unison at a neighborhood social, at the home of Mr. Will Kinman, on the evening of the 16th inst., where the old and the young united in a most enjoyable feast of both body and soul, where the love of God and man seemed to give joy and zest to its every feature. The blessings and approval of the Heavenly Father were invoked for the occasion, and after a sumptuous feast upon delicious ice cream and cake, innocent and mirth-provoking plays were introduced, participated in by both married and single, that togehter with happy exchange of thoughts in social converse, where heart beat responsive to heart, and faces were brightened with a spirit of love for each other. "Time flew fast on silken wings, age forgot itself and youth wore its sunniest smiles; eyes looked love to eyes that spake again, and all went merry as a marriage bell. After a return of devoutful thanks to the Great Giver of every good for His loving care and preservation, all united their voices in songs of praise to His holy name and the very atmosphere seemed to breathe forth His love as the swelling strains ascended, and I am sure a tender chord of love vibrated in the hearts of all present, drawing them together in closer bonds of fellowship. The singing was as by inspiration, the voices so blending in rapturous harmony and melody.

The hour of parting came, and with loving good nights and expressions of thanks to the genial host and hostess for a most enjoyable time; with easy consciences all returned to their respective homes where under the approving smile of their Heavenly Father, to the arms of morpheus they would go to enjoy sweet rest, after a well spent evening. Those present were Revs. W. A. Crim and D. Lawley, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Barfield, Mr. and Mrs Joe Broadhead, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Lowery, Mr. and Mrs. Will Broadhead, Mr and Mrs. Julius Busbee; Misses Effie, Mamie and Mayo Crim, Ollie Armstrong, Lura Howard, Zora Barfield; Messrs. Fayette Crim, L. J. Bean, Lonie Broadhead, Paul Marony, E. H. Wills, Geo. Armstrong, Robt. Champion, Oliver and Arthur Collom, Dr. J. P. Ellsberry.

Letter to Spigener & Jones.

Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sirs: Do you want to sell Devoe lead-and zinc for your town and country?

The whole doctrine of it turns on these three points:

(1) It is all paint and true paint;
(2) It is the strongest paint;
(3) It is full measure.

Because it is all paint, true paint, proportioned for strength and full measure,

(1) It takes least for a job;
(2) Looks best all the time;
(3) Lasts longest;
(4) Gathers the trade and holds customers.

There is no such argument for any other paint; there is nothing but talk for any other paint. Devoe is the paint, if you want facts on your side.

The country is full of experiences; we bring these experiences to bear on your trade, if you sell Devoe.

Yours truly

[illegible] Housekeeper and Expert [illegible]ssists in Painting Engines [illegible]er—Husband is Engineer [illegible] Which She is Pilot.

[illegible] early [illegible] of this year [illegible] Inspectors began [illegible] at Chicago of the applica[illegible] for license to handle [illegible] the Illinois River, they [illegible] startled over the application of Mrs. Rose E. Watkins in [illegible] and [illegible] after a most thorough [illegible] ability to handle [illegible] was [illegible] issued a license.

[illegible] the wife of Captain T. W[illegible] and they own [illegible] they navigate the [illegible] the Illinois. For the last [illegible] Mrs. Watkins has made [illegible] husband's boats. [illegible] nally at Peoria. Mrs. W[illegible] spent her girlhood and [illegible] her marriage to Watkins [illegible] taught school.

[illegible] last four years they have [illegible] summer conducting an excursion business between Chicago and [illegible] points down the Illinois including Starved Rock and the [illegible] surrounding it. [illegible] has been for years an [illegible] navigating these waters, but [illegible] this spring did she formally [illegible] a pilot's license. While [illegible] a navigable stream, it has been [illegible] that the navigation [illegible] ended at La Salle, [illegible] the Watkins and [illegible] smaller craft have been plying the upper reaches of [illegible] Last winter the steamboat [illegible] notified that the boats on [illegible] would have to comply with government regulations to [illegible] regularly licensed pilots and [illegible]

[illegible] weeks later Inspectors Mans- [illegible] Peck came to Ottawa to in- [illegible] Watkins. Since Mrs. Watkins secured her pilot's license [illegible] been all sorts of stories in [illegible] as to that inspection. One [illegible] reads that the inspectors [illegible] seated at a table in the [illegible] poring over a chart look- [illegible] location of a recently dis- [illegible] wreck. It is a pity to spoil [illegible] beautiful romance, but these hard, utilitarian facts in the [illegible] pilot house of the Watkins [illegible] to hold a table and Mrs. [illegible] much too busy to pore [illegible] at this season of the year. [illegible] only really dangerous "snag" [illegible] at Starved Rock is the ad- [illegible] which the corporation that charges before the sightseer [illegible] to [illegible] on the shore [illegible] beautiful [illegible] historic spot. [illegible] facts [illegible] case are that [illegible] inspect[illegible] made their official [illegible] to the boat Mrs. Watkins w[illegible] painting the engines. During [illegible] winter months the two Captains [illegible] engaged in overhauling and renovating their boat— [illegible] that when one remembers [illegible] boat can carry 600 passengers [illegible] two decks.

[illegible] result of the examination [illegible] they recently underwent at [illegible] Captain George Watkins [illegible] engineer's and a master's [illegible] while his wife holds a license [illegible] and pilot which entitles her [illegible] any craft up to 100 tons bur- [illegible] the waters of the Illinois and its tributaries. Mrs Watkins is a modest and refined woman who is not given to boasting of her exploits along lines into which women seldom venture. But she takes a pardonable degree of pride in the fact that she is not an amateur pilot but is the real thing in that line.

DISPLAYS UNCOMMON ABILITY.

When the excursion season closes the Watkins not infrequently seek other business in the late fall and early spring on the lower reaches of the river and it is while engaged in this work that Mrs. Watkins has the opportunity to display her real ability as a navigator. She has brought the boat up the river in all conditions of wind and current and that, too, when it was handling a great barge piled high with props for the Spring Valley mines or with great walnut logs for a piano factory at Chicago.

As to her ability to handle a crew of deck hands there is a determined glint in her eye which indicates that she can do that also, and she can cook for them as well as she can direct their labors on board. There is nothing mannish or strenuous or new womanish about this lady master of the steamer Watkins—she is a model housekeeper and is household guardian angel for all the crew who dwell upon the boat. This is the plain story of a good woman, refined, pleasant and energetic, who does the work that comes to her thoroughly and who is surprised that her ability to handle a fair-sized fresh water craft should have attracted the attention that it undoubtedly has.

Interstate Commerce Commission.

An opinion at one time prevailed that the members of the interstate commerce commission had an easy time. A place on the board was characterized in the slang of the day as a "soft snap." However this may once have been, it is not true now. The dispatches show that not only is the commission a very busy body, but that its activities are yielding much important information. Its inquiries into the methods of the railroads interested in coal, and into the practices of the Standard Oil Company in absorbing or freezing out opposition, are in the highest degree valuable to the public, and should lead to the redressing of many abuses. If the board were composed of twenty members, all could find work at this time in the field which as yet has been but scratched.

CONGRESSMEN ARRESTED.

TWO DOZEN OF THEM GATHERED IN AT BASEBALL GAME BY OFFICIAL OF HOUSE.

President's Son-in-Law Among Those Corraled by Sergeant-at Arms.—Trouble Caused by Minority Leader Williams.

That the Members of Congress are fond of a ball game was evidenced a few days ago when a call of the House—a desire to obtain a quorum of the members—caused the Sergeant-at-Arms of that body to send out his deputies to arrest whatever members his squad could corral. Twenty-two Congressmen were gathered up from the grandstand and bleachers of the Washington Baseball Club, Mr. Nicholas Longworth and his wife being brought in from the President's box.

It was a delightful spring afternoon and the House was droning along through its business, with John Sharp Williams filibustering and forcing roll calls on everything possible, including the question of a quorum. The weather, as heretofore stated, was fine, and the "call of the ball game" was strong upon the fans of the House. They heeded it and went, and then Mr. Williams became unkind, there was a call for a quorum, and the Sergeant-at-Arms went after the deliquents.

The officers rounded up stray members from all parts of the grounds, and in the executive box found the popular bridegroom from Ohio, with his wife. They are both lovers of the game, as well as otherwise, and the humor of the situation was slow in dawning on them. But they could not resist or argue with constituted authority. They gave parole to proceed at once to the Capitol. They had come in Mrs. Longworth's pretty automobile, and on the return trip they took with them Representative Gaines of West Virginia.

Representative Sibley, of Pennsylvania, with a party of eight members, also went back to the Capitol in an automobile and on the way was held up by a bicycle policeman for exceeding the speed regulations, but when the situation was explained to the officer, they were allowed to proceed. A few moments later the auto party was filing in at the door of the House. The roll call was awaiting them. They marched in, voted, turned on their heels and went straight back to the machine. Before the authorities could get busy they were again speeding toward the ball park.

HORSES WERE TOO SLOW.

A number of the statesmen who were hustled back to the Capitol in carriages were not so fortunate as the Sibley party. They arrived so late that it wasn't worth while to return to the ball park.

A number of the truants are dyed-in-the-wool fans, some making regular but not daily excursions to the ball park, while others can afford to eschew the affairs of state every day to see a game. On the occasion of their arrest, a number had made their first visit to see the ball thrown around. Before the House was called to order the next day the delinquents gathered about to hold a consultation meeting.

"It was too bad that we had to leave just when there was a chance for Washington to tie the score, with three men on bases," wailed Representative Sherman, of New York, chairman of the Republican Congressional campaign committee.

"Oh, go on," added Congressman McKinley, of Illinois, "our Chicago team is too strong for the Nationals. Their pitcher struck out the next two men up, leaving your three still hanging on their bases."

"Of course it was up to that California recruit on the home team to make the star stunt of the day," added Representative McKinley, who hails from Santa Rosa, Cal.

Others in the gathering seemed to assail Representative Sibley for coaxing them to leave the House for a ball game, as they considered it a blackeye for them to be caught away from their post of duty.

Among the few whom the Sergeant-at-Arms had gathered in were Representatives Loud, of Michigan; Cousins, of Iowa; Thomas, of Ohio; Dunwell, of New York and Burleigh, of Maine. Representative Rodenburg, of Illinois, was out at the park, but seems to have been the sole truant who escaped the officer, and was permitted to see the game through.

Wellman and the Pole.

As the time draws near for Walter Wellman, the newspaper correspondent, to make his proposed "dash for the North Pole" by means of an airship, the world at large is waking up to the vast daring and importance of the attempt. The scheme cuts adrift absolutely from all other of the time-honored [illegible] of traveling over the eternal ice of the Arctic zone. Mr. Wellman is no novice in arctic travel, as he has already made one attempt for the Pole, in the old fashioned way.

From Spitzbergen, Wellman, together with Maj. Henry B. Hersey, representing the United States Weather Bureau, and M. [illegible] Smith, a wireless operator, will start in the biggest airship ever constructed on the 600-mile journey toward the goal of so many men's desires. If the airship works and the winds remain true to the analysis of them made by the Nansen expedition, the thing is done.

The North Pole is a terribly illusive sort of nonentity, and a thousand unforeseen calamities may be ready to pounce upon Walter Wellman and his plucky associates. Yet the quest is not an absolutely forlorn hope. To the American newspaper man may yet be given the honor of locating the North Pole, just as to a British newspaper man was given the glory of cuttin, Africa in twain.

The Princess' Bridal Dress.

Princess Ena's wedding dress attracted great interest in Spain, as it is truly a Spanish product, in fabric and finish, except for the wonderful Brussels lace, which was brought to adorn it. It was a fancy of the King and of the Queen-mother that the wedding dress should be made in Spain, and the Princess Ena graciously fell in with this patriotic sentiment. The dress is, therefore, one of the special presents from the King and is a marvel of elegance.

The silk was manufactured from a special pattern in one of the large Spanish silk establishments. It was made up with all the artistic skill of the court dressmakers. The silk is heavily overlaid with wonderful silver embroidery, with soft frills of the finest Brussels lace, said to have cost $50 a yard. The laces were publicly exhibited before being put on the dress, and excited the admiration and astonishment of even the aristocratic ladies of Madrid. Orange blossoms were profusely used with the silver embroideries and laces for the corsage, and even in dainty clusters along the train, which is four yards long.

According to Spanish traditions, the bride must afterward present this wedding dress to the Virgin de la Paloma, the popular protectress of maternity.

"Naive" Questions.

Mrs. Alexander, the novelist, lives in Florence. There a young American woman recently interviewed her.

"Mrs. Alexander was delightful," said the young woman. "She amused me very much. I, too, amused her—she thought me naive.

"Once, when I asked her a certain question about the financial side of novel writing, she declared that my question was as naive as that of a little Florentine child's that she had heard about the day before.

"This child, at dinner with her parents, turned to her mother and said:

"'Mamma, where were you born?'

"'At Padua, darling.'

"'But I was born in Florence, wasn't I?'

"'Yes, dear.'

"'And father, where was he born?'

"'In Venice.'

"The little girl looked gravely from one to the other.

"'Isn't it funny,' she said, 'that we should all have met like this.'"

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

The scenes of the story are laid in the 14th century. The monks of the Cistercian Monastery Abbey of Beaulieu, assemble to witness the trial of a lay brother, known as Hordle John, upon numerous grave charges brought against him. He pleads guilty and is sentenced to be expelled from the Order and at the same time it is decreed that he be dragged forth and scourged from the Abbey's precincts. He threatens to assault a number of the brethren, and in the excitement escapes. Shortly after another of the lay-brethren of the monastery, Alleyne Edricson, takes his departure from the monastery in accordance with provision of his father's will, that in his twentieth year he shall go forth into the world for one year to choose for himself his future calling. In sadness he wanders from the monastery on his way to visit his brother, the Socman of Minstead whose reputation is a most unsavory one. Night coming on, he seeks shelter in a road side inn.

CHAPTER III

Though it was an autumn evening and somewhat warm, a huge fire of heaped billets of wood crackled and sparkled in a broad, open grate, some of the smoke escaping up a rude chimney, but the greater part rolling out into the room, so that the air was thick with it, and a man coming from without could scarce catch his breath. On this fire a great caldron bubbled and simmered, giving forth a rich and promising smell. Seated round it were a dozen or so folk, of all ages and conditions, who set up such a shout as Alleyne entered that he stood peering at them through the smoke, uncertain what this greeting might portend.

"A rouse! A rouse!" cried one rough-looking fellow in a tattered jerkin. "One more round of mead or ale, and the score to the last comer."

"'Tis the law of the Pied Merlin!" shouted another. "Ho, there, Dame Eliza! Here is fresh custom come to the house, and not a drain for the company."

"I will take your orders, gentles; I will assuredly take your orders," the landlady answered, bustling in with her hands full of leathern drinking-cups. "What is it that you drink, then? Beer for the lads of the forest, mead for the gleeman, strong waters for the tinker, and wine for the rest. It is an old custom of the house, young sir. It has been the use at the Pied Merlin this many a year back that the company should drink to the health of the last comer. Is it your pleasure to humor it?"

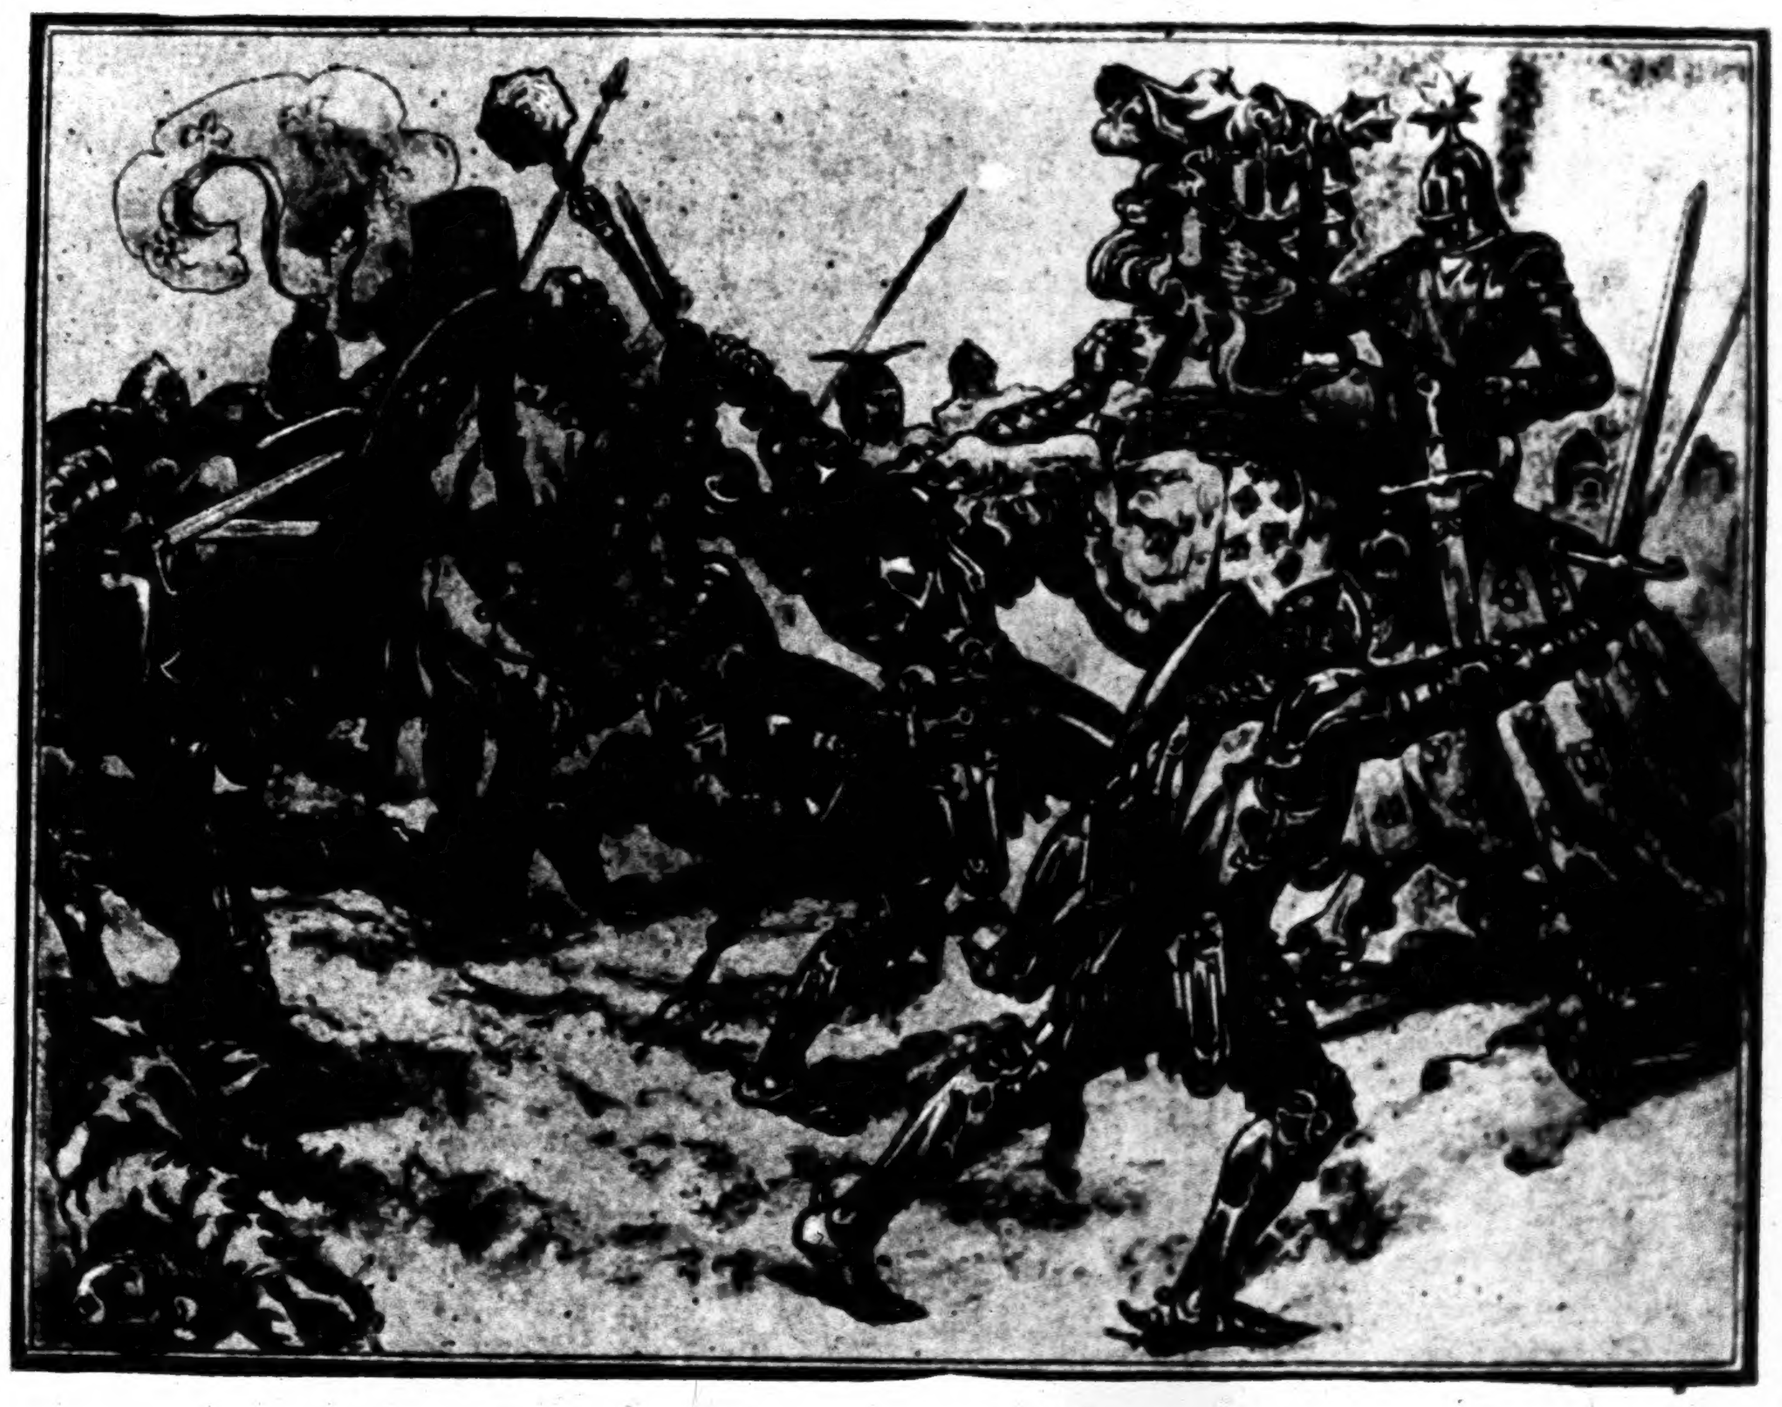
"Why, good dame," said Alleyne, "I would not offend the customs of your house, but it is only sooth when I say that my purse is a thin one. As far as two pence will go, however, I shall be right glad to do my part."

"Plainly said and bravely spoken my suckling friar," roared a deep voice, and a heavy hand fell upon Alleyne's shoulder. Looking up, he saw beside him his former cloister companion, the renegade monk, Hordle John.

"By the thorn of Glastonbury! ill days are coming upon Beaulieu," said he. "Here they have got rid in one day of the only two men within their walls—for I have had mine eyes upon thee, youngster, and I know that for all thy baby face there is the making of a man in thee."

While he was speaking the landlady came in again, bearing a broad platter, upon which stood all the beakers and flagons charged to the brim with the brown ale or the ruby wine. Behind her came a maid with a high pile of wooden plates, and a great sheaf of spoons, one of which she handed round to each of the travellers. Two of the company, who were dressed in the weather-stained green doublet of foresters, lifted the big pot off the fire, and a third, with a huge pewter ladle, served out a portion of steaming collops to each guest. Alleyne bore his share and his ale-mug away with him to a retired trestle in the corner, where he could sup in peace and watch the strange scene, which was so different from those silent and well-ordered meals to which he was accustomed.

Three or four of the men round the fire were evidently under-keepers and verderers from the forest, sunburned and bearded, with the quick restless eye and lithe movements of the deer among which they lived. Close to the corner of the chimney sat a middle-aged gleeman, clad in a faded garb of Norwich cloth, the tunic of which was so outgrown that it did but fasten at the neck and at the waist. His face was swollen and coarse, and his watery, protruding eyes spoke of a life which never wandered very far from the wine-pot. A gilt harp, blotched with many stains and two of its strings missing, was tucked under one of his arms, while with the other he scooped greedily at his platter. Next to him sat two other men of about the same age, one with a trimming of fur to his coat, which gave him a dignity which was evidently dearer to him than his comfort, for he still drew it round him in spite of the hot glare of the fagots. The other, clad in a dirty russet suit with a long sweeping doublet, had a cunning foxy face with keen twinkling eyes and a peaky beard. Next to him sat Hordle John, and beside him three other rough unkempt fellows with tangled beards and matted hair—free laborers from the adjoining farms, where small patches of freehold property had been suffered to remain scattered about in the heart of the royal demesne. The company was completed by a peasant in a rude dress of undyed sheepskin, with the old-fashioned galligaskins about his legs, and a gayly dressed young man with striped cloak jagged at the edges and parti-colored hosen, who looked about him with high disdain upon his face, and held a blue smelling flask to his nose with one hand while he brandished a busy spoon with the other. In the corner a very fat man was lying all asprawl upon a truss, snoring stertorously, and evidently in the last stage of drunkenness.



"THERE WAS NOT A BATTLE BUT SIR NIGEL WAS IN THE HEART OF IT.

Alleyne listened to the talk which went on round the fire.

"Elbow room for Floyting Will!" cried a woodman. "Twang us a merry lilt."

"Aye, aye, the 'Lasses of Lancaster,'" one suggested.

"Or 'St. Simeon and the Devil.'"

"Or the 'Jest of Hendy Tobias.'"

To all those suggestions the jongleur made no response, but sat with his eye fixed abstractedly upon the ceiling, as one who calls words to his mind. Then, with a sudden sweep across the strings, he broke out into a song so gross and so foul that ere he had finished a verse the pure-minded lad sprang to his feet with the blood tingling in his face.

"How can you sing such things?" he cried. "You, too, an old man who should be an example to others."

The wayfarers all gazed in the utmost astonishment at the interruption.

"By the holy Dicon of Hampole! our silent clerk has found his tongue," said one of the woodmen. "What is amiss with the song, then? How has it offended your babyship?"

"A milder and better-mannered song hath never been heard within these walls!" cried another. "What sort of talk is this for a public inn?"

"Shall it be a litany, my good clerk?" shouted a third; "or would a hymn be good enough to serve?"

The jongleur had put down his harp in high dudgeon. "Am I to be preached to by a child?" he cried, staring across at Alleyne with an inflamed and angry countenance. "Is a hairless infant to raise tongue against me, when I have sung in every fair from Tweed to Trent, and have twice been named aloud by the High Court of the Minstrels at Beverly? I shall sing no more to-night."

"Nay, but you will so," said one of the laborers. "Hi! Dame Eliza, bring a stoup of your best to Will, to clear his throat. Go forward with thy song, and if our girl-faced clerk does not love it he can take to the road and go whence he came."

"Nay, but not too fast," broke in Hordle John. "There are [illegible] words in this matter. It may be that my little comrade has been over-quick in reproof, he having gone early into the cloisters and seen little of the rough ways and words of the world. Yet there is truth in what he says, for as you know well, the song was not of the cleanest. I shall stand by him, therefore, and he shall neither be put out on the road, nor shall his ears be offended indoors."

"Indeed, your high and mighty grace," sneered one of the yeomen, "have you in sooth so ordained?"

"By the Virgin!" said a second, "I think that you may both chance to find yourselves upon the road before long."

"And so belabored as to be scarce able to crawl along it," cried a third.

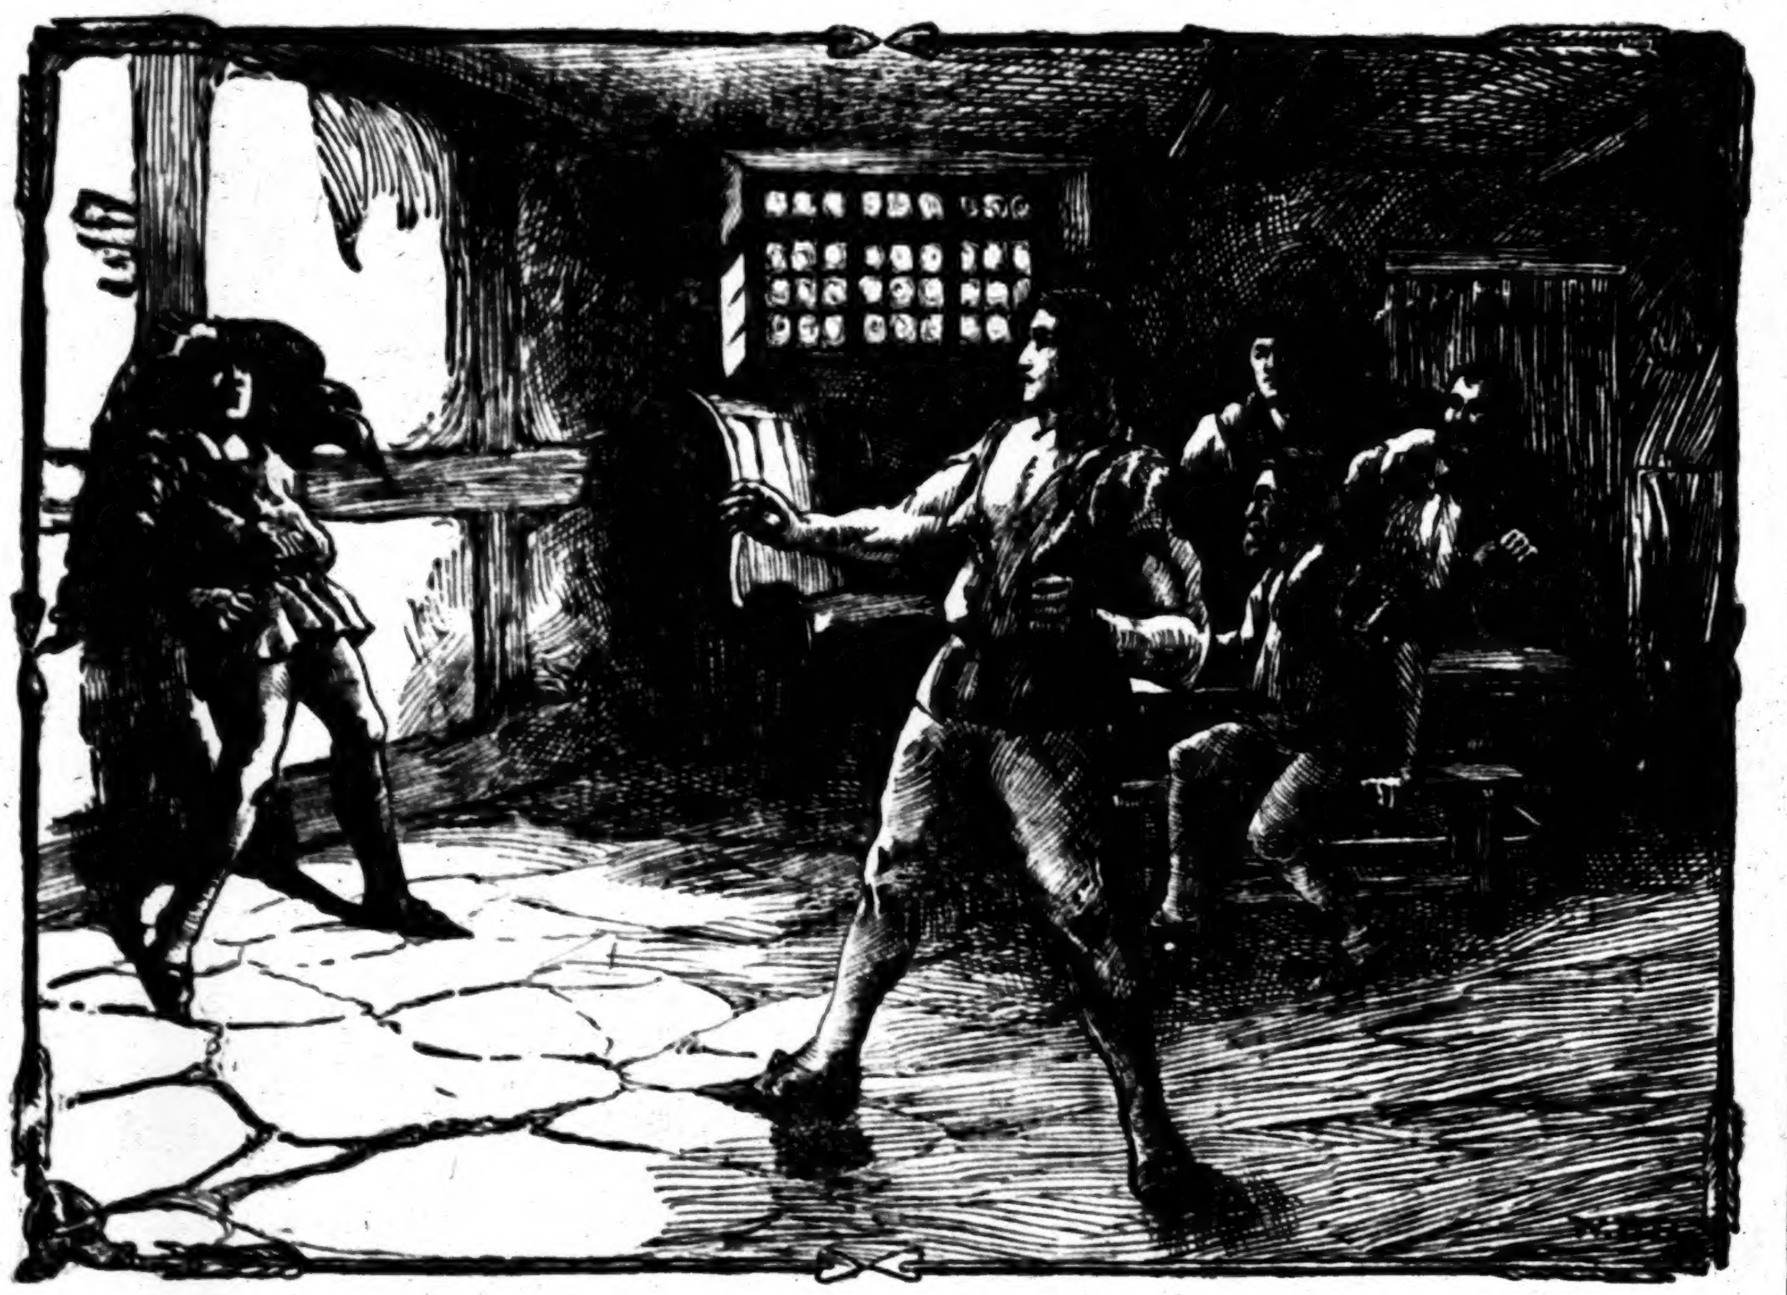
"Nay, I shall go! I shall go!" said Alleyne hurriedly, as Hordle John began to roll up his sleeves, and bare an arm like a leg of mutton. "I would not have you brawl about me."

"Hush, lad!" he whispered, "I count them not a fly. They may find they have more tow on their distaff than they know how to spin. Stand thou clear and give me space."

Both the foresters and the laborers had risen from their bench, and Dame Eliza and the travelling doctor had flung themselves between the two parties with soft words and soothing gestures, when the door of the Pied Merlin was flung violently open, and the attention of the company was drawn from their own quarrel to the new-comer who had burst so unceremoniously upon them.

CHAPTER IV.

He was a middle-sized man, of most massive and robust build, with an arching chest and extraordinary breadth of shoulder. His shaven face was as brown as a hazel-nut, tanned and dried by the weather, with harsh well-marked features, which were not improved by a long white scar which stretched from the corner of his left nostril to the angle of the jaw. His eyes were bright and searching, with something of menace and of authority in their quick glitter, and his mouth was firm-set and hard, as befitted one who was wont to set his face against danger. A straight sword by his side and a painted long-bow jutting over his shoulder proclaimed his profession, while his scarred brigandine of chain-mail and his dinted steel cap showed that he was no holiday soldier, but one who was even now fresh from the wars. A white surcoat, with the Lion of St. George in red upon the centre, covered his broad breast, while a sprig of new-plucked broom at the side of his head-gear gave a touch of gayety and grace to his grim, war-worn equipment.



"HORDLE JOHN HURLED HIM ACROSS THE ROOM SO THAT HIS HEAD CRACKED AGAINST THE WALL."

"La petite is frightened," said he, "Ah, c'est l'amour, l'amour! Curse this trick of French, which will stick to my throat. I must wash it out with some good English ale. By my hilt! camarades, there is no drop of French blood in my body, and I am a true English bowman, Samkin Aylward by name; and I tell you, mes amis, that it warms my very heart-roots to set my feet on the dear old land once more. When I came off the galley at Hythe, this very day, I down on my bones, and I kissed the good brown earth, as I kiss thee now, ma belle, for it was eight long years since I had seen it. The very smell of it seemed life to me. But where are my six rascals? Hola, there! En avant!"

At the order, six men, dressed as common drudges, marched solemnly into the room, each bearing a huge bundle upon his head. They formed in military line, while the soldier stood in front of them with stern eyes, checking off their several packages.

"Number one—a French feather-bed with the two counterpanes of white sandell," said he.

"Here, worthy sir," answered the first of the bearers, laying a great package down in the corner.

"Number two—seven ells of red Turkey cloth and nine ells of cloth of gold. Put it down by the other. Good dame, I prythee give each of these men a bottrine of wine or a jack of ale. Three—a full piece of white Genoan velvet with twelve ells of purple silk. Thou rascal, there is dirt on the hem! Thou hast brushed it against some wall, coquin!"

"Not I, most worthy sir," cried the carrier, shrinking away from the fierce eyes of the bowman.

"I say yes, dog! By the three kings! I have seen a man gasp out his breath for less. Had you gone through the pain and unease that I have done to earn these things you would be at more care. I swear by my ten finger bones that there is not one of them that hath not cost its weight in French blood! Four—a incense-boat, a ewer of silver, a gold buckle, and a cope worked in pearls. I found them, camarades, at the Church of St. Denis in the harrying of Narbonne, and I took them away with me lest they fall into the hands of the wicked. Five—a cloak of fur turned up with minever, a gold goblet with stand and cover, and a box of rose-colored sugar. See that you lay them together. Six—a box of moneys, three pounds of Limousine gold-work, a pair of boots, silver tagged, and, lastly, a store of naping linen. So, the tally is complete! Here is a groat apiece, and you may go."

"Go whither, worthy sir?" asked one of the carriers.

"Whither? To the devil, if ye will. What is it to me? Now, ma belle, to supper. A pair of cold capons, a mortress of brawn, or what you will, with a flask or two of the right Gascony. I have crowns in my pouch, my sweet, and I mean to spend them. Bring in wine while the food is dressing. Buvons, my brave lads! You shall each empty a stoup with me."

Here was an offer which the company in an English inn, at that or any other date, are slow to refuse. The flagons were regathered, and came back with the white foam dripping over their edges. Two of the woodmen and three of the laborers drank their portions off hurriedly and trooped off together, for their homes were distant and the hour late. The others, however, drew closer, leaving the place of honor to the right of the gleeman to the free-handed newcomer. He had thrown off his steel cap and his brigandine, and had placed them with his sword, his quiver, and his painted long-bow, on the top of his varied heap of plunder in the corner. Now, with his thick and somewhat bowed legs stretched in front of the blaze, his green jerkin thrown open, and a great quart pot in his corded fist, he looked the picture of comfort and good-fellowship. His hard-set face had softened, and the thick crop of crisp brown curls which had been hidden by his helmet grew low upon his massive neck. He might have been forty years of age, though hard toil and harder pleasure had left their grim marks upon his features. Alleyne sat, staring with open eyes at a type of man so strange and so unlike any whom he had met. Men had been good or had been bad in his catalogue, but here was a man who was fierce one instant and gentle the next, with a curse on his lips and a smile in his eye. What was to be made of such a man as that?

It chanced that the soldier looked up and saw the questioning glance which the young clerk threw upon him. He raised his flagon and drank to him, with a merry flash of his white teeth.

"A toi, mon garcon!" he cried. "Hast surely never seen a man-at-arms, that thou shouldst stare so?"

"I never have," said Alleyne frankly, "though I have oft heard talk of their deeds."

"By my hilt!" cried the other, "if you were to cross the narrow sea you would find them as thick as bees at a teehole. Couldst not shoot a bolt down any street of Bordeaux, I warrant, but you would pink archer, squire or knight."

"And where got you all those pretty things?" asked Hordle John, pointing at the heap in the corner.

"Where there is as much more waiting for any brave lad to pick it up. Where a good man can always earn a good wage, and where he need look upon no man as his paymaster, but just reach his hand out and help himself. Aye, it is a goodly and a proper life. And here I drink to mine old comrades, and the saints be with them! A rouse all together, mes enfants, under pain of my displeasure! To Sir Claude Latour and the White Company!"

"Sir Claude Latour and the White Company!" shouted the travellers, draining off their goblets.

"Well quaffed, mes braves! It is for me to fill your cups again, since you have drained them to my dear lads of the white jerkin. Hola, mon ange, bring wine and ale. How runs the old stave?"

"We'll drink altogether
To the gray goose feather,
And to the land where the gray goose flew."

He roared out the catch in a harsh unmusical voice, and ended with a shout of laughter. "I trust that I am a better bowman than a minstrel," said he.

"Methinks I have some remembrance of the lilt," remarked the gleeman, running his fingers over the strings. "Hoping that it will give thee no offence, most holy sir"—with a vicious snap at Alleyne—"and with the kind permit of the company, I will venture upon it."

Many a time in the after days Alleyne Edrickson seemed to see that scene, for all that so many which were stranger and more stirring were soon to crowd upon him. The fat, red-faced gleeman, the listening group, the archer with upraised finger beating in time to the music, and the huge sprawling figure of Hordle John, all thrown into red light and black shadow by the flickering fire in the centre—memory was to come often lovingly back to it.

At the time he was lost in admiration at the deft way in which the jongleur disguised the loss of his two missing strings, and the lusty, hearty fashion in which he trolled out his little ballad of the outland bowmen, which ran in some such fashion as this:

"What of the bow?
The bow was made in England:
Of true wood, of yew wood,
The wood of English bows;
So men who are free
Love the old yew-tree
And the land where the yew tree grows.

"What of the cord?
The cord was made in England:
A rough cord, a tough cord,
A cord that bowmen love;
So we'll drain our jacks
To the English flax
And the land where the hemp was wove.

"What of the shaft?
The shaft was cut in England:
A long shaft, a strong shaft,
Barbed and trim and true;
So we'll drink all together
To the gray goose feather
And the land where the gray goose flew.

"What of the men?
The men were bred in England:
The bowmen—the yeomen—
The lads of dale and fell.
Here's to you—and to you!
To the hearts that are true
And the land where the true hearts dwell."

"Well sung, by my hilt!" shouted the archer, in high delight. "Many a night have I heard that song, both in the old war-time and after, in the days of the White Company, when Black Simon of Norwich would lead the stave, and four hundred of the best bowmen that ever drew string would come roaring in upon the chorus. I have seen old John Hawkwood, the same who has led half the company into Italy, stand laughing in his beard as he heard it, until his plates rattled again. But to get the full smack of it ye must yourselves be English bowmen, and be far off upon an outland soil."

"It passes me," he cried, "how all you lusty fellows can bide scratching your backs at home when there are such doings over the seas. Look at me—what have I to do? It is but the eye to the cord, the cord to the shaft, and the shaft to the mark. There is the whole song of it."

"And the wage?" asked a laborer.

"You see what the wage brings," he answered. "I eat of the best. I treat my friend, and I ask no friend to treat me. I clap a silk gown upon my girl's back. Never a knight's lady shall be better betrimmed and betrinketed. How of all that, mon garcon? And how of the heap of trifles that you can see for yourselves in yonder corner? They are from the South French, every one, upon whom I have been making war. By my hilt! camarades, I think that I may let my plunder speak for itself."

Though there may be peace between our own provinces and the French, yet within the marches of France there is always war, for the country is much divided against itself, and is furthermore harried by bands of flayers, skinners, Brabacons, tardvenus, and the rest of them. When every man's grip is on his neighbor's throat, and every five-sous-piece of a baron is marching with tuck of drum to fight whom he will, it would be a strange thing if five hundred brave English boys could not pick up a living. Now that Sir John Hawkwood hath gone with the East Anglian lads and the Nottingham woodmen into the service of the Marquis of Montferrat to fight against the Lord of Milan, there are but ten-score of us left; yet I may be able to bring some back with me to fill the ranks of the White Company. By the tooth of Peter! it would be a bad thing if I could not muster many a Hamptonshire man who would be ready to strike in under the red flag of St. George, and the more so if Sir Nigel Loring of Cristchurch, should don hauberk once more and take the lead of us.

"Ah, you would indeed be in luck then," quoth the woodman; "for it is said that, setting aside the prince, and mayhap good old Sir John Chandos, there was not in the whole army a man of such tried courage."

"It is sooth, every of it," the archer answered. "I have seen him with these two eyes in a stricken field, and never did a man carry himself better. Mon Dieu! yes, ye would not credit it to look at him, or to hearken to his soft voice, but from the sailing from Orwell down to the foray to Paris, and that is clear twenty years, there was not a skirmish, onfall, sally, bushment, escalado, or battle, but Sir Nigel was in the heart of it. I go now to Christchurch with a letter to him from Sir Claude Latour, to ask him if he will take the place of Sir John Hawkwood; and there is the more chance that he will if I bring one or two likely men at my heels. What say you, woodman: wilt leave the bucks to loose a shaft at a nobler mark?"

The forester shook his head. "I have wife and child at Emery Down," quoth he; "I would not leave them for such a venture."

"You then, young sir?" asked the archer.

"Nay, I am a man of peace," said Alleyne Edricson. "Besides I have other work to do."

"Peste!" growled the soldier, striking his flagon on the board until the dishes danced again. "What, in the name of the devil, hath come over the folk? Why sit ye all moping by the fireside, like crows round a dead horse, when there is man's work to be done within a few short leagues of ye? Out upon you all, as a set of laggards and hang-backs! By my hilt! I believe that the men of England are all in France already, and that what is left behind are in sooth the women dressed up in their paltocks and hosen."

"Archer," quoth Hordle John, "you have lied more than once and more than twice; for which, and also because I see much in you to mislike, I am sorely tempted to lay you upon your back."

"By my hilt! then, I have found a man at last!" shouted the bowman. "And, 'fore God, you are a better man than I take you for if you can lay me on my back. For seven long years I have found no man in the Company who could make my jerkin dusty."

"We have had enough bobance and boasting," said Hordle John, rising and throwing off his doublet. "I will show you that there are better men left in England than ever went thieving to France."

"Pasques Dieu!" cried the archer, loosening his jerkin, and eyeing his foeman over with the keen glance of one who is a judge of manhood. "I have only once before seen such a body of a man. By your leave, my red-headed friend, I should be right sorry to exchange buffets with you; and I will allow that there is no man in the Company who would pull against you on a rope; so let that be a salve to your pride. On the other hand, I should judge that you have led a life of ease for some months back, and that my muscle is harder than your own. I am ready to wager upon myself against you, if you are not afeard."

"Afeard, thou lurden!" growled big John. "I never saw the face yet of a man that I was afeard of. Come out, and we shall see who is the better man."

"But the wager?"

"I have nought to wager. Come out for the love and the lust of the thing."

"Nought to wager!" cried the soldier. "Why, idiot, you have that which I covet above all things. It is that big body of thine that I am after. See now. I have a French feather bed there, which I have been at pains to keep these years back. I had it at the sacking of Issodun, and the king himself hath not such a bed. If you throw me, it is thine; but, if I throw you, then you are under a vow to serve the White Company as long as we be enrolled."

"Then you may bid farewell to your bed, soldier," roared Hordle John.

"Nay; I shall keep the bed, and I shall have you to France in spite of your teeth, and you shall live to thank me for it. How shall it be, then, my infant? Collar and elbow, or close-lock, or catch how you can?"

"To the devil with your tricks!" said John, opening and shutting his great red hands. "Stand forth, and let me clip thee."

"Shalt clip me as best you can, then," quoth the archer, moving out into the open space, and keeping a most wary eye upon his opponent. He had thrown off his green jerkin, and his chest was covered only by a pink silk jupon, or undershirt, cut low in the neck and sleeveless. Hordle John was near stripped from his waist upward, and his huge body, with his great muscles swelling out like the gnarled roots of an oak, towered high above the soldier. The other, however, though near a foot shorter, was a man of great strength; and there was a gloss upon his white skin which was wanting in the heavier limbs of the renegade monk. He was quick on his feet too, and skilled at the game; so that it was clear, from the poise of head and shine of eye, that he counted the chances to be in his favor. It would have been hard that night, through the whole length of England, to set up a finer pair in the face of each other.

Big John stood waiting in the centre with a sullen, menacing eye, and his red hair in a bristle, while the archer paced lightly and swiftly to the right and the left with crooked knee and hands advanced. Then with a sudden dash, so swift and fierce that the eye could scarce follow it, he flew in upon his man and locked his leg around him. It was a grip that between men of equal strength would mean a fall; but Hordle John tore him off from him as he might a rat, and hurled him across the room, so that his head cracked up against the wall.

"Ma foi!" cried the bowman, passing his fingers through his curls. "you were not far from the feather-bed then, mon gar."

Nothing daunted, he approached his man once more; but this time with more caution than before. With a quick feint he threw the other off his guard, and then, bounding upon him, threw his legs round his bull neck, in the hope of bearing him to the ground with the sudden shock. With a bellow of rage, Hordle John squeezed him limp in his huge arms; and then, picking him up, cast him down upon the floor with a force that might well have splintered a bone or two, had not the archer with the most perfect coolness clung to the other's forearms to break his fall. As it was, he dropped upon his feet and kept his balance, though it sent a jar through his frame which set every joint a-creaking. He bounded back from his perilous foeman; but the other, heated by the bout, rushed madly after him, and so gave the practised wrestler the very vantage for which he had planned. As big John flung himself upon him, the archer ducked under the great red hands that clutched for him, and, catching his man round the thighs, hurled him over his shoulder—helped as much by his own mad rush as by the trained strength of the heave. To Alleyne's eye, it was as if John had taken unto himself wings and flown. As he hurtled through the air, with giant limbs revolving, the lad's heart was in his mouth; for surely no man ever yet had such a fall and came scathless out of it. In truth, hardy as the man was, his neck had been assuredly broken had he not pitched head first on the very midriff of the drunken artist, who was slumbering so peacefully in the corner, all unaware of these stirring doings. The luckless limner, thus suddenly brought out from his dreams, sat up with a piercing yell, while Hordle John bounded back into the circle almost as rapidly as he had left it.

"One more fall, by all the saints!" he cried, throwing out his arms.

"Not I," quoth the archer, pulling on his clothes. "I have come well out of the business. I would sooner wrestle with the great bear of Navarre."

"It was a trick!" cried John.

"Aye was it! By my ten finger-bones! it is a trick that will add a proper man to the ranks of the Company!"

"Oh, for that," said the other, "count it not a fly: for I had promised myself a good hour ago that I should go with thee, since the life seems to be a goodly and proper one. Yet I would fain have had the feather-bed."

BEWARE OF THE SCOOP
If your grocer

Don't take scoop coffee when you want Arbuckles' ARIOSA Coffee, which is sold only in sealed packages and never loose out of a "scoop."

A grocer may recommend a loose coffee at so much a pound. He is all right. He means well. If he handled the coffee himself, from the tree to you, you might well trust him implicitly.

But he does not!

He may know something about coffee. He may think he does, but let that pass.

He buys it loose! From whom? You don't know—if you did it would not mean anything. He trusts the man he buys it from—maybe a salesman, maybe a wholesaler, maybe a little local roaster. It does not matter. What do they know about coffee? More than the grocer? Perhaps.

Where do they get their coffee?
Where does it come from?
Whose hands touched it last?
Where had they been?

They can't tell Java from Brazilian by the looks after it is roasted, and it takes a man, expert by years of practical experience, to select sound, sweet green coffee of high cup merit; and another man with the knowledge and experience to proportion and blend for uniform results in the cup. First they must have the supply to preserve uniform quality.

Arbuckles buy more coffee than any four other concerns in the world combined, and their coffee is the most uniform. Then the roasting.

"The Brazilian Ambassador tells me that coffee-roasting is an art," was the court testimony of a world famous chemist. Where are artists more likely to find employment—manipulating a little roaster or in the Arbuckle mills, where the yearly roast amounts to the hundred million pounds?

Don't take scoop coffee, but buy a package of Arbuckles' ARIOSA. Take it home and keep the bean intact until ready to use. We hermetically seal each bean after roasting with a coating of fresh eggs and granulated sugar to close the pores and preserve the flavor. A little warming makes it easy to grind and develops the flavor. Coffee deteriorates if exposed to the air—it also collects dust and absorbs impurities. That is why you should "BEWARE OF THE SCOOP."

FORESTRY AND HOMECROF

ADDRESS OF GEORGE H. MA
WELL, DEAN OF THE HOME-CROFTERS GILD OF THE TALISMAN.

Before the Biennial Convention the General Federation of Wome
Clubs, at St. Paul, Minn., Ju
Fourth, 1906.

MADAME PRESIDENT AND DEL
GATES—LADIES AND GENTL MEN:

When I received the invitation to with you here to-day and speak u the subject "Forestry and Hom crofts," as it is announced on program, I felt that the occasion w one of so much importance, and opportunity one which I so greatly preciated, that I ought to do so thing which I rarely do and that to at least think out a speech in vance. I was asked for a manus of it for the press but I felt tha was unsafe to give it because I did that yet that something happen that made me lay aside speech and talk about something e

I have a speech prepared which planned to last for half an hour
there it is (holding up a card). N
I have fifteen minutes to speak
I am going to save that speech some other occasion, in some place, and talk to you about some which has been suggested to me this morning by the address we ha just listened to from Mr. Mills.

I was born in California and spe my life there (applause from the Ca fornia delegates) until within a few years when my work in the N tional Irrigation Movement took away from my native state. But want to take advantage of this portunity to stand here and make plea for the preservation of th
Temples of God—the Big Trees
California. (Applause.)

I question very much whether th who are here to-day realize the pow that is yours, in bringing about rig action, whether it be in congression or state legislation. We often s that this is a government of the pe ple, and that it is controlled by th votes. So it is. But behind the vo is the thought of the people. It public opinion which controls th country. The vote is merely a regi tering of that opinion; and the thoug of the people which precedes th opinion and brings about reforms, in my judgment, often a thing th springs from the minds of the wom of the country rather than from t minds of the men of the countr

I am free to say that in my earli years, and before I had a wider e perience and opportunities of o servation, I was not a believer in gi ing the ballot to the women. I a not here to make a plea for that t day, because I am not so much im pressed with the importance of it a others who think that the ballot is t main thing. It is the conversation the home circle and the thoughts th spring most often from the minds o the mothers of the country that co trol this country. (Applause.)

And although I believe to-day th the status of the man and the woma so far as their rights of citizenshi and rights before the law are co cerned, should be the same, I wa to lay that conclusion before yo simply as a basis for the broad statement that women can contr this country by the power of though without the ballot. If the women wh are here to-day and those who are a filiated with you in this great organ zation, would take up one or tw things as the result of this conferen and go hence and agitate it in ever home circle, and in every women club, and in every village and cit and through the columns of ever newspaper in the land, and by co respondence, you could accomplis within the next twelve months tw great things which would be a recor of accomplishment sufficient for on year of hard work for your organiz tion, and that is, first, to save the bi trees of California (Applause); an second, to secure the passage of th bill providing for forest reserves i the White Mountains and on the Ap palachian Range. (Applause.)

If those great trees in Californ were once destroyed they could no be replaced in centuries and probabl never. They were there when Chris walked the earth. They were ther when Rome shone resplendent in a her glory. They were there whe
Carthage nestled amid green field and vineyards on the southern shore of the Mediterranean. They were ther when Palmyra, with all her magnif cence, was the meeting place of th caravans traveling between Asia an the Mediterranean country. And t day they stand there pleading wi their out-spreading branches again ruthless destruction to satisfy th greed of man.

We may go back through histor and ruined city after ruined ci shows how ephemeral is everythi that man builds. Did is never occu

FORESTRY AND HOMECROFTS

ADDRESS OF GEORGE H. MAXWELL, DEAN OF THE HOMECROFTERS GILD OF THE TALISMAN.

Before the Biennial Convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, at St. Paul, Minn., June Fourth, 1906.

MADAME PRESIDENT AND DELEGATES—LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

When I received the invitation to be with you here to-day and speak upon the subject "Forestry and Homecrofts," as it is announced on the program, I felt that the occasion was one of so much importance, and the opportunity one which I so greatly appreciated, that I ought to do something which I rarely do, and that was to at least think out a speech in advance. I was asked for a manuscript of it for the press, but I felt that it was unsafe to give it because I never did that yet that something didn't happen that made me lay aside my speech and talk about something else. I have a speech prepared which was planned to last for half an hour, and there it is (holding up a card). Now, I have fifteen minutes to speak, and I am going to save that speech for some other occasion, in some other place, and talk to you about something which has been suggested to me here this morning by the address we have just listened to from Mr. Mills.

I was born in California and spent my life there (applause from the California delegates) until within a very few years when my work in the National Irrigation Movement took me away from my native state. But I want to take advantage of this opportunity to stand here and make a plea for the preservation of those Temples of God—the Big Trees of California. (Applause.)

I question very much whether those who are here to-day realise the power that is yours, in bringing about right action, whether it be in congressional or state legislation. We often say that this is a government of the people, and that it is controlled by their votes. So it is. But behind the vote is the thought of the people. It is public opinion which controls this country. The vote is merely a registering of that opinion; and the thought of the people which precedes that opinion and brings about reforms, is, in my judgment, often a thing that springs from the minds of the women of the country rather than from the minds of the men of the country.

I am free to say that in my earlier years, and before I had a wider experience and opportunities of observation, I was not a believer in giving the ballot to the women. I am not here to make a plea for that to-day, because I am not so much impressed with the importance of it as others who think that the ballot is the main thing. It is the conversation of the home circle and the thoughts that spring most often from the minds of the mothers of the country that control this country. (Applause.)

And although I believe to-day that the status of the man and the woman, so far as their rights of citizenship and rights before the law are concerned, should be the same, I want to lay that conclusion before you simply as a basis for the broader statement that women can control this country by the power of thought without the ballot. If the women who are here to-day and those who are affiliated with you in this great organization, would take up one or two things as the result of this conference and go hence and agitate it in every home circle, and in every women's club, and in every village and city, and through the columns of every newspaper in the land, and by correspondence, you could accomplish within the next twelve months two great things which would be a record of accomplishment sufficient for one year of hard work for your organization, and that is, first, to save the big trees of California (Applause); and, second, to secure the passage of the bill providing for forest reserves in the White Mountains and on the Appalachian Range. (Applause.)

If those great trees in California were once destroyed they could not be replaced in centuries and probably never. They were there when Christ walked the earth. They were there when Rome shone resplendent in all her glory. They were there when Carthage nestled amid green fields and vineyards on the southern shores of the Mediterranean. They were there when Palmyra, with all her magnificence, was the meeting place of the caravans traveling between Asia and the Mediterranean country. And to-day they stand there pleading with their out-spreading branches against ruthless destruction to satisfy the greed of man.

We may go back through history, and ruined city after ruined city shows how ephemeral is everything that man builds. Did is never occur to you, has it never occurred to those who are interested in uplifting and increasing the power for good of the church, and in carrying its missionary work into the cities and into the slums and into the tenements, where, God knows, it is needed most of anywhere on this earth—has it never occurred to you that a child nurtured in the tenements and in the slums and in the City flats, and seeing nothing around it but bricks and mortar and asphalt and trolley-cars and things that man has made, lives where there is nothing to create a conception of a higher power, and lacks the influence of the splendid manifestations of nature, which are the most convincing revelation that we have that there is a Creator, and that there is a God, and that there should be a faith in religion in the heart of every man.

If you want to make this a religious nation, as you must if it is to be preserved, you must get the children of the cities back to nature, and under the spell of its influence, or at least rear them in an environment where they can see and be convinced by the miracles of nature's mysteries that there is "a God who Rules the world and Rolls the ages on." (Applause.)

And so through you I appeal not only to the women of the country, but to the churches of the country, to put forth every influence, not only to save those great trees in California, but to aid this whole great movement for the preservation of the forests we have, by their right use, for the planting of new forests, and for the scattering through this great nation, in every state and territory, of forest plantations that, when they come to maturity a generation from now, will supply every state with wood and timber of every kind for every purpose from Forests and Tree Plantations within its own borders.

I have no time today to go into details, but if you will go into the South and see the actual conditions with reference to the water supply on the streams flowing from the Appalachian mountains, and study the beauties of that country, you will be converted in an instant to the necessity for the creation of the Appalachian Forest reserve; and the same thing is true of the proposed White Mountain Forest Reservation in New England. Those Reserves are comparatively small things in the amount of money involved. If we can throw money to the birds, as a manure spreader throws it out of the back of a wagon into the field, to build the Panama canal and manage the conquest of the Philippine Islands, and to build huge battleships, I maintain that we can at least spare money enough to perpetuate the forests that God gave us and for the preservation of all the Internal Resources of our country at home. (Applause.)

I maintain another thing, and that is that if the women who are here today would go to their homes from this convention, and take up and study the possibilities of the development of Arizona and New Mexico under a policy which will reserve for national control the forests and the water supply which are the only things that keep that great country from going back to the desert, you would save this nation from the infamy of joining Arizona and New Mexico in the bonds of joint statehood. In the face of your opposition that great wrong could never be accomplished. All women in the land should rise up and protest against it, because it is abandoning the destiny and development of the foundation of all the resources for homemaking of those territories to the unrestrained legislative control of a legislature which will be dominated by the most evil political influences that ever existed in any state—the offscourings of the worst political rottenness that ever prevailed in Pennsylvania, coupled with the iniquities that will prevail by reason of the fact that so large a proportion of the population of New Mexico cannot even speak the English Language. The joint statehood bill proposes to give to the control of such a legislature as that, without any possible check or hinderance, a land grant of about twenty million acres to grab and speculate with and graft on and practically to do with as they please. (Applause.)

I only want to say in closing: If you find crime anywhere; if you find a man gone wrong anywhere; if you find political corruption or anything going wrong in our political institutions, you will find, if you trace it back, that the fault lies in its original source, at some place or other, in the fact that there was not the right kind of a home and the right kind of a mother. If you find a man of strong and sterling character (or a woman either) you trace it back and you will find that it was because there was the right kind of a mother, and the right kind of a home.

We have heard a good deal lately about the "man behind the gun" and the "man behind the pick" and "the man behind the ballot" and the "man behind" a great many other things, but I want to tell you that you can pile them all one upon another like Ossa upon Pelion and all of them together are not of as much importance as the "Mother behind the Home!" (Applause.)

If you are to have the right kind of homes and the right kind of mothers everywhere throughout the length and breadth of this great and beautiful country of ours, you must make it easily possible for every man who works and lives by his toil to have a home of his own on the land—a HOMECROFT, however small.

You must train every child in garden schools to know how to plant seeds and make things grow and get food directly from the bossom of Mother Earth. You must so train all boys and girls that their first great ambition will be to get a home of their own with a piece of ground around it large enough for a garden.

The Good Book tells us that "God planted a garden eastward in Eden; and there he put the man whom he had formed. And out of the ground made the Lord God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight and good for food."

God intended that every man and woman and every child should live next to nature and on the land, and every man who marries a woman should put her in a home in the midst of a garden.

The great movement which is now fairly under way, known as the HOMECROFT MOVEMENT, proposes to do that very thing, and the Creed and Platform of the Homecrofters tells how it may be done.

The slogan of the Homecroft Movement is:

"Every Child in a Garden—Every Mother in a Homecroft—and Individual Industrial Independence for Every Worker, in a Home of his Own on the Land."

Is not that a Cause which should have the ardent and enthusiastic support and co-operation of every man and woman, and especially of every mother in the land?

Give every Man a Chance.

THE SLOGAN OF THE HOMECROFTERS IS

"Every Child in a Garden—Every Mother in a Homecroft, and Individual, Industrial Independence for Every Worker in a Home of his Own on the Land."

"A little croft we owned—a plot of corn,
A garden stored with peas and mint and thyme,
And flowers for posies, oft on Sunday morn,
Plucked while the church bells rang their earliest chimes."
—Wordsworth.

"The Citizen standing in the doorway of his home—contented on his threshold, his family gathered about his hearthstone, while the evening of a well spent day closes in scenes and sounds that are dearest—he shall save the Republic when the drum-tap is futile and the barracks are exhausted."—Henry W. Grady.

"The slums and tenements of the great cities are social dynamite, certain to explode sooner or later. The only safeguard against such dangers is to plant the multiplying millions of our fast increasing population in individual homes on the land—homecrofts, however small, owned by the occupant, where every worker and his family can enjoy individual industrial independence."—George H. Maxwell.

This book is the first of a Series that will Chronicle the Progress of the HOMECROFT MOVEMENT and inform all who wish to co-operate with it how they may do so through the formation of local Homecrofters' Circles, Clubs or Gilds to promote Town and Village Betterment, stimulate home civic pride and loyalty to home institutions, industries and trade, improve methods and facilities of education in the local public schools, and create new opportunities "At Home" that will go far to check the drift of trade and population to the cities.

The first Gild of the Homecrofters has been established at Watertown, Massachusetts. The Gildhall, Shops and Gardens are located at 143 Main Street, where the Garden School is now fully organized and over one hundred children are at work in the Gardens. The departments for training in Homecraft and Village Industries are being installed. The Weavers are already at work at the looms.

It is not designed to build here an isolated institution, but to make a model which can be duplicated in any town or village in the country.

Copies of "THE FIRST BOOK OF THE HOMECROFTERS" can be obtained by sending twelve two-cent stamps with your name and address (carefully and plainly written) to The Homecrofters' Gild of the Talisman, 143 Main St., Watertown, Massachusetts.

"Peace has her victories no less renowned than war."

EDUCATION

OPPORTUNITY
HOMECROFTS

We believe that the Patriotic Slogan of the Whole People of this Nation should be "Every Child in a Garden—Every Mother in a Homecroft—and Individual Industrial Independence for Every Worker in a Home of his Own on the Land," and that until he owns such a Home, the concentrated purpose and chief inspiration to labor in the life of every wage worker should be his determination to "Get an Acre and Live on it."

We believe that the Slums and Tenements and Congested Centers of population in the Cities are a savagely deteriorating social, moral and political influence, and that a great public movement should be organized, and the whole power of the nation and the states exerted for the betterment of all the conditions of Rural Life, and to create and upbuild Centers of Social and Civic Life in Country and Suburban Towns and Villages, where Trade and Industry can be so firmly anchored that they cannot be drawn into the Commercial Maelstrom that is now steadily sucking Industry and Humanity into the Vortex of the Great Cities.

We believe that every Citizen in this Country has an inherent and Fundamental Right to an Education which will train him to Earn a Living, and, if need be, to get his living straight from Mother Earth; and that he has the same right to the Opportunity to have the Work to Do which will afford him that living, and to earn not only a comfortable livelihood, but enough more to enable him to be a Homecrofter and to have a Home of his Own, with ground around it sufficient to yield him and his family a Living from the Land as the reward for his own labor.

We believe that the Public Domain is the most precious heritage of the people, and the surest safeguard the nation has against Social Unrest, Disturbance or Upheaval, and that the Cause of Humanity and the Preservation of Social Stability and of our Free Institutions demand that the absorption of the public lands into speculative private ownership, without settlement, be forthwith stopped; and that the nation should create opportunities for Homecrofters by building irrigation and drainage works to reclaim land as fast as it is needed to give every man who wants a Home on the Land a chance to get it.

We believe that, as a Nation, we should be less absorbed with Making Money, and should pay more heed to raising up and training Men who will be Law-Abiding Citizens; that the welfare of our Workers is of more consequence than the mere accumulation of Wealth; and that Stability of National Character and of Social and Business Conditions is of greater importance to the people of this country as a whole than any other one question that is now before them; and we believe that the only way to Preserve such Stability, and to Permanently Maintain our National Prosperity, is to carry into immediate effect and operation the Platform of the Talisman, which is as follows:

EDUCATION, EMPLOYMENT AND HOMES ON THE LAND.

1. That children shall be taught gardening and homecraft in the public schools, and that Homecraft and Garden Training Schools shall be established by county, municipal, state, and national governments, where every boy and every man out of work who wants employment where he can gain that knowledge, can learn how to make a home and till the soil and get his living straight from the ground, and where every boy would be taught that his first aim in life should be to get a home of his own on the land.

BUILD HOMECROFTS AS NATIONAL SAFEGUARDS.

2. That the New Zealand system of Land Taxation and Land Purchase and Subdivision, and Advances to Settlers Act, shall be adopted in this country, to the end that land shall be subdivided into small holdings in the hands of those who will till it for a livelihood, and labor find occupation in the creation of homecrofts, which will be perpetual safeguards against the political evils and social discontent resulting from the overgrowth of cities and the sufferings of unemployed wage-earners.

PROTECTION FOR THE AMERICAN HOMECROFT.

3. That Rural Settlement shall be encouraged and the principle of Protection for the American Wageworker and his Home applied directly to the Home by the Exemption from Taxation of all improvements upon, and also of all personal property, not exceeding $2,500 in value, used on and in connection with, every Homecroft or Rural Homestead of not more than ten acres in extent, which the owner occupies as a permanent home and cultivates with his own labor and so provides therefrom all or part of the support for a family.

ENLARGEMENT OF AREA AVAILABLE FOR HOMEMAKING.

4. That the National Government, as part of a comprehensive national policy of internal improvements for river control and regulation, and for the enlargement to the utmost possible extent of the area of the country available for agriculture and Homes on the Land, and for the protection of those Homes from either flood or drouth, shall build not only levees and revetments where needed, and drainage works for the reclamation of swamp and overflowed lands, but shall also preserve existing forests, reforest denuded areas, plant new forests, and build the great reservoirs and other engineering works necessary to safeguard against overflow and save for beneficial use the flood waters that now run to waste.

RECLAMATION AND SETTLEMENT OF THE ARID LANDS.

5. That the National Government shall build the irrigation works necessary to bring water within reach of settlers on the arid lands, the cost of such works to be repaid to the government by such settlers in annual installments without interest, and that the construction of the great irrigation works necessary for the utilization of the waters of such large rivers as the Columbia, the Sacramento, the Colorado, the Rio Grande, and the Missouri, and their tributaries, shall proceed as rapidly as the lands reclaimed will be utilized in small farms by actual settlers and homemakers, who will repay the government the cost of construction of the irrigation works, and that the amount needed each year for construction, as recommended by the Secretary of the Interior, shall be made available by Congress as a loan from the general treasury to the Reclamation Fund, and repaid from lands reclaimed, as required by the National Irrigation Act.

SAVE THE PUBLIC LANDS FOR HOMEMAKERS.

6. That not another acre of the public lands shall ever hereafter be granted to any state or territory for any purpose whatsoever, or to any one other than an actual settler who has built his home on the land and lived on it for five years, and that no more land scrip of any kind shall ever be issued, and that the Desert Land Law and the Commutation Clause of the Homestead Law shall be made to conform to the recommendations of the Public Lands Commission appointed by President Roosevelt and of the Message of the President to Congress.

PLANT FORESTS AND CREATE FOREST PLANTATIONS.

7. That the Timber and Stone Law shall be repealed, and that all public timber lands shall be included in permanent Forest Reserves, the title to the land to be forever retained by the National Government, stumpage only of matured timber to be sold, and young timber to be preserved for future cutting, so that the forests will be perpetuated by right use; and that the National Government shall by the reservation or purchase of existing forest lands, and the planting of new forests, create in every state National Forest Plantations from which, through all the years to come, a sufficient supply of wood and timber can be annually harvested to supply the needs of the people of each state from the Forest Plantations in that state.

UNITED OWNERSHIP OF LAND AND WATER.

8. That it shall be the law of every state and of the United States, that beneficial use is the basis, the measure, and the limit of all rights to water, including riparian rights, and that the right to the use of water for irrigation shall inhere in and be appurtenant to the land irrigated, so that the ownership of the land and the water shall be united, and no right to water as a speculative commodity shall ever be acquired, held or owned.

RIGHT OF APPROPRIATION FOR BENEFICIAL USE.

9. That it shall be the law of every state and of the United States, that all unused and unappropriated waters are public property, subject to appropriation for a beneficial use, first in time being first in right, and that on all interstate streams, priority of use shall give priority of right, throughout the entire course of the stream without regard to state lines, and that in each drainage basin the irrigators therein shall control the distribution of the water.

BY CHARLES F. DOLE

Author of "The American Citizen;" "The Religion of a Gentleman;" "The Spirit of Democracy," etc.

THIS remarkably interesting and stimulating book has been everywhere welcomed as a most valuable contribution to the thought of the present day.

THERE IS IN IT THE INSPIRATION OF HIGH AND PATRIOTIC IDEALS

It sheds a new light, bright, clear and convincing, in its common-sense optimism, upon the conditions that confront the nation to-day. Everyone who reads it will go forward with a clearer vision of the future of OUR COUNTRY and with renewed courage and faith in THE CAUSE OF THE PEOPLE.

Theodore C. Williams, late Master of the Hackley School, New York, in a San Francisco paper, declares that "it gives the profoundest thought with a transparent simplicity and charm that make it universally readable. It speaks as a friend to a friend. It has the rare eloquence of perfect ease and clearness."

The London Spectator calls it "a healthy and virile essay."

The Bradford (England) Observer, speaking of its reality and reasonableness, says it is "a very revelation."

These are only a few from hundreds of encomiums commending the book for its timeliness.

It should be read by all who feel the pressure of

SEEING IS BELIEVING

IT IS NOT AN EASY MATTER

to make a million people believe that so good a magazine as Maxwell's Homemaker Magazine can be published for ten cents a year.

But we are doing it because the magazine speaks for itself and tells its own story.

Here is what one of our subscribers at Crockett, Texas, writes:

"The March number of your excellent magazine is before me. It is certainly filled with helpful articles, and I would be glad to know that every family in Texas had the benefit of its teachings. The first article in this number, 'A Homecrofter's Garden,' should be preserved for reference. THE ARTICLE 'HEALTH IN THE HOME,' IF CAREFULLY FOLLOWED, WOULD SAVE SICKNESS IN EVERY FAMILY. Anything that I can do to assist you in extending your circulation in Texas will be gladly done."

Our circulation has grown so satisfactorily that with the April number we were able to enlarge the magazine and add several new features, and it will continue to improve every month.

If you have not yet seen the magazine, write for a free sample copy. It will convince you that for only ten cents a year you can get a magazine of more real genuine value than any other magazine that is published to every one who is really studying how to make the home life better and happier, how to lighten the housekeeper's labors, how to bring up the children and keep them and the whole family well and strong all the time, and do it all on a moderate income.

"The Delights of Gardening" in the April number would open the door of a new life to many a family if they would read it.

And here are some of the other Departments:

Stories and Sketches, Little Folks in the Home, Home Etiquette, The Home Garden, Garden Notes, Editorial Comment, The Home Study, Music in the Home, Entertaining in the Home, Home Sewing, Care of the Home, Health in the Home, Home Cooking, Building the Home (with plan and design for a cottage home), Home Handicraft, Home Cheer.

You will get this April number and in addition One Whole Year's Subscription covering twelve copies of the magazine, one each month for twelve months, if you will put one dime or five two cent stamps in an envelope with your name and address (write it plainly), and mail it to MAXWELL'S HOMEMAKER MAGAZINE, 1406 Fisher Building, Chicago, Ill.

Do It Now—Don't Delay

BEEF TRUST RIDER.

Provision Inspecting American Meats Tacked on Agricultural Bill.

GUY ELLIOTT MITCHELL

nator Beveridge presented a rad- amendment to the agricultural ap- riation bill the other day which passed promptly. Back of the and celerity with which this ac- was accomplished is a story. It n interesting one too, for it shows the President for once, at least, able to hold the big stick over the ate, and the great packing inter- and forced the amendment with ch he was in accord.

he rider that was tacked on to the 00,000 appropriation bill in the ate at the last moment without ussion, provides for the same sort an inspection of meats for home sumption that is provided for those ich are sent abroad. It will cost great packing house industry sev million dollars each year, for y will have to pay for the inspec . When the question came up be- Congress as to who should as- ne the expense of this work the king house lobby objected stren usly to putting up any money for it, withstanding the fact that some nths ago when there was an in- fficient appropriation for foreign in- spection, a number of large packing ouse concerns voluntarily offered to fray the cost involved.

ONSUMER PAYS COST ANYWAY.

It is stated that, of course, the pack g house people, otherwise the beef ust, will pass the cost of the inspec on along to the consumer; but as it ill only amount to about 5 or 6 cents head on each carcass the increase ill not be appreciable in the individ al beef steak, at least it ought not to o, but the combination of packers, ealers, wholesalers, retailers, etc., ill doubtless make an excuse for put ing up meat at least a cent a pound, nd thus make an investment of many undred per cent. off the amount hich they pay for the Government spection.

HOW THE TROUBLE BEGAN.

Some time ago Upton Sinclair published "The Jungle." It was a novel nd horrible. It showed that the in- pection service at the Chicago pack ng houses was wholly inadequate. It was proved that the Government in- pectors passed on the conditions of he carcasses when the animals were killed; but after that there were no nspections and the conditions were ncredibly revolting. President Roosevelt read the book and is stated to have been outraged at the statements made. Were they true or were they exaggerated? He made some inquiries and found that the statements were all well founded. Then he was genuinely angry. Secretary Wilson sent a commission out to look into the condition of affairs, but the President was apparently not satisfied with the Government commission, so he sent his close personal friend, Mr. J. B. Reynolds, a prominent social worker and a man of means, and Mr. Charles P. Neill, the United States Commissioner of Labor, on a purely personal inspection tour. The expenses of the two investigators were paid by the Government, but the men received no salaries and the inquiry was, in a way, unofficial.

There has never yet been any written report made public from these two investigators; likely there will not be; but the President knows all they found out, and the packers know it too. Both the President and the packers were horrified; the reasons were different. The story around the Capitol regarding this investigation runs something like this: The packers said, "If this sort of a story gets out it will ruin our business abroad." The President remarked in effect, "If ' 'l that I know gets out, it will ruin your business at home too."

"Now," said the packers, "make any sort of an inspection law you want, pass it and we will stand for it, and promise to be good in the future, but do not make a public scandal of this matter."

FOR A STRICT INSPECTION LAW.

The President is reported to have intimated that he was willing, and the inspection law will be passed, without scandal if it can be, but with scandal if it must. He recognized that there were many innocent interests which would be severely damaged by the publication of this report. What he was after principally was results for the future.

There is another peculiar feature which is having some weight in the ease with which the inspection law gets past what would ordinarily be an almost insurmountable barrier. It seems that Mr. Sinclair is writing another book. It will be more damaging than the Jungle. It is to be an expose of the whole packing business from the report of the "Embalmed Beef Commission" down to the present time —and the combination of official documents and statements of eye witnesses. When this book appears the packers are very anxious to be able to say that the practices alluded to therein are a thing of the past "and that no such conditions can exist under the present Government inspection."

The new act provides an inspection that does not stop at the gate of the packing house, but follows the animal through all departments until it reaches the can or the cooler.

There is some antagonism presented to the bill in the House, on the grounds of constitutionallity and other excuses, but if any actual opposition should develop it will mean a thorough hearing in committee on both sides of the question and it is presumed that this is about the last thing the packers actually desire.

Seldom, if ever, has the public been more aroused over any public question. The fact that the meat consumption entered vitally into every home, coupled with the terrible charges, made not only in the "Jungle," but through many other credible sources, has aroused a state of public sentiment which is akin to revolutionary. On the whole, in the face of an intensely suspicious public, an aroused Congress and a determined President, the beef trust is now up against the fight of its life. While the President intended to use his private report as a club to force legislation, and to withhold its publication unless it was found necessary to bring the packers to terms, the overwhelming current of aroused public indignation will likely force its publication. Indeed the amount of damaging and disgusting details which are being made known day after day in the daily press from information given by various people who are in a position to know the facts, would seem to indicate that but little additional damage to anybody could be accomplished through the publication of the report.

GOVERNMENT HOLDS TRUMP CARDS.

Commenting on the question of the constitutionality of the amendment if it should become a law, in that it interferes with state rights, a prominent Government official remarked that in any event the packers could be forced to terms. They are very anxious over their great foreign meat trade and this is largely dependent upon Government inspection of carcasses. Abroad the Government inspection tag is looked upon as a guarantee, and without it foreign meat trade would suffer inestimably. Should the packers refuse to allow the Government to inspect food for home consumption, the Government could in its turn refuse to inspect meats for export.

NEILL REPORT PUBLISHED.

After some consideration of the wisdom of publishing the Neill report and yielding to the public clamor of all sections of the country for a knowledge of its contents, the President sent a message to Congress transmitting it for the consideration of the national legislature. The story as told by the Neill report shows revolting conditions in a number of the packing houses and in many cases upholds all of the stories told in the Sinclair novel. The Neill committee did not consider affidavits of witnesses to any great extent in arriving at is conclusions, but paid more attention rather to conditions as witnessed by the three members of the committee. The message of President Roosevelt that submitted the report characterized the conditions found by the investigators as "revolting" and urged immediate legislation "in the interests of health and decency." He not only recommends the passage of the so-called Beveridge amendment to the agricultural appropriation bill but threatens to destroy the foreign business of the packers should congress fail to provide for federal inspection of meats at all stages of preparation. In the event of such failure, the President says that he will be "compelled to order that inspection labels and certificates on canned products shall not be used hereafter." Without these labels the products will be excluded from European markets.

One on the Professor.

Prof. Barrett Wendell, of Harvard, lightened with an anecdote an English lecture.

"There was a certain instructor," he said, "who was always impressing upon his students the need of perspicuity.

"A young man came to him one day to get back an essay that had been submitted.

"'A very good essay,' said the instructor, as he returned the paper, 'but Mr. Smith, you should write always so that the most ignorant person can understand every word you say.'

"The young man looked up anxiously.

"'What part of my essay was not clear to you, professor?' he asked."

CAUSED PACKERS' FRIGHT.

Interview with Author of the Now Famous "Jungle"—Expose of Meat Packing Methods.

Upton Sinclair, the author of the "Jungle" which has in reality started the entire packing house scandal, is an advocate of municipal slaughter-houses. He believes that this is the only effective solution of the problem, although he says that the Beveridge amendment is good so far as it goes. Interviewed recently, he said, "There is no doubt that this amendment will become a law; but a few months after its enactment it will be forgotten and former conditions will be resumed. I say former conditions, because the Chicago packers have cleaned up house and are now able to make a show of virtue which they never possessed, but it is impossible for them to conceal the fact that they have sent out millions of cans of 'potted chicken' made of bob, or day-old veal, millions of cans of roast beef made of cow udders and gristle, and that all this vast output has been treated with chemicals to conceal putrefaction and to preserve the stuff sold under a false name.

GOVERNMENT SLAUGHTER HOUSES IN EUROPE.

"Every slaughter house in England, Germany, and Belgium is owned by the government. There is no chance to graft, because the slaughter of cattle and the sale of meat is distinct and separate. The government kills for anybody, and charges so much a head. Twelve samples are cut from each animal and subjected to a microscopic examination. If the meat is unhealthful it is condemned and destroyed. The slaughter houses are as cleanly as modern hospitals, and not to be compared in any way with the filthy shambles we endure here.

ANSWERING A HOWL.

"As an additional precaution against graft, it is provided that the loss incident to condemnation shall fall on the breeder or seller of the cattle and not to the buyer. This compels the cattle breeder to care for his stock in a scientific and sanitary manner. That answers the violent protests of the Western cattlemen, who were forced by the beef trust to inundate President Roosevelt with telegrams of objection to the Beveridge bill, until it was discovered that the making public of the Reynolds-Neill report woud work more damage to the business of canning dyed bob veal and selling it as chicken.

"The opposition to the bill was not because the packers feared it would interfere with their fraudulent practices, but because it would impose upon them a tax of $2,000,000 a year, to pay for the inspection, which is nothing more or less than advertisement for their bogus goods in foreign countries.

MR. SINCLAIR'S SOLUTION.

"Every city in the United States should have municipal slaughter houses. All private slaughter houses should be abolished. The result of such a condition would be to break the power of the packers' trust. They would have to sell out at cost the slaughter houses fit for the killing of food animals, and destroy those that are unfit. That is the only solution of the problem, which is now recognized as of huge importance to the people of this country, and the only way that public opinion can be enlightened is to permit the commissioners appointed by President Roosevelt to make public the full story of the horrors they found in the head center of the great depot of reception and distribution in Chicago.

"The packers know that their very life depends upon the approval of foreign nations, and they know that the stamp of governmental approval abroad is regarded as the hall mark of excellence. They know that the millions in Europe understand official indorsement to be an absolute and unassailable guarantee and they regard official indorsement by agents of the United States government in the same light and with the same confidence."

POINTS OF BEVERIDGE MEAT INSPECTION BILL.

Provides for rigid postmortem inspection of all cattle, swine, sheep, and goats killed for human consumption. All meats found healthful shall be tagged, and all meat found unhealthful shall be destroyed.

All slaughterers and packers and all others engaged in preparation of meat products must admit inspectors to all parts of their establishments.

All canning, rendering, salting, and packing products are included, and any products treated with dyes or deleterious chemicals or presevatives shall be condemned.

All establishments must be maintained in a sanitary manner, according to rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture.

After January 1, 1907, no railroad or any other common carrier can transport any meat product not inspected or passed, and no ship with such articles on board shall be given clearance papers, nor can any common carrier transport any meat product that is prepared in an establishment where specified sanitary conditions do not prevail.

All canned, potted, or canvased meat products shall be labeled as inspected and passed and shall not be offered for sale until so labeled.

Signals on Rural Mail-Boxes.

The Fourth Assistant Postmaster General has issued an order providing that after July 1 next, rural delivery carriers, when making their trips, will visit and examine only those boxes for which they have mail for delivery and those on which the signals are displayed to indicate that there is mail for dispatch.

Those patrons who are now maintaining mail boxes on which there are no signals will be required to procure some sort of device which will serve as a signal to carriers.

By this new arrangement it is expected that the delivery and collection of mail along rural free delivery routes will be greatly facilitated.

WHY DOES PAINT PEEL OFF

Some will tell you there is no good paint any more. Others that there are no good painters. Both statements are incorrect. The trouble is, years ago you could scarcely go wrong in painting, for there was little paint used but pure white lead and oil. Nowadays there are almost as many alleged "paints" as there are rival dealers to sell them, and as many so-called white leads which are not white lead, as there are proprietary paints.

Yet good white lead and linseed oil paint is as good as it ever was—and better. If you are in real earnest about getting paint which will look well and last—the good old kind of other days—let us tell you about our pure white lead.

THE WOMAN BEAUTIFUL.

Florence Drug Co. Tell Why Laxakola Tonic Tablets Beautify the Skin.

For the short time that Laxakola Tonic Tablets have been on sale at Florence drug store probably no other laxative remedy has ever given such universal satisfaction.

But great success never comes without great merit. One lady in Clanton suffering from biliousness, impure blood, costiveness, an a muddy, cloudy complexion declares that Laxakola tablets are worth $10.00 a bottle.

By their benificial action upon the liver and the bile pigments, they have worked wonders in this lady's case, and her skin is now so clear and healthy that her friends are complimenting her on her improved appearance.

Just try a 25 cent bottle on Florence Drug co's. guarantee, and this grand tonic laxative will do more to purify your blood, bring color to your face, clear up your skin and complexion, and make you vigorous and healthy than any other remedy you ever heard of.

Some time ago, I said in an article published in the Banner, regarding the San Francisco fire, that I would give detailed estimate of the losses there by my companies as soon as final settlement could be made, and while as yet the adjustment is not entirely over, yet we are able to approximately estimate our losses The Liverpool & London & Globe will lose $4,248,000, all of which will be paid from the home office in England, without using any of their United States assets. This will make over $100,000,000 paid to policy-holders in the United States by this company. My other three companies' losses, towit: The London & Lancashire, the Phenix of Brooklyn and the Atlanta-Birmingham are in proportion; all has, and will be paid without shocking their assets in the least.

JOYCE'S DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE

NOW, isn't that pink lovely!"

A merry group of girls were chattering on the lawn of Miss Floyd's Academy for Girls on a bright morning in June. School was just over, and they were planning great things for the Fourth of July, when Miss Floyd held her commencement exercises.

"Of course, we'll wear white for the exercises," said pretty June Winthrop. "But I rather think we can have what we like for the reception in the evening. I shall coax mamma into getting me that pink chiffon—indeed I shall."

"I'll have the crep de chine I told you of," declared Laura Dean, a gypsy beauty of sixteen.

"Do you remember that Miss Floyd asked us not to buy expensive dresses?" Beulah Wilson reminded them. "She said she didn't wish Joyce Harwood and Kathleen Hunt to feel uncomfortable."

June tossed her head.

"I really cannot dress down to Miss Floyd's charity pupils. I don't think they ought to come if they can't keep up to our standards of dress."

Beulah Wilson was rich, and her protest had been made solely on behalf of her friend Joyce, who could with the utmost difficulty present a neat and fresh appearance.

"Blue for you, June; leave the pink for me," cried Laura. "Do have pale green, Beulah."

"I shall have a new white lawn for the Fourth," replied Beulah, firmly. "I think it's absurd to have two dresses for what is, after all, one occasion."

"Here comes Joyce and Kathleen," remarked June.

"Were talking of our commencement dresses, Joyce."

The words were not without malice. Both Joyce and Kathleen had made June feel small in the classroom.

"I think my dress is bought," replied Kathleen, a tall girl of fifteen, with a pretty, irresolute face. She looked wistfully at her questioner's dainty lawn, inset with lace, her rich ribbons and gold buttons. She could not have imagined greater bliss than possessing such things herself.

"For the exercises, yes," said Laura. "But we mean to wear colors in the evening."

Kathleen almost turned pale.

"You will have two new dresses for commencement?" she gasped, in alarm.

She turned to Joyce—strong, beautiful Joyce, whom no one ever snubbed or put down, and whose clear, dark eyes were now fixed, in some contempt, upon June and Laura.

"Shall you not get two?" persisted June.

"Oh, if you do——" began Kathleen, helplessly.

Joyce had not spoken. The whole question seemed very trivial to her. Not that she did not care for pretty things, but just now her thoughts were with her sick mother.

"This is an important occasion," struck in Laura, returning to the charge. "Miss Floyd's two married sisters will be here, and she will want everything and everybody at their best. They are so wealthy."

"And alone in the world—widows and childless," remarked Joyce. "It seems to me wealth is not of much good under such circumstances. Come, Kathie."

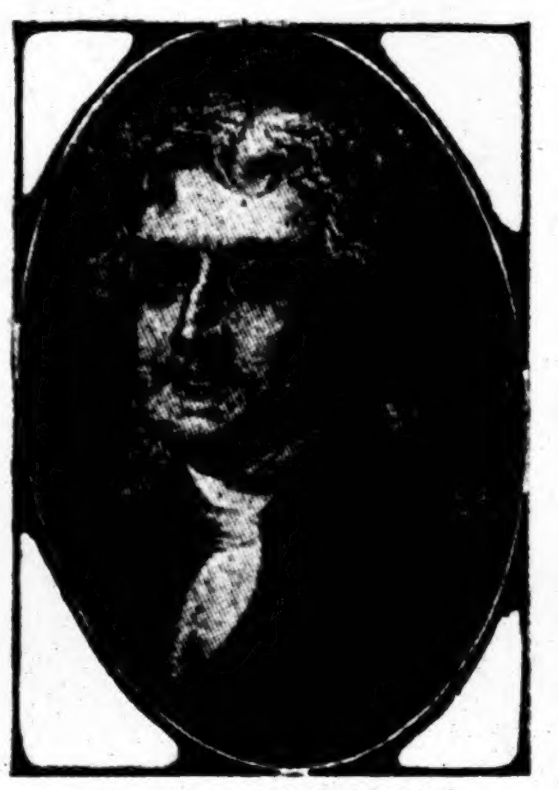
"What shall we do?" asked Kathleen, when they were alone.

"Do?" inquired Joyce, vaguely.

"About the Fourth," said Kathleen. "My lawn cost just fifteen cents a yard, and I can't have any lace. How I hate to be so poor."

"Kathie," said her friend, earnestly, "don't care about it. I'm not even going to have a new lawn—only my last summer's let down. I don't intend to worry about it. I was sorry not to hear you speak more decidedly about the two dresses. You know you can't have two."

"I did wonder, for a minute, if mother wouldn't let me have her wedding dress made over," hesitated the the other. "She never goes anywhere hardly, and so doesn't need it as I do."



THOMAS JEFFERSON.

Joyce's dark eyes flashed.

"And you would make her going out at all quite impossible by taking her only good dress?" she cried, indignantly. Then, softening in a moment, she added, "No, dear, don't do that."

They reached Joyce's own home at that point, and Joyce went in without waiting for a reply.

"Mother, darling," she called softly, as she entered the darkened room, "is your head better? Did I wake you?"

Mrs. Harwood smiled faintly.

"You did not wake me—I was listening for your steps," she answered.

"Did Mrs. Jones come in?" went on Joyce.

"Yes," was the reply. "But, my child, she must not come again. We cannot afford her. And this is so near the end of the term. You will soon be at home."

Joyce did not answer at once. She went into the kitchen and soon returned with a slice of golden brown toast and a cup of fragrant tea.

"Now, try this," she said, coaxingly. "Oh, mother mine, I do wish you'd consent to my giving up school and getting some work."

"We will see after the Fourth," said Mrs. Harwood. "Now, dear, get your own luncheon while I take a nap."

* * * * * * *

The Fourth of July dawned as that historic day should dawn—showing a cloudless sky, a blazing sun. Miss Floyd was in a pleasant flutter of excitement. Her sisters, Mrs. Danesford and Mrs. Jerome, sat beside her near the platform. She felt very proud of her school. The girls were charming in their snowy frocks as they sat, looking like white winged birds, on the platform.

"That is a lovely child at the end of the front row," said Mrs. Danesford suddenly. "Who is she?"

"That is Kathleen Hunt," replied Miss Floyd. "And the dark one next her is Joyce Harwood. They must both work soon, for their mothers are widows and poor. I have given them their schooling and hope to start them in some way."

The exercises passed off delightfully, and after them the parents and other "grown ups" enjoyed the lawn tea. But the girls hurried home to change their dresses or freshen up for the evening reception.

It was a little after dusk. The dim streets grew ever and again momentarily brilliant with the light of Roman candles or the radiance of Catherine wheels. The cheerful "pop" of countless firecrackers resounded through the air.

The reception was in full swing when Mrs. Danesford sought a moment's rest and quiet in the breakfast room. A screen had been pushed near an open window, and she sat down behind it. She had determined to take Kathleen Hunt home with her, if she would come, as reader and companion. She would offer the widowed mother a cottage near her own magnificent mansion on the banks of the Hudson. The daughter should be hers by day, the real mother's by night.

"Try it," Mrs. Jerome had said. "If the plan succeeds I may try the other."

A group of girls, merry, chattering, flocked into the room. A torn skirt seemed to have been the cause of their coming. Mrs. Danesford did not move, thinking they would go out in a moment.

"Did you see that dress of Joyce's?" demanded June. "Her last summer's one, and darned, at that."

"Kathleen's looked about ten cents a yard," added Laura. "If they're as poor as that comes to they have no business here."

She stopped abruptly. Mrs. Danesford thought at first that they had seen her behind the screen, but the silence was caused by the entrance of Joyce and Kathleen.

"We couldn't help hearing you," remarked Joyce.

"You have no right to decide that we are poor because we don't dress as you do," said Kathleen. "Some people think it in bad taste to dress much before you come out."

Mrs. Danesford could see them all—Joyce and Kathleen, in their shabby frocks, contrasting so painfully with the chiffons and crepe de chines of the others. But Joyce stood, erect and proud, her eyes aglow. Laura and June looked at them coolly.

"I fully admit it was no business of mine," replied June icily.

"You are right—it is no business of yours," here struck in Joyce. "And, for my part, it does not matter to me at all that you should know we are poor, very poor. Poverty is no disgrace. This is the Fourth of July," she went on, her color rising. "It is the anniversary of the day when our fathers shook off unjust and galling bondage. Let us, Kathleen," she said to her friend, "shake off an allegiance to a lie. No, we do not dress like this from choice. We prefer crepe de chines to ten-cent lawns. But, not to have every dress in New York, would I care as much for such things as you do!" Her eyes blazed upon the girls in front of her. "Nor choose my friends by the amount of their drygoods' bills. No, poverty is no disgrace, and wealth you have not earned no merit, no honor, except as it is well and nobly spent."

"What a Fourth of July oration!" sneered Laura. "It's a pity none of the guests can hear you."

"One of them has," said Mrs. Danesford, coming forward. She put her hand on Joyce's shoulder. "Come with me, my dear. I want a little talk with you and my sister."

* * * * * * *

Joyce and her mother are very happy in the little cottage ("part of your salary, my dear," Mrs. Danesford had said) by the waters of the noble Hudson. Kathleen never knew how near that dainty home came to being hers, nor did Joyce ever learn that she owed it to her "Declaration of Independence."—Frances Harmer.

KEEPING A DIARY

By Hattie Vose Hall

I had a diary Christmas,
And father laughed and said,
"If you'll keep that till the Fourth of July I'll give you a dollar, Ned."
Queer way to earn a dollar,
But easy as a b c;
So I put it in my secret box,
Safe under lock and key.

It's a pretty book—bright red leather—
And Spud Jones wants to swap
He said he'd give me his two-blade knife
And his second best spinning top.
But I'd rather have the dollar,
So I put it away again;
The pages are just as clean and white—
Not a bit of a spot or stain.

Father asked me last Sunday,
"Are you keeping that diary, Ned?"
And when I said "Yes," he looked surprised
"Well done, little son," he said.
Fourth comes a week from Tuesday,
And oh, I can't hardly wait,
For Spud's got a dollar, too, and so
I tell you we'll celebrate!

We're going to buy some pinwheels,
Those things that whiz round in rings—
Crackers, of course, like we always have,
And whole heaps of other things—
Big Roman candles that send up stars
All yellow and red and blue—
Oh, I just hope father'll want me to keep
A diary next year, too!

ALL NATURE CELEBRATES

—Puck.

Thoughts For the Fourth.

To have freedom is only to have that which is absolutely necessary to enable us to be what we ought to be, and to possess what we ought to possess.—Rahel.

Countries are well cultivated, not as they are fertile, but as they are free.—Montesquieu.

The cause of freedom is identified with the destinies of humanity and in whatever part of the world it gains ground, by and by it will be a common gain to all who desire it.—Kossuth.

Best Anti-Toxin For the Fourth.

The Health Department in its weekly bulletin urges that the anti-toxin treatment for Fourth of July tetanus victims be not neglected. Quoting an Eastern medical journal to the effect that not a single blank cartridge wound treated with anti-toxin injection has been known to develop lockjaw, the department insists that with such a valuable remedy available every effort should be made to use it in all cases of wounds of the dangerous class on the Fourth.

That is excellent advice and it is to be hoped that parents and doctors alike will heed it. But there is even better advice than this to be given. There is an even better anti-toxin against Fourth of July deaths than the doctors use. It consists in repeated applications of strict law enforcement, both before the Fourth and upon the Fourth. [redacted]

Toy pistols, all kinds of blank cartridges and dynamite crackers are the most active agents in the production of lockjaw. The sale of toy pistols to minors is forbidden. The less dangerous explosives are permitted only upon the Fourth, but not before it.

If the ordinances are strictly enforced we may pass through the celebration this year without the sacrifice of a single victim to the Fourth of July lockjaw. The next two weeks should be a period of steady application of the variety of anti-toxin which the Police Department makes its specialty.—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Chinese Must Stay Ou

The Concessions Demanded by Them Cannot be Gra by This Country.

By William J. Bryan.

IF every American could visit China the question of Chinese migration would soon be settled upon a permanent basis no one can become acquainted with the Chinese coolie wi recognizing the impossibility of opening the doors of our try to him without justice to our own laboring men, detrim tion to our social ideas, injury to China's reputation among and danger to our diplomatic relations with that country.

I made it a point to inquire among Chinese whom I met, in order to certain the real sentiment back of the boycott. I had heard of students subjected to harsh regulations at ports of entry, of travelers humiliated confinement in uncomfortable sheds, and of merchants treated rudely, supposed that these things had aroused the resentment. I found, how that the things complained of were more difficult to deal with and the cessions demanded impossible to grant. In order to understand the b one must know something of Chinese history. As China has never had sentative government the people have been compelled to bring their plaints before officials by petition; and, where the petition has been they have been accustomed to bring such pressure to bear as was within power, and the boycott has often been resorted to as a means of pelling action upon the part of officials. They, therefore, conceived the of a boycott against American goods for the double purpose of arging own government to favorable action and of calling the attention of the Am government to their complaint. Our officials are doing what they to convince the Chinese government of the injustice and folly of the bo and the Chinese officials with whom I conversed seemed anxious to coop with our minister and consuls. Immediate action upon the part of our gress, whether favorable or unfavorable to the Chinese, will remove the cuse for a boycott; and our government should not be influenced in its by any threats affecting trade, for the subject is too grave to be deter by commercial consideration.—Success Magazine.

Modern Industries Could Not Adopt Metric Syste

By H. H. Suplee.

IT must be remembered that when France and Germany the metric system the modern vast growth of machinery tool building industries, of structural material manufacture of metal trades generally had not come into being. Standa tion was as yet an unknown idea. There was practically ing to undo, except some simple habits of barter and trade fore the new standards were taken into use.

The situation in the United States and Great Britain today is different. Industries such as the world has never before seen have been up, and have sent their products all over the world. And every steel rolled, every plate turned out and every wire drawn, every engine and and machine tool, every pipe and shaft and belt and nut is based up inch and the foot—units wholly incommensurable with the metric ones.

The screwthreads of England and America are standard all over world—and they are wholly inconvertible into any other metric exp which could be used as a guide or practically reproduced by a workma

If all these measurements must be changed into metric equivalen things themselves must be changed; to believe that we could go on them as they are now, and gauging them by the new system of measure is to cherish a mischievous delusion.—Engineering Magazine.

In Arabia the higher classes use sugar in tea and coffee in their houses, but in the coffee shops in the bazaar, where hundreds of people gather in the evening to talk and drink coffee, a cheaper grade of coffee is generally consumed, made of coffee husks principally, and in this drink sugar is seldom used.

Ole Janson, for whom the town of Olsburg, Kan., was named, has asked the district court of Pottawatomie County to change his name to Ole Johnson. His name when he came to America was Johnson, but when he took out his naturalization papers the clerk understood him to say Janson, and Janson has been his legal name, if not his actual name, ever since he became a citizen.

"Humble" is a word that has gone out of fashion during the lifetime of many of us. An Australian paper that is reproducing extracts from its files of fifty years ago prints this advertisement of 1856: "Young woman wants home in an humble family." Nobody sees an advertisement of that sort in the papers nowadays, except in the weekly journals of the Irish rural districts, where such announcements as "Wanted, an humble girl," still occasionally appear.

CAMPHOR GROWING SCARCE

World's Supply Is Steadily Decreasing Each Year.

According to an official of the Department of Commerce and Labor, the world's supply of camphor is steadily decreasing each year. The greater part comes from Japan and its colony, Formosa. Of late years the demand has begun to exceed the supply, and the question has arisen how the latter can be maintained.

One of the reasons why camphor is becoming scarcer and dearer is said to be that it is extensively used in the manufacture of celluloid. At present camphor is mainly produced from the so-called camphor tree, which attains a gigantic size in Japan, one specimen recently measured being 115 feet tall, and having a trunk over fourteen and a half feet in diameter.

The tree is common in China, but as yet the production of camphor in that country is very limited.

The camphor tree is a member of the laurel family, and is related in genus to the cinnamon tree. It is said that camphor can be produced from other species of trees, but this statement has never been verified. In Borneo a most aromatic camphor is obtained from the natural deposits of gum on the trunks of a species of tree indigenous to that island and Sumatra. Borneo camphor is rare and very costly.

A Country Editor's Outlook.

William Allen White, the Kansas editor, in describing life in a small town in the Middle West, says: "When a man has published a paper in a country community for many years he knows his town and its people, their strength and their weakness, their joys and their sorrows, their failings and their prosperity—or if he does not know these things he is on the road to failure, for this knowledge must be the spirit of his paper." The author has been editing and publishing a small daily newspaper in Emporia, Kan., since 1890 with considerable success, and it must be inferred that he knows the sort of people about whom he writes.

Boldest of Editors.

The editor of the Grindstone (S. D.) Bee evidently has not an ax to grind. He writes thus: "Miss Fowler, the accomplished cook at the Fowler Inn, had quite an accident last week. She baked a batch of biscuits which weighed less than a pound each."

Making Clothespins.

Few persons ever wonder where clothespins come from; few ever heard of Bryant's Pond, Me., and yet a man there has been quietly turning trees into clothespins for years and supplying the world with them, amassing in the process as comfortable a fortune as many a man makes in a more pretentious business in some money centers. His name is Lewis Mann, and he began with a capital of $400, with which he purchased an old disused mill and began the manufacture of clothespins. Today he is the largest individual maker of this very necessary article in the world.

How large the clothespin industry really is may be gathered from the fact that no less than 1,250,000 five-gross boxes are manufactured every year in the United States alone. Much of the best machinery now used by Mr. Mann is the result of his own inventive genius and that of his son Edwin. Mr. Mann's machines turn out 30,000,000 pail handles, while of high grade clothespins they produce more than 50,000 five-gross boxes, or 36,000,000 a year.

The Deadliest Snake.

The deadliest of snakes is said to be the mamba, an African cobra. It flies at everybody and everything; it goes out of its way to quarrel; it will even come down from a tree to solicit an interview. Over in India there is the great king cobra, or Hamadryad, a size larger, quite as fierce. It has been known to chase a man on horseback. He had to ride for his life. But his poison is a degree less virulent. The difference, however, may be considered negligible and ceases to interest the patient after a few minutes. Among the Australian cobras the pit vipers, of America, and the great West African vipers there are species with evil reputations, and the most alarming feature is that the aggressive snakes are all desperately poisonous.

Ice Cream from Oil.

To make vanilla ice cream by artificial means, the alchemist took some triple refined cottonseed oil and placed it in a centrifugal machine which moved at a velocity of 3,000 revolutions a minute. A beautiful emulsion was thereby produced, which was then frozen, chemically, of course. The flavor was obtained by the addition of vanillin, glucin and introbenzol. They say that ice cream composed as above is sold in many southern states, where cottonseed oil is more plentiful, and consequently cheaper than milk or cream. It is far from harmful, tastes good and does not melt as quickly as the genuine ice.

Chinese Bibles Cheap.

China's cheapest book is the New Testament in Chinese, published by the British and Foreign Bible Society. It costs fourpence to print and is sold at twopence. Copies in all the great Indian languages cost one penny (two cents) to print, and they are sold in India at one farthing (half a cent). The Bible is now the cheapest book in the world.

Concrete Is Lasting.

NEWSPAPERS IN JAPAN.

Several Dailies Published in Tokio and Osaka Have Big Circulations.

In the matter of circulation the newspapers of Japan cannot compare with those of London, says the London Express. There are, however, quite a number of daily journals published in Tokio and Osaka which boast of daily issues running well into six figures. The journal with the best circulation in Japan is the Osaka Mainichi, which sells 220,000 copies a day. The Asahi, published in the same town, has nearly as large a circulation.

In Tokio the newspaper most widely read is the Hochi Shimbun (the Bulletin News), which sells 200,000 copies daily. The Hochi is the great opposition journal, the organ of Count Okuma, ex-Premier, and the most influential journal of the Elder Statesmen. Then there is the Jiji Shimpo, the Nichi Nichi, the Kokumin and the Ashi of Tokio, all with circulations of between 50,000 and 180,000. The Kokumin is the Government organ, and when peace was signed the angry inhabitants of Tokio, enraged at its attitude and acquiescence with the peace treaty, attacked the offices and nearly caused a serious outbreak.

The Jiji Shimpo is owned and edited by the son-in-law of Viscount Hayashi, the Japanese Minister in London, while the Nichi Nichi is now the property of Mr. Kato, formerly Minister to England, and its editor is a Christian, Mr. Yokoi, who is a member of the Japanese Parliament.

The daily newspapers of Japan are much cheaper than those of London, even in these days of the ascendency of the half-penny press. Most subscribers pay for their favorite newspaper monthly, and their subscriptions work out in some cases at a fraction of a farthing a day, and in none at more than a half-penny a day.

For small advertisements the highest rate is one shilling per line, while for large advertisements I have never heard of more than $125 a page being paid for one insertion.

The serial story has been a feature of the Japanese press for thirty years past.

The production of a newspaper, complicated though it is in England, is much more so in Japan. They cannot use the linotype machines for setting up articles. This must be done by hand, and as in the Japanese language there are some 50,000 different characters, of which 28,000 are in common daily use, it will be understood that the compositor has to be a man of no small skill and ability.

The type room of a Japanese newspaper is a large compartment, with shelves all around the four walls, and in setting copy the compositor has to run round and round the room picking out from the thousand of little receptacles the type he requires. It is at one and the same time both mental and physical exercise of a pretty strenuous description.

The staff of the Hochi consists of sixty-three editors, sub-editors and reporters. The staff is divided into some seven or eight departments, namely, army, navy, political, financial, economical, city, artistic and translating.

Walking and Running Best Exercise.

Writing of exercise for children in the Delineator, Dr. Grace Peckham Murray says: "When children are old enough there is no better exercise than brisk walking. To be of benefit it should be brick enough to bring the blood to the surface, and to expand the lungs. Running exercises the endurance. Systematic running should enter more largely into the exercise for children. Running strengthens the heart, increases the breathing capacity, and develops the muscles of the whole body. Like all violent exercise in which children indulge, it should be taken under the supervision of a teacher to avoid overdoing.

"An ideal way for children to pass the summer is in camps under the judicious care of a teacher and guide who can enter into the games and feelings of the boys and girls. I believe in the same education in these matters for girls as for boys. They can then become acquainted with woodcraft, botany and geology and increase their health by tramps and explorations. The primitive, which exists in all, whether of younger or older growth, has a chance to show itself, and it improves the health, for it does not do for children any more than for adults to be too civilized."

Clever Retort.

An Irishman once met an Englishman who had an artificial leg. Being of a sympathetic nature, Pat inquired the cause of the loss of the limb; whereupon the Englishman said: "A short time ago I discovered that there was some Irish blood in my body and that it had settled in this leg, so I had it cut off." "'Tis a pity it didn't settle in your head," came the quick retort.

Ibsen's Inspirations.

Henrik Ibsen, the great Norwegian dramatist, was said to be unable to write unless he had on the table in front of him a tray containing a number of grotesque figures—a wooden bear, a tiny image of Mephistopheles, two or three cats (one playing the fiddle), and some rabbits.—London Mail.

It takes fifty of the Chinese edible birds' nests to weigh a pound, and the price per pound is about $40.

A BUDDING MUSIC CRITIC.

Western Editor Ventures Into Strange Fields.

The editor of a paper published in Little Rock was once in receipt of a complimentary copy of a musical composition by an Arkansas friend, says the Success Magazine.

Feeling that he was called upon to make some acknowledgment of the courtesy, the editor did so in this wise:

"As the editor of this paper doesn't know a demisemiquaver from a diapason, or a bass clef from a 'high C,' he will not, therefore, be expected to give an extended notice of this production. We can say, however that the type used in printing the composition is clear and plain, and that the paper appears to be of the best quality of rag. The design on the front page is most artistic, and the words are as tender as a real spring chicken and as poetic as the song of the meadow lark on a May morning. The melody is sound and all right, with no windgalls or collar marks. The harmony, too, appears to be strictly O. K., with no patent defects or noticeable blemishes. The tonality is clear and resonant, and rests on harmonic relations and melodic elements. This is about all the praise in connection with said composition we are able to evolve from our cabbage-flavored temperament."

Keep your eyes open to your mercies. The man who forgets to be thankful has fall asleep in life.—Robert L. Stevenson.

The old days never come again, because they would be getting in the way of the new, better days, whose turn it is.—George Macdonald.

As a ray of light in a pure drop of water is divided into seven colors, so it is with love in a pure heart: it divides into more than sevenfold virtue; yea, rather all virtue springs from it alone.—Tholuck.

"Selfish irritability is a short cut to misery, but patience that lives not for self, but for the good of our fellow-men through supernatural charity, confers strength and fortitude, and leads, even here on earth, to the possession of even peace and happiness."

The higher nature in man rises above the power of this law of time. It does not grow old, does not decay, cannot die. We all have within us the principle of immortal youth. Thought is always young. Knowledge never grows old. Joy in the beauty of nature, in the work of daily duty, in the divine love, gives to age the charm of childhood.—James Freeman Clarke.

Look around the world to-day and see what some of the men who have long passed the "dead line" are doing, and what they have accomplished. Look at the young old military leaders in little Japan who conquered great Russia. Oyama was twenty years past this fatal line when he won his great victories, and all of his corps commanders were past fifty. The Marquis Ito, the Grand Old Man of Japan, her greatest statesman, and the one who has done more than any other to make Japan what it is to-day, is still active in the service of his country.—O. S. Marden.

Don't Feed the Dog.

Much meat is to the sporting dog's nose what strong drink is to the detective's eye—poison. The beginner in the field often does not realise this and nightly attributes his indifferent luck of the day to the scarcity of birds, when generous portions of beef or pot liquor are to blame.

Of course, when there is hard work to be done, a dog must be well nourished and its vitality kept up by giving it light morsels at frequent intervals, just as the man with the gun has to be sustained by good, wholesome food.

Two biscuits and water in the morning, a half biscuit several times a day and at night a hearty meal of well-cooked vegetables or oatmeal porridge form the best fare for a dog in the field. Remember, however, to give the portions of biscuits when water is near by, since dry crumbs create a thirst that frequently handicaps a dog as much as hunger.—Country Life in America.

The Corporal's Argument.

"Such reasoning," said General F. D. Grant in a military argument, "reminds me of the reasoning of old Corporal Sandhurst.

"Corporal Sandhurst was one day drilling a batch of raw recruits.

"'Why is it?' he said to a bright-looking chap, 'that the blade of your sabre is curved instead of straight?'

"'The blade is curved,' the recruit answered, 'in order to give more force to the blow.'

"'Nonsense,' said the corporal. 'The blade is curved so as to fit the scabbard. If it was straight how would you get it into the curved scabbard, you idiot?'"—Chicago Chronicle.

Mr. H. J. Henneman, Oakland, Neb., writes:

"I waited before writing to you about my sickness, catarrh of the stomach, which I had over a year ago.

"There were people who told me it would not stay cured, but I am sure that I am cured, for I do not feel any more ill effects, have a good appetite and am getting fat.

"So I am, and will say to all, I am cured for good.

Tremendous Itching Over Whole Body —Scratched Until Bled—Wonderful Cure by Cuticura.

"Last year I suffered with a tremendous itching on my back, which grew worse and worse until it spread over the whole body, and only my face and hands were free. For four months or so I suffered torment, and I had to scratch, scratch, scratch until I bled. At night when I went to bed things got worse, and I had at times to get up and scratch my body all over until I was as sore as could be, and until I suffered excruciating pain. They told me that I was suffering from eczema. Then I made up my mind that I would use the Cuticura Remedies. I used them according to instructions, and very soon indeed I was greatly relieved. I continued until well, and now I am ready to recommend the Cuticura Remedies to any one. Mrs. Mary Metzger, Sweetwater, Okla., June 28, 1905."

GOOD ADVICE.

Clanton, June 23d, 1906

Editor Banner—Several have spotted me, and asked me to write another letter along the same line my first one was. I will now do so, hoping to draw some one out, who can say something worth reading. Will not ask Mr. Gulledge to say anything because he is a candidate, and then he can be relied on to say the right thing at the right time. Mr. Gulledge it is not necessary at all for you to canvass any in Beat 6 for the nomination. It is a fact every Democrat is for you, and not only that, in November you will wake old Beat 6 up as never before, and walk off with the biggest majority ever known. As to your views on the issue for Governor, we believe you are with Mr. Comer in the fight, and will so believe until you dispute it.

Someone may say that fellow is back to Comer again. Never been away from him. Bro. Democrats, did you know that Mr. Comer is being fought by one of the most systematic machines ever used in Alabama? One way out in the county a well fixed Comer man will meet one for Cunningham and ask him how he is for Governor. His reply will be, "Oh! I don't care much, in fact I am cold in politics this year, but personally I am for Cunningham. This same fellow will not go far till he meets a man that always votes, but as yet has not given the subject much thought—is undecided, and this Cunningham man suddenly, as if by magic, becomes red hot and proceeds to sit on Comer for all he is worth, and at the same time tell him what a grand record the Dr. made as Governor. He fails to tell why the Dr. did not call the Legislature, while Governor, to do what he now says he will do if elected. The facts in the case are Dr. Cunningham is on a platform that will fall to pieces the 27th of Aug. They treated Mr. Comer dirty in Selma, another case where the machine did it work.

To whip the Republican and Populists in this election we will have to draw votes from them. The best way to whip a fellow is to give him a weapon he can't fight you with.

The Democratic party has the man and the issue to win this election. Will we do it, or will we let a few rule or ruin?

Mr. candidates, where are you at? The voters have a right to know. Have you any colors? If so carry them. Success to the Banner. COUNTRY DEMOCRAT.

Vultures and a Dead Tiger.

The vulture is seen at its best when a dead tiger, brought into camp to be skinned, is exposed in the open. Overhead is a cloudless sky, and not a bird to be seen in that great void by the human eye. The tiger's body is thrown from the pad to the ground, and before the skin has been removed there above one and always nearing the earth are the vultures circling, poising like things of air, now a dozen of them, in a few minutes a score or two and then a hundred strong. Then, when the flayed carcass of the tiger is left by those who skinned it, the vultures descend. Down they come like feathered thunder out of the sky, and from east and west and north and south, the very embodiment of power while they whirled aloft and in their quick descent to earth, and now, as they waddle around that carrion beast, misshapen ghouls, whose only apparent strength is that of the ravening jaws which tear and gorge the tiger's flesh, until within the hour naught of that splendid brute remains but a clean picked skeleton.—Sir Edward Bradden's "Thirty Years of Shikar."

The Office Dignified.

A Greek named Epaminondas was condemned by his enemies to fill an office much beneath him, which consisted in cleaning the streets and clearing away refuse. He declared that he would make them see that not only does the task show what the man is, but also the man shows what the task is, and he raised the office to a great dignity, teaching that no honest work need degrade the worker, but an honest worker can dignify the work.

Thoughts go forth to purposes, purposes go forth in actions, actions form habits, habits decide character, and character fixes our destiny.—Tryon Edwards.

Life is a ceaseless struggle for success because success is supposed to secure happiness.

Ambition and ability make for success, but without health too, failure is more than probable.

If the digestion is poor, the nerves unsteady, the blood thin, the weight less than it should be, and ambition and energy at a low tide because of stomach trouble, failure is almost a certainty.

Whether you make much or little of life, whether you fail or succeed, your digestion largely decides it. So confident are Florence Drug Co. that Pepsikola Tablets will renew your energy, steady your nerves, drive away that tired feeling, give tone to the digestion, improve your appetite, bring up your weight to where it should be, put new color into your cheeks and new life into your stomach, that they continue to sell this grand dyspepsia remedy on the money-back plan.

Have confidence. The guarantee absolutely protects you. Florence Drug Co. will gladly pay back your quarter if at the end of the ten days' treatment you have not been cured or decidedly benefitted.

Lawley.

Dear Editor—It has been some time since I have written any and I think I will try it and see how I come out. We always have something to grumble at and I guess the most of people are grumbling about it being so hot. In the winter it is too cold, so it is never just right to suit everybody. That is a hard thing to do, and Mr. Editor, I guess you have found it out by this time. I have found out the best way to do is to go ahead and do what is right and if the people are not satisfied with it, let them be.

Well, I am still on the road for Uncle Sam and have good weather and bad roads; after awhile it will be bad weather and worse roads. Some think that a mail carrier has a good time and gets rich every year. That may be so, but I have not found any good time in it yet, and my patrons are as good to me as they can be and I try to treat them the same. I received from one of the boxes two paper bags of nice peaches, and from another box two lunches containing cakes, pies, and from another a shoe box full of plums, and a few June apples in another. All of this makes me like to carry the mail. I don't mean to say that I am getting tired of my job, it is a fine thing, but it is very hard on stock. I live three miles from the office and my route is 21 miles long, making it 27 miles to my horse. Sometimes I walk over and get the mail when I have not got much to carry out. If mail carriers didn't never get their carts and buggies broken and had their harness to mend, then buy new ones every year, they might make a living very well. We have a lot of funny things on the road, not saying anything about the sad ones.

R. L. C. NO. I.

A man who is in perfect health, so he can do an honest day's work when necessary, has much for which he should be thankful. Mr. L. C. Rodgers, of Branchton, Pa., writes that he was not only unable to work, but he couldn't stoop over to tie his his own shoes. Six bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure made a new man of him. He says, "Success to Foley's Kidney Cure." Upchurch Drug co.

MAKE MONEY.

Here is an interesting study: Make out a list of all the people you know, and estimate the amount of money each one earns in a year. Total it up. The amount will be surprisingly large. Now, of all those people, only the few who SAVE SOMETHING really MAKE anything at all. Simply earning money isn't making it; what slips through the earner's fingers is finally "made" by somebody else. Don't forget to count yourself in on the list, and if you are not "making" money, begin now to save with us. One dollar will open your bank account.

A Reply.

Editor Banner—Will you please allow me a small space in your valuable paper to reply to a letter written to me from Billingsley, and no name signed to it. He goes on and lays down a lot of rules whereby I should govern my preaching and how I should conduct the service. He goes on and warns me against some things that everybody that knows anything about my work in the ministry, knows I am not guilty of. I know I need all the instructions that I can get, but if I thought I was competent to instruct my brother, I would not be ashamed to sign my name to my instructions. He goes along with his catalogue of rules and instructions and winds up by saying a friend, and I pronounce him a fool instead of a friend.

Mullins Hill.

I will take my fan in one hand and pen in the other and ask for a space for a few words from Mullins Hill. I like to read the nice letters in the good Banner; I think it is a wonderful paper. Health of this community is good at present.

Misses Belle and Hattie Davenport of Mulberry were visitors here Sunday.

We had a good sermon on the first Sunday in July, Bro R. M. Honeycutt will preach for us, and will be with us every first Sunday. We are glad to hear that the people of Pleasant Grove are interested in the good work and hope they will continue to do so.

It is very nice to have a grand wedding sometimes; I think the wedding bells will ring on this hill some day.

Mrs. Ola Gibbons and Miss Ada Rasco are anticipating a grand time in the future.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Franklin visited Mr. Monroe Nix's family, Sunday.

Messrs. W. D. Nix and John Gibbons are expecting to get rich as they have ordered a saw mill and are going to work soon.

Mr. Jeff Glass' family visited Mr. T. J. Hubbard, Sunday.

It is always well to have a box of salve in the house. Sunburn, cuts, bruises, piles and boils yield to De Witt's Witch Hazel Salve. Should keep a box on hand at all times to provide for emergencies. S. S. Convention at Macedonia.

The District Sunday School Convention of Beats 3 and 6 met at Macedonia on the first Sunday in June. Owing to the fact that this district covers such a large territory it was found impracticable to have all the schools represented. Those represented were Shiloh, Pleasant Grove (Clanton), Pleasant Grove (Jemison), Mullins Hill, Macedonia and Mulberry. Though some who were on the program were absent, the convention was attended by a large number of enthusiastic Sunday school workers, and every subject for the day was ably discussed before a large and appreciative audience. We had the pleasure of having with us our county president, T. U. Crumpton, and our county secretary, Miss Gibson, both of whom gave us valuable assistance in the work of the day.

All left the convention with a greater desire to go forward with the great work of the Sunday school.

Sardis.

Here we come again after a long absence. Sabbath school at this place is flourishing; we are glad to see some of the young people taking such an interest in Sabbath school work.

Mr. Tom Milling made a nice talk on "Home department" here Sunday; I do think that is a grand thing to have in a community. We welcome him again.

Mrs. Lena Weaver and charming little daughters Maud and Nettie, were pleasant visitors at Mrs. Mattie White's, recently.

Miss Lula A. Walker visited her cousin, Miss Mattie Klinner, recently.

Messrs. Jude and Mark Hosey visited their brother, Mr. Hudson, Sunday.

CLANTON, ALA

Columbiana, Ala.—The democratic executive committee of Shelby county met in Calera Friday. There was a good attendance. Hon. R. E. Bowdon, chairman, being absent on account of illness of his wife, John F. Averyt, of Shelby, presided as chairman. Resolutions were adopted changing the time of holding the primary election from July 31 to August 27, the date of the state primary; calling the executive committee together to canvass the vote and declare the result of the primary, and calling a convention of the party in the county to meet on the same day the committee is called to meet for the purpose of selecting delegates to the state, congressional and senatorial conventions and selecting three executive committeemen in each beat in the county.

Reduction in Freight Rates.

Birmingham, Ala.—The pig iron manufacturers in the Birmingham district have requested the railroads handling the products of furnaces, rolling mills and other iron and steel industries to reduce freight rates to the Ohio river gateways 25 cents per ton, the same rates as were in effect prior to March 1. The request will be considered at a meeting of traffic men to be held in New York Monday. If the reduction in freight rates is granted all competition in the north and west can be met and overcome.

White Man Killed.

Birmingham, Ala.—James Caldwell, a white man, was shot and killed Friday night late at Juniper mines, near Connellsville, in the lower part of the county, at a beer drinking, which had the usual attractions, including a "crap game." On a warrant sworn out by Lum Hill, father-in-law of Caldwell, John Russell, also white, was arrested Saturday morning and brought to the county jail charged with the crime. A preliminary trial will be given Russell at Connellsville on July 10. The accused made no resistance when he was arrested and makes no statement as to the affray.

Boy Badly Burned.

Union Springs, Ala.—Little James Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Johnson, was thrown from a little wagon by a playmate into a pile of burning trash in the back yard of Dan Howard a few days since, and but for the fact that he wore a heavy jacket the burns might have proved fatal. He was badly burned, but is resting as easily as possible. His right arm and hand are burned badly.

To Use Alabama Marble.

Montgomery, Ala.—There is little doubt that Alabama marble will be used in remodeling the interior of the historic capitol of Alabama. This was made clear when the capitol building commission received bids for furnishing the material and heard a statement by John A. Bishop, general manager of the Alabama Marble Company, of Gannt's quarry, near Sylacauga.

Killed by Train.

Scottsboro, Ala.—Word was received here late Thursday afternoon of the death of John McMahan, son of Capt. H. C. McMahan, of Stevenson. He was killed by a freight train on the Southern railway near Tuscumbia while in the discharge of his duties as flagman. He was raised in Scottsboro, and was quite popular and had many friends.

To Hold Special Session.

Montgomery, Ala.—The November term of the state supreme court closed Saturday afternoon. A special term has been called beginning Monday and continuing from day to day to dispose of unfinished business.

Alabamians Start Home.

Washington, D. C.—Representative Underwood left for home Saturday night. The other house members of the Alabama delegation went Monday with the exception of Representative Taylor, who will remain here for several days. Senator Morgan goes to Selma in about a week.

Washington, D. C.—The public buildings and grounds bill, as it became law through the president's signature, carried the following Alabama appropriations: Montgomery, $12,000; Selma, $60,000; Bessemer, $60,000; Florence, $50,000; Tuscaloosa, $125,000; Dothan, $40,000; Gadsden, $60,000; Demopolis, $5,000, and Troy, $5,000.

Birmingham, Ala.—The coal production in Alabama for the first six months of the year went above 6,000,000 tons. This estimate is made by an official who is in a position to make an estimate of the output at the coal mines. The indications are that the operations in the coal fields during the last half of the year will be every bit as active as they were during the first and that the total output will be something over 12,000,000 tons.

Savannah, Ga.—Joseph K. Ust, a foreigner, who has been held at the barracks with his vocal organs impaired so that he could not talk, was given an electrical treatment and recovered his voice.

TO PROTECT GAME.

Huntsville, Ala.—Hon. John H. Wallace, Jr., president of the Alabama Game and Fish Protective Association, has issued the following address:

To Alabamians Who Wish to Protect Our Fish:

Since the organization of the Alabama Game and Fish Protective Association four months ago we have prosecuted an active campaign in benhalf of our proposed game and fish law in every section of the state. The people have manifested great interest in the movement, as is evidenced by hundreds of letters that we have received, in which most cordial co-operation is pledged.

The reckless and wanton slaughter, the trapping, netting and shipping of game, the dynamiting, seining and netting of fish, has all but exterminated game and fish in Alabama. Therefore only by the enactment and rigid enforcement of a stringent game and fish protective law can we save the few remaining species from extinction.

We propose to submit to the next legislature for enactment a bill with the following principal features:

First—A shorter open hunting season.

Second—Bag limit on game.

Third—The inauguration of a game and fish warden system as the only efficient means of enforcing the game and fish law.

Fourth—Hunters' license tax for adults hunting on lands other than their own and a non-resident hunters' license tax.

Fifth—Prevention of sale or shipping of game.

Sixth—Prevention of netting or trapping of game.

Seventh—Prevention of dynamiting, netting or seining of fish.

Heat in New York.

New York.—Four deaths on Manhattan Island from the heat was reported before noon Saturday. All the victims were infants.

The early morning gave promise of the hottest day of the year. The mercury mounted steadily, and there was intense suffering, particularly in the more crowded section of the city.

The mercury in the government thermometer crept up at the rate of three degrees an hour, and the officials there prophesied that the 90 mark would be passed during the afternoon. Reports of prostrations due to the extreme weather conditions began to reach the police early, and the hospital ambulances were kept busy responding to appeals for aid.

Among the sufferers were four persons whose minds had given way as a result of the intense heat. One of these attempted to end his life by shooting.

Seeking temporary relief from the appressive heat thousands of persons stormed the public bath houses. As early as 5 o'clock the crowds were so dense at several East Side bath houses that large details of police were called out to maintain order.

Thousands unable to sleep in their homes spent Friday night in the parks and on the sands at nearby shore resorts. The police estimate that nearly 8,000 spent the night out of doors at Coney Island alone.

Fines Justice of the Peace.

Birmingham, Ala.—W. D. Roebuck, a justice of the peace, from Avondale, was before Judge Jones in the federal court on a charge of refusing to obey an order of Referee in Bankruptcy Trimble to turn over some moneys. This case was the first of several to be tried, which involves the relation of release from bankruptcy to garnishments.

Roebuck had in his custody about $14 which had been paid him on account of a garnishment against an employe of the cotton mills. This party went into bankruptcy and obtained a discharge, whereupon the referee issued an order on Roebuck to pay over the funds in his possession. This he failed to do, it is alleged, and a case was made against him.

The case was hotly argued, and finally resulted in Judge Jones fining Roebuck $5 and ordering him to pay over the $14 with accrued interest and the costs of the proceedings.

Ground to Death.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—In an electrical dough mixer running with great velocity Allen Butner was ground to death here. He evidently tipped the bowl of the machine and was caught by revolving cylinders, but nobody saw the accident. The mixer contained flour enough to make 500 loaves of bread.

Millionaire's Son to Work House.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Harry Queal, son of J. H. Queal, the millionaire lumberman, has been sentenced to five days in the work house without the option of a fine for exceeding the speed ordinance in his automobile. His chauffeur was given a similar penalty.

Ripon, Wis.—Rev. Father Kruszka, of this city, has received word that Archbishop Weber, of Poland, has been transferred to America, where he will have supervision of the entire Polish Catholic church in America. Archbishop Weber is expected to arrive in this country about Christmas, and will reside in Chicago.

It is estimated that the total number of books in the world is 4,000,000,000.

ARE CONFIDENT.

The Czar is Urged by the Democrats to Dissolve Douma.

NO HOPE NOW FOR GOREMYKIN.

Parliament, However, is Confident of its Strength and is Biding its Time.

St. Petersburg.—The uppermost question now is how long the present deadlock between parliament and the government can continue. Premier Goremykin is no longer a factor in the situation, but some of his colleagues, headed by Minister of Agriculture Stichinisky, realizing that unless the government fights the cabinet must fall, are earnestly advising the emperor to take the bull by the horns and dissolve parliament.

They have submitted a memorandum to the emperor advising him to take this course on the ground that parliament has ceased to be a legislative body and is simply the center of revolutionary agitation and urging that immediate action is necessary.

They contended that the army as a whole can still be relied upon. Finance Minister Kokavsoff and Minister of Justice Chicheglovitoff, on the other hand, consider that an attempt to forcibly dissolve parliament would be fatal. The former, who is ambitious to become premier, seems to be championing the formation of a mixed, responsible ministry in the hope that the emperor will charge him to undertake its formation.

In the meantime it is announced that the cruise which the emperor and his family will take in Finnish waters will be made at the end of next week. The imperial yacht will be escorted by two warships.

The constitutional democrats in parliament appear confident that victory in their fight for a responsible ministry is not far off and with the prospects of acceding to power becoming brighter the breach between them and the radicals in parliament is getting broader. The latter, as shown during Friday's debate, seems to have thrown off the mask and desire to make parliament practically the central revolutionary committee for the country and have it assist in the convocation of a constituent assembly, while the constitutional democrats would be satisfied with a constitutional monarchy, which they believe to be assured if they get the reins in their hands.

The members of the deputation from the group of toil sent into the country districts to test the temper of the peasants have returned and report that the latter are even more anxious for the signal to rise. The delegates counseled patience until August.

The estate in Oral province of Prince Svaitopolk-Mirsky, the former minister of the interior, has been burned by peasants. Cossacks have been dispatched to the scene.

MM. Anniken and Alladin, the peasant leaders in parliament, have received a warning from "the League for the Salvation of Russia" that they have been sentenced to death.

A sergeant belonging to the Onego regiment, which has just returned from the Baltic regions, where it participated in the suppression of the revolutionary disorders, was killed in front of his company at Krasnoe-Salo camp. The company was presumed to fire a round of blank cartridges, but the sergeant fell dead with a bullet through his body. There is no doubt that he was killed by design.

Hot in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The hot wave continues in this city. The official government thermometer at 8 o'clock Saturday morning registered 84 degrees, 6 degrees higher than that recorded at the same hour the day before.

Duel in Crowded Street.

New York.—Four Italian tradesmen of the Italian colony of Brooklyn who had been cutting prices on their wares assembled at the corner of Vanbrunt and Union streets, Brooklyn, to talk over market conditions. In a short time a four-handed pistol conflict was in progress, in which one of the men was probably fatally wounded. The other three were more or less seriously injured, and a bystander, who had no part in the fight, received a bullet in the leg.

The street was crowded at the time and a panic ensued when the fight started. Detachments of police were hurriedly sent from two police stations to arrest the combatants and restore order.

Havre.—The French liner La Savoie, from New York, which passed the Scilly Island Friday with the "not under control" signal flying, arrived here Saturday, ten days late, with a broken screw.

The Welsh National Eisteddfod is the biggest open-air concert in the world. At least 20,000 people attend it every year.

TO CONTROL FARMS.

Capitalists Say They Will Be Able to Give Better Prices to Producer and Also Aid Consumer.

New York.—The Herald says:

Backed by unlimited capital, and supported by many of the most prominent financiers of the country, another trust, known as the American Farm Products Company, established for the purpose of taking absolute control of all dairy products, chickens and eggs, has been planted on American soil.

It is asserted by those who control the American Farm Products that it will bring about an increased and uniform price to the producer, a diminished price to the consumer, giving him a superior and purer grade of dairy products, and vastly improving present methods of distribution.

The commission merchants' profit will be eliminated, and the great corporation will take the responsibility of delivering butter and milk from the hands of the farmer to the hands of the consumer.

Behind the great enterprise are a score of the wealthiest men in America, who already have put in about $20,000,000 and are prepared to "chip in additional millions," as they are required. Among the eastern capitalists interested in the trust are:

Levi P. Morton, Thomas F. Ryan, Harry Payne Whitney, Anthony Brady, E. J. Barwin, Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and several other large banking houses and individual capitalists. The offices of the company are at No. 52 Broadway. At a meeting of the board of directors held June 25 the following officers were elected: President, J. R. Morse; first vice-president, Henry D. Cook; second vice-president, H. L. Wiley; treasurer, Grant Hugh Brown; secretary, Eugene Delmar.

At the first annual meeting of the stockholders held in New York a statement was issued showing that the company has a capital stock of $15,000,000 of common stock, $2,000,000 of preferred stock and $2,000,000 debenture bonds.

Minnesota Protests.

San Francisco, Cal.—Mayor Schmitz has received a telegram from Governor Johnson, of Minnesota, protesting against the sale of flour donated by his state for the fire sufferers here. The mayor as yet has taken no action on Governor Johnson's protest. It is claimed by General Greely that the donations of flour received are in excess of all possible needs and it was deemed the best plan to dispose of it rather than pay storage on thousands of barrels, especially as storage facilities are limited. Seven hundred and fifty thousand pounds were reserved, which it is estimated will be sufficient for the needs of the sufferers for six months. On the other hand, it is also claimed that many people desire the flour distributed as was intended by the donors and that applications for it have been granted.

The relief committee declares that the proceeds from the sale of flour, which amount to over a quarter of a million dollars, will be used for more pressing needs of relief.

Street Duel.

Raleigh, N. C.—A special from Columbia, S. C., says: W. O. Tatum, dispensary commissioner, has just received information from Orangeburg that J. T. Parks, auditing clerk of the state dispensary, and R. H. Cover, business manager of the Orangeburg Patriot, were mortally wounded there in a street duel. Both men were shot through the body.

Parks formerly owned the Patriot and sold it to Covar. The shooting affair is the result of trouble over the settlement. Parks is secretary of the democratic executive committee and is a native of Edgefield county.

Gets Another Reprieve.

Jefferson City, Mo.—F. Seymour (Lord) Barrington's case is to be heard by the United States supreme court. Chief Justice Brace has signed a writ of error, and an appeal will at once be made to the supreme court of the United States. This stops all proceedings and Barrington will not hang July 26.

New York.—Some anxiety is felt for the safety of the French steamship Amerika, of the Fabrie line, which sailed from Marseilles on June 3, touched at St. Michaels for coal and sailed thence June 11. The Amerika should have arrived here June 23. Her agents say they are not greatly alarmed, and believe that some part of her machinery has given out. The Amerika has four cabin and 110 steerage passengers and a crew of about forty. She is loaded with macaroni, olive oil, dried fish and skins.

The Amerika was formerly the steamship Britannia, built at Liverpool in 1881. She is an iron ship of 2,621 tons gross and 1,569 tons net, 238 feet long, 40 feet 4 inches beam and 23 feet 2 inches depth, brigantine rigged.

Chicago, Ill.—Two persons were killed and several injured at Aurora, Ill., when a tent of the Ringling Brothers' circus was blown down during a severe wind and thunder storm. A panic followed, in which scores narrowly escaped being trampled to death.

Chicago's population now exceeds that of Vienna. The figures are Chicago, 1,700,000; Vienna, 1,675,000.

LAST HOURS.

Closing Scenes of Congress. In the House Members Make Merry.

AN ERROR CAUSES EXCITEMENT.

It Was Merely a Matter of $3,000,000, and the Oversight Is Soon Remedied by Joint Resolution.

Washington, D. C.—Promptly at 10 o'clock Saturday night Vice-President Fairbanks in the senate and Speaker Cannon in the house declared the final adjournment of the first session of the Fifty-ninth congress.

Washington, D. C.—For the first time in the history of the government congress adjourned on the day which closed the fiscal year. Other sessions had adjourned before and some after June 30, but the Fifty-ninth congress ended its first session on the day when the government strikes its balances and closes its books.

There were some interesting features to mark the end, which finally came when there was less than a quorum in either house, and many senators and representatives, relying on the belief that the adjournment would come early in the day, made their arrangements to leave in the afternoon and they did not remain for the closing scenes.

An error in the enrollment of the sundry civil appropriation bill caused quite a flurry about the capitol. It was found by Secretary Root in looking over the bill after it had been signed by the president that it contained an appropriation of $3,000,000 for a site for a public building in Washington, a provision which had been eliminated from two different bills. After some perplexity the error was corrected by a joint resolution.

President Roosevelt came to the capitol about 1 o'clock in anticipation of an early adjournment, and when he found that there would be a delay in order to secure the enrollment of the bills which had been passed he took lunch in the capitol, and in the afternoon visited the congressional library.

Speaker Cannon rigidly carried out his intention of keeping back the adjournment resolution until the bills were all pased and signed, and the hour for the end was not known until a short time before the gavel fell with the announcement by Vice-President Fairbanks in the senate and the speaker in the house that the first session of the Fifty-ninth congress stood adjourned without day.

Both the senate and house met early, but a long recess was necessary in the afternoon to enable the enrolling clerks to catch up with the bills that had been passed.

The closing scenes in the senate were formal and without incident. In the house there were the usual hilarious performances, consisting of amusing speeches and songs, which occupied the time during the long waits, and members made the best of the hottest day of the season with merriment.

No business of importance aside from completing the pending legislation was transacted in either house during the day.

The work accomplished by the congress that terminated Saturday is told by Speaker Cannon to the Associated Press. He said:

"In my judgment the work done and the legislation enacted in the session just closed exceeds in importance for the best interests of all the people of the republic of any session in thirty years of public life.

"I do not contemplate a review of all legislation. It is sufficient that the legislation covering the appropriations and the authorizing of public expenditures has been most carefully considered and wisely enacted.

"The legislation commonly referred to as the rate legislation, the food bill, the inspection feature of the agricultural bill, are measures that affect the interests of all the people, and while nothing perfect can be done, I am satisfied the operation of these laws will demonstrate their wisdom.

"And, I believe if nothing else had been accomplished than the enactment of these three measures, they alone would be sufficient to make the first session of the Fifty-ninth congress a memorable one in the history of the republic."

Livingston, Tex.—Jack Wilkerson, a white man convicted of having murdered his wife, was hanged here Friday.

St. Petersburg.—Emperor Nicholas, according to reliable information which has reached the Associated Press, summoned the Preobrajensky regiment before the imperial palace at Peterhof and in a sarcastic address expresed his regret at the evidence of their disloyalty in declaring sympathy with the radical program of parliament. The emperor concluded by saying that he would never wear the uniform of the regiment.

Forty-six Years With Broken

New York.—George Knox broke his neck and fractured his skull forty years ago. Saturday it was announced he died at his home here in his year.

A heavy cornice fell on Knox one day in the summer of [illegible] while he was passing a building in course of erection at Ninth avenue and Twenty-sixth street. His neck was broken, his skull was fractured. Doctors declared he could not live more than twenty-four hours. They were astounded when they found a week later that Knox was not only living, but gaining strength. None of them could explain how it was possible for him to live with a broken neck, and they were even more surprised to find that no part of his body was paralyzed. After being treated at St. Luke's Hospital for two years Mr. Knox was able to return to his business, although one vertebra of his neck had not grown together. While in S[illegible] he met with an accident which caused the forming of a cataract in his eye. On account of his neck the physicians did not dare to operate, and he lost his sight in that city. Mr. Knox [illegible] 1885, when he retired, was a wholesale wrapping paper business.

Kansas City Closed.

Kansas City.—Everywhere in Kansas City, Kan., was closed Sunday and at the club house of the Eagles no liquor was sold.

Assistant Attorney-General Trickett's threat to destroy the fixtures used as joints had proven effective. During the night the bar fixtures and stocks of liquors were removed in many places to the Missouri side.

A dozen saloons in the suburbs of Armourdale, Argentine and Rosedale still remained open, but these will eventually be closed. These were operated by a Missouri brewing company, now in the hands of a receiver, and Attorney-General Trickett wished to feel his ground before proceeding against them. The fixtures from one saloon owned by this company had been destroyed by the sheriff, however, notwithstanding threats of the owner to secure a restraining order from the federal court.

Would Oust Company.

St. Louis, Mo.—Circuit Attorney ger, acting for the state of Missouri, has instituted quo warranto proceedings in the circuit court against the Cella Commission Company, of St. Louis, to oust that company and its franchises and privileges from the state of Missouri; and asking that its privileges be declared forfeited and that its property be forfeited to the state. The petition alleges that ever since its organization the Cella Commission Company has violated the laws of this state and has perverted and misused its corporate authority, franchises and privileges, and has unlawfully assumed and usurped franchises and privileges not granted to it by the laws of the state of Missouri. The company's officers are named in Gould's business directory as F. Miner, president and treasurer; C. Tiller, vice-president, and P. A. phens, secretary.

Killed District Attorney.

Philadelphia, a.—"I would not make that trip over again for $1,000," said J. W. Sholley, district attorney of Bucks county, as he emerged from one of the cars of the scenic railway, "Over the mountains," at Willow Grove Park. He took a few steps forward and said he felt faint and dizzy and fell in the arms of friends.

A physician was quickly summoned, but before he arrived Mr. Sholley was dead. The doctor said his heart had been affected. Mr. Sholley occupied a prominent position at the bar of the state and was widely known. He was unmarried.

Verdict Set Aside.

Montgomery, Ala.—Judge A. Sayre, of the city court of Montgomery, has made an order setting aside the verdict of a jury in that court on June 16, whereby Campbell Jones, former superintendent of streets of Montgomery, was awarded a judgment of $10,000 damages against the Advertiser Company in an action for libel.

Mr. Jones sued the Advertiser Company because of an interview with G. Brown, a contractor, published in the Advertiser during March, in which statements were made reflecting on the official character of Mr. Jones. Subsequently Mr. Jones was exonerated and the Advertiser published the details of his exoneration.

A week ago counsel for the Advertiser filed a motion with Judge Sayre for a new trial. Judge Sayre granted the motion and set aside the verdict.

THE PREACHER.

"Lay up in heaven," the preacher cried,
"Your treasures 'gainst your coming to abide."
But I have nothing here to lay away,
I live my life with poverty and pride.

But I may lay away all the bright things
That here I long for, but which all take wings—
The riches I have not, the house, the lands,
And I will lay away the bird that sings.

The cloud that shades the ever-burning sun,
The rest that I will take when toil is done,
The mountain peaks I've longed to see,
The rivers that adown the mountains run.

The restless ocean and the cool soft wind,—
These I could never leave at last behind.
I've always longed for them through life, but still Have only had them safe within my mind.

And I would lay away so tenderly
The friend I wished one day to see,—
The love that missed me all these lonely years,
Waiting amid my treasures there for me.

Edward Williard Watson, M. D.

William.

By Evelyn Orchard

William Briggs was a youth of no particular distinction. He had had the misfortune at a very early stage in his career to disappoint the dearest expectation of his parents. He was their second child. The firstborn, a little girl, had died at the sweetest of all ages—the toddling stage. And both had prayed for another child, with what earnestness can only be understood by those who have been similarly bereft. The baby girl had been an angel of beauty; the new baby, so eagerly expected, and for whom all his small sister's dainty belongings had been lovingly prepared, had no beauty. He was squat, featureless, vacuous in expression from his infancy up. His mother cried when she beheld him, and his father turned away. Such had been their attitude towards William from his youth up. Other children followed in quick succession. William remained the outsider of the family. No pet abbreviation of his name was bestowed upon him; he remained as he had begun, plain William. The atmosphere by which he was environed in his childhood and youth had its due effect upon William. He became self contained, a playless child, a companionless lad, who wandered solitary, pursuing his own thoughts. There was not much money spent on his education, it being decided that he had no conspicuous ability. At an early age he was hustled into his father's office, a commercial office, wherein he occupied the humblest stool. And there he remained quietly and apparently contented for two years. At the end of that time he went to his father, being more than seventeen years of age.

"I want to go abroad," he said, in that quiet, rather dull way of his. "I cannot remain here any longer. My life is without meaning. Give me fifty pounds and let me go."

Briggs senior stared. Never had William surprised him more.

"It is a cool request," he grunted. "I must talk it over with your mother."

He went home to Streatham Common an hour earlier than usual for the purpose, with the result that the following week William said goodbye to his family, and left London. They gave him a good plain outfit, paid his passage to New York, and gave him a bank draft for fifty pounds.

"I will pay it all back," he said quietly.

"You speak with great confidence," observed his mother drily. "What if you don't get on? Those who don't get on here don't generally shine abroad."

"I mean to get on," he said quietly, and pretending he had forgotten something he went upstairs again. But it was only to kiss his sister Lucy again. They were passionately attached to one another, and Lucy believed in him.

So William disappeared, and for four years his family heard nothing of him. Then a letter came containing a cheque for fifty pounds, which indicated that he had a banking account. The postmark was a small frontier town in Northern India. Quite evidently he had not remained in America. There was no address, however, so they could not write.

Four more years passed.

Colonel Frank Lemoine sat on the veranda of the dark bungalow smoking a very long cigar. A soda-water bottle and a glass stood suggestively on a bamboo table at his side, together with a pair of powerful field glasses, through which he had been [illegible], off and on for the last hour, the defile which led through the gorge, and so to the desert plains beyond. His brows were knit, his gray eyes were troubled, the [illegible] face had aged in twenty-

THE PREACHER.

"Lay up in heaven," the preacher cried,
"Your treasures 'gainst your coming to abide."
But I have nothing here to lay away,
I live my life with poverty and pride.

But I may lay away all the bright things
That here I long for, but which all take wings—
The riches I have not, the house, the lands,
And I will lay away the bird that sings.

The cloud that shades the ever-burning sun,
The rest that I will take when toil is done,
The mountain peaks I've longed to see,
The rivers that adown the mountains run.

The restless ocean and the cool soft wind,—
These I could never leave at last behind,
I've always longed for them through life, but still Have only had them safe within my mind.

And I would lay away so tenderly
The friend I wished one day to see,—
The love that missed me all these lonely years,
Waiting amid my treasures there for me.

Edward Williard Watson, M. D.

William.

By Evelyn Orchard.

William Briggs was a youth of no particular distinction. He had had the misfortune at a very early stage in his career to disappoint the dearest expectation of his parents. He was their second child. The firstborn, a little girl, had died at the sweetest of all ages—the toddling stage. And both had prayed for another child, with what earnestness can only be understood by those who have been similarly bereft. The baby girl had been an angel of beauty; the new baby, so eagerly expected, and for whom all his small sister's dainty belongings had been lovingly prepared, had no beauty. He was squat, featureless, vacuous in expression from his infancy up. His mother cried when she beheld him, and his father turned away. Such had been their attitude towards William from his youth up. Other children followed in quick succession. William remained the outsider of the family. No pet abbreviation of his name was bestowed upon him; he remained as he had begun, plain William. The atmosphere by which he was environed in his childhood and youth had its due effect upon William. He became self contained, a playless child, a companionless lad, who wandered solitary, pursuing his own thoughts. There was not much money spent on his education, it being decided that he had no conspicuous ability. At an early age he was hustled into his father's office, a commercial office, wherein he occupied the humblest stool. And there he remained quietly and apparently contented for two years. At the end of that time he went to his father, being more than seventeen years of age.

"I want to go abroad," he said, in that quiet, rather dull way of his. "I cannot remain here any longer. My life is without meaning. Give me fifty pounds and let me go."

Briggs senior stared. Never had William surprised him more.

"It is a cool request," he grunted. "I must talk it over with your mother."

He went home to Streatham Common an hour earlier than usual for the purpose, with the result that the following week William said goodbye to his family, and left London. They gave him a good plain outfit, paid his passage to New York, and gave him a bank draft for fifty pounds.

"I will pay it all back," he said quietly.

"You speak with great confidence," observed his mother drily. "What if you don't get on? Those who don't get on here don't generally saine abroad."

"I mean to get on," he said quietly, and pretending he had forgotten something he went upstairs again. But it was only to kiss his sister Lucy again. They were passionately attached to one another, and Lucy believed in him.

So William disappeared, and for four years his family heard nothing of him. Then a letter came containing a cheque for fifty pounds, which indicated that he had a banking account. The postmark was a small frontier town in Northern India. Quite evidently he had not remained in America. There was no address, however, so they could not write.

Four more years passed.

Colonel Frank Lemoine sat on the veranda of the dark bungalow smoking a very long cigar. A soda-water bottle and a glass stood suggestively on a bamboo table at his side, together with a pair of powerful field glasses, through which he had been examining, off and on for the last hour, the defile which led through the gorge, and so to the desert plains beyond. His brows were knit, his keen gray eyes were troubled, the handsome face had aged in twenty-four hours beyond the telling. The thing that had aged him does not happily occur in many lifetimes, nor more than once in one. Suddenly he leaped to his feet. A horseman was in view in the bridle path which cut the defile in two, a few moments more and he saw the white folds of the turban on the rider's head. In less than half an hour the spent steed was at the veranda steps, and Lemoine conversing with the rider thereof. It was a colloquy both brief and unsatisfactory. Lemoine, having dismissed him, passed within.

"Are you there, Una?"

"Yes, papa." She came to him as she spoke. A young girl, who bore herself well, as a soldier's daughter should, but whose womanly charm far surpassed her dignity.

"Ahmed is here and his report could not be worse."

She leaned against a chair, and for a moment her face became white as the soft muslin of her gown.

"What does he say?"

"Only what we have feared. They are cut off at Ragoote, and nothing can save them."

His face worked as he spoke these words. And small wonder. At the hill station of which he spoke were his wife, his younger daughter, a handful of friends; and they were at the mercy, if not now in the hands of a hostile tribe, who, in comparison with the slender garrison, were as the sands of the sea for multitude.

"And we are here!" she cried desperately. "But Ahmend sometimes lies. I don't trust him. If we had had a trusty messenger Dalton's company would have got to Ragcote in time.

"A trusty messenger!" he retorted curtly. "That is the curse of this cursed country. Outside of our own people, there are none."

She was silent a moment, and a faint flicker of color rose in her cheek.

"Papa, we have forgotten William Briggs."

Then did the Colonel laugh in sheer disdain.

"Did we forget him, what's the odds? How could a little civilian, good chap though he is, work a miracle?"

"He has been gone three weeks," she said.

"And dead two of them, I could swear," he retorted. "No, no, Una, there is nothing left but the mercy of God."

He went back to his chair and his solitary, desperate musing, which was interrupted once more by the apparition of another horseman in the defile. He stood up and raised his glasses to his eyes, and his face began to work. He did not wait the arrival, but took the compound in a series of long steps, and went swiftly forward. A haggard man on a foam-covered and weary horse drew rein close to him, and bent from the saddle, after he had saluted.

"All's well at Ragoote, sir."

The Colonel started.

"Briggs, you must have gone mad! The thing's impossible!"

"No, Sir Frank. I got to Del Pindi in time, and then rode on, because it was deserted, to Washmak. I caught up with Dalton in time, nine miles out, and he arrived at Ragoote five hours ahead of the enemy. I did not wait to hear the result, but I know by the outpost signs as I rode back that they had been beaten, and that probably the trouble is wholly over for the present."

The man spoke modestly, and his tired voice had a certain melodious sound. Also his face, though covered with the dust of the plains, seemed to shine.

The Colonel continued to stare. Relief and wonderment struggled for the mastery on his handsome face.

"Briggs, you're a hero; a hero, I tell you. I'm dumb. I don't know how it's been done. Would you mind telling me how as we go back? It's not ten minutes since I told my daughter you'd been dead a fortnight. She was trusting to you."

Briggs bent down under pretense of fastening a loose end of his puttees. They came to the bungalow at the moment; a servant took the horse, and the two men were alone together.

"I'm astonished, I tell you. When they hear in England it'll be the V. C. (Victoria Cross), Briggs, and Heaven knows what else. You take it very cooly. Personally, I owe you a debt which will never be repaid. You understand without my telling?"

"Yes, Sir Frank, I fully understand."

"You'll get recognition, don't fear. Chaps like you are only born once or twice in a while, and we generally know what to do with them. But you are so quiet with it all, just as Una says. You have a champion in her, Briggs. You and she seem to understand one another."

The Colonel's keen eyes on Briggs' face read his soul. It was a revelation to the old man, and for the moment a quenching of hope. For she was a very rare creature, concerning whom he had dreamed his dreams. But that unworthy moment passed, and he offered his hand.

"You have given me back all I prize in this world save her, and you have the right to speak. You will find her within."

Three weeks later the story of the peril and the salvation of Ragoote was told in the home papers, and read at many breakfast tables. In a certain middle-class morning-room at Streatham Common, in the columns of the Daily Telegraph, William Briggs, senior, now grown portly and bald, read the brief despatch which conferred distinction on his son.

"Mother, read that," he cried excitedly, and passed it over.

Some one leaned upon her shoulder and read with her the words with which all England was ringing.

It was Lucy. She burst into tears.—British Weekly.

MONEY MARKED WITH A PIN.

Detective Says This Is Better Method Than Marking With a Pen.

"How is money marked?" repeated a headquarters detective. "Well, it is not marked in the manner that the public thinks it is.

"The average person, no doubt, believes that money is marked by private marks placed on the bills with pen and ink; perhaps some employers thus mark the bills they place in the cash drawer which is being robbed by a dishonest clerk. Of course, 'marked money' of this kind is good evidence in court on the trial of a man upon which it has been found. But a check mark in ink, unless very expertly put on, might, with the aid of a good lawyer for the accused, be shown to have been perhaps accidental, and thus would the ever-sought, reasonable doubt of the accused's participation in the robbery be raised.

"There are several different ways of marking money by police experts to the end that they may establish its positive identity of having been in their hands before the thief extracted it. The way I personally employ, and which is perhaps the safest to secure certainty of conviction, is the 'pin prick method.'

Let us take the familiar silver certificate of the five-dollar denomination for an illustration; one that has been somewhat worn is better than a new note from the Treasury. In the centre is the well known vignette of the head of an Indian chief in dress regalia of feathers and trappings, presenting a full face view. We now take this pin and make two punctures right through the bill and directly through the pupils of the eyes—so. I hand you the bill, and, even though you saw me make the punctures, they are not visible at a casual and even critical glance.

"I now raise it to the light and you can see the two tiny holes made by the pin point as distinctly as windows in a building. I then apply the pin point very neatly at the twist in the neck of the large figure 5 at the two upper extreme ends of the note. You will observe that these diminutive twists do not appear in the necks of the two figures of 5 which are in both ends at the bottom of the note. I then pierce the note at the extreme ends of the scrolls on either side of the word 'five,' which may be seen in the direct centre of the note at its lower edge.

"The marking of the note is now complete. It is exhibited to one or two persons in the secret for the purposes of preliminary examination and identification, and then placed in the money drawer, perhaps with several others of the same denomination, all exactly marked alike with the greatest care. The thief may be on the lookout for marked bills, usually ink marks, but he is a slick one who will get on to the invisible but surely present pin pricks. You see, this class of thieving does not admit of a crucial examination of the money before taking; it is usually done very quickly by palming the bills, placing them in some preliminary place of safety, to be later removed. Then we count on detection with the bills on the person before the thief has a chance to exchange or to spend them.

"And the pin pricks remain? Indeed they do. The money is afterward carefully placed in envelopes and is not promiscuously handled. When they are exhibited in court and their preliminary preparation explained under oath conviction is practically certain.—Washington Star.

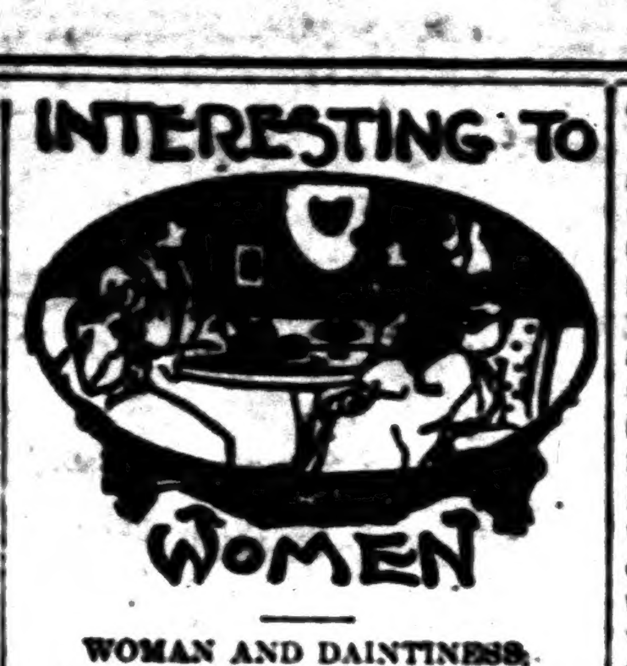
Jap Farmers Know no Window Glass

Some of the institutions on Japanese railways are peculiar to that country. One of these is a smear of paint across the windows of third-class carriages. This is made necessary because thousands of native travelers in Japan, accustomed to only paper walls for letting in light have no knowledge of glass. Its utter transparency leads them to believe that the window is simply a hole in the side of the car. With painful results many native passengers have stupidly attempted to stick their heads through the glass. For a long time ambulances from receiving hospitals had to meet nearly every train arriving in Japanese cities and hence the streak of paint is a warning to the Oriental farmer from the back country that there is something more than atmosphere in the window.

In the Pine Tree State.

Many of the titles of the smaller Maine towns and localities are worthy of special mention. Hog Valley is a picturesque retreat near Raymond. Dog Corner, Hencoop Cove, is a well known place in Winthrop, while out on the Coon road strange things have sometimes happened. A mile long is Pin Hole Hill, the steepest ever, and all the way up are little rests, "to hang the pins on," people say. Over Poland way is the hunger inspiring name of Beeftown, while highly suggestive of neglige was the old name of Saccarappa.—Kennebec Journal.

The Chinese pen is a brush made of soft hair, which is best adapted for painting the curiously formed letters of the Chinese alphabet.



INTERESTING TO WOMEN

WOMAN AND DAINTINESS.

A Society Butterfly in M. A. P. on "Woman and Daintiness" expounds the theory that personal daintiness is by no means a universal attribute, even among refined and wealthy women. Indeed, more than one leader of society has an uncared-for look and rough, untidy hair. And such as these are never neatly dressed despite the skill of their French maids and the perfect style and make of their Parisian costumes. Certainly, daintiness has much charm, and, as a well-known man-about town was heard to say: "A pretty woman should have the freshness of a flower." Of course, the mud and dirt of London are dead against us, just as the clear air and clean streets of Paris and New York are equally in favor of the Parisian and American. By the way, anthracite coal is freely burnt in New York, and I was reading the other day that most of it comes from Wales. So we export our smokeless fuel instead of keeping it for home consumption. It seems strange. But backward London is slow to adopt a new improvement. And the dry cleaner's bill makes a serious item in the expenses of an economical woman. These thoughts on the duty of daintiness were suggested by some lovely garments made for a well-known American. Several of the masterpieces were in pure white, as white or cream seems to find high favor with the best dressmakers. A dinner-gown in white crepe-de-chine had a coat of rich Venetian lace, made with long basques, and fastened in the front by an antique clasp of old paste and bright green enamel. All sorts of soft silks are to be much worn, including tussore, Liberty silk, and a new kind that has been christened radium silk. A gown of this fabric, which is extremely fine in texture, appeared in pure white, trimmed—indeed, almost covered—by beautiful Brussels lace. And it had a deep waistbelt—a marked style in the new models—and a folded fichu of the same lace that recalled the days of Marie Antoinette. By the way, these high waistbands sound like old friends, but the new ones are made with a difference. They are called corselet belts, and are drawn upwards in a point, the front being often finished by a set of bows graduated in size from the waist to the edge of the bodice. A white lace dress was lovely, made princess style, and trimmed with silver carnations and silver embroideries. And an attractive evening gown in cream silk, soft and thick, had a plain skirt, perfectly cut, a deep folded waistbelt, short, full sleeves, and around the bodice a thick wreath of small, almost orange-colored roses. This outfit had several gowns that showed clever mixtures of tints and textures. One charming frock, that looked like Ascot or a garden-party, was in pale blue silk, the bodice drawn into a deep, folded waistbelt, and the skirt, made with fine pleats, cleared the ground, and was the same length all the way round. This gown had a stole, which came from the shoulders almost to the edge of the skirt, in pale mauve silk, daintily embroidered with white flowers and foliage. A touch of mauve on the collar and glimpses of mauve ruching at the feet completed this perfect color scheme. And the frock had two distinct novelties—the stole, and the sleeves, which were not short, but down to the wrist, where they were closely buttoned. Somehow, these long sleeves gave a subtle note of distinction. Then another good gown appeared in pink crepe-de-chine, the skirt trimmed with insertions of white lace and many pleats and bouillonnes, the sleeves short, with deep lace frills, a corset belt of pink Liberty silk, and—note the mixture of laces—a bolero of Irish guipure.

OBJECTS IN LIFE.

A woman teacher enters her profession, says one of them, either to satisfy a yearning for employment or to support herself and those dependent on her. If she marries, both those objects are otherwise accomplished. Meantime, possession of her own means of living makes her more free in her decisions about marriage. Work that is perhaps too hard hastens her loss of alluring qualities of the mating season, and her opportunities for matrimony become less than they might be in the social world, since, as another teacher writes, men of marrying age do not frequent the reference libraries or hover around the student lamp. She, meantime, is consoled by the knowledge that the world is the better for her life and by the gifts that purpose and study bring, and usually, if she is naturally a teacher, happiness spends rather more than the average time with her. Occasionally she marries late, and then with a high prospect of being satisfied, since the man is likely to have character and appreciation of ideal things, and since also she, having dwelt upon the grand but lawful logic of natural law, has not cheap illusions on which to base her faith, but sound interest in others and a calm responsibility to the world.—Collier's Weekly.

GRIP FOR THE WOMAN AT HOME.

Lack of grip is serious enough in any walk of life; but those women whose profession in life is domesticity are the workers who stand most in need of that attribute, and it is of wider world-importance that these, of all workers, shall possess this essential quality. When a homemaker shows that she has lost heart-interest in her work, declares Good Housekeeping, lost brain interest (love-interest, perhaps), the cause of her depression may almost invariably be traced to a lack of belief in the high value of the work which engages her time and attention. A conviction of the world-importance of the work which she was born to fulfill, is the strong tower to which must continually resort those women whose business in life is being what is called domestic. To be domestic, in the highest and most honorable sense of the word, is surely to believe that a whole outside world of experience may be applied to the world within. Bringing to her education, heart, hand, and brain, the domestic woman will yet find that no iota of this equipment is lost or unused.

READING ALOUD AT HOME.

Young girls should be encouraged to read aloud frequently. There is no lovelier accomplishment. Not the declamatory style of reading which professional elocutionists acquire, and which, because it is intended for public use, has a degree of exaggeration in both its tones and its action, but the quiet, sweet, sympathetic and intelligent rendering of a book into the living speech is what we should seek for. A girl frequently spends a great deal of time over studies which will do her very little good in her future life, says Woman's Life. The art of reading well and acceptably would enable her to grace any circle of friends; it would perhaps cause her to be as eyes to the blind and as an angel of relief in the room of the invalid.

FLOWERS FOR EVENING WEAR.

Large flowers used singly or smaller ones thickly disposed are in vogue just now, as being newer than garlands or sprays. Roses are general favorites, chiefly in dark red, pale pink or deep cream or yellow, any of these three colors forming a most happy contrast with all black, pale blue, and white or cream gloves. Parma violets look also exceedingly well in conjunction with the above colors, and with pale pink with mauve or pale green. Just as in anything relating to dress, with a little thought and taste, it is easy to obtain the maximum effect out of flower decorations. For instance, flowers should in most cases be chosen preferably of a darker color than the dress they decorate; red flowers will look better on a white frock than white flowers on a red one.—London Standard.

EXPERIENCED MOTHERS KNOW

That very few are just to children.

That it is easier to be generous than just.

That children need judicious praise, but not extravagant flattery.

That many children become discouraged because their best efforts meet with no approval.

That nothing causes a child to cease his efforts to please sooner than to find that everything he does is taken as a matter of course.

That each child's disposition, as well as his constitution, should be studied conscientiously and carefully.

That a child has a right to some consideration of his tastes in the matter of dress and food as well as his amusements.

That we are too often arbitrary with our little people, and thoughtlessly trample on their rights; and they can read our motives more clearly than we think.

PATHOS OF THE MAN FAMINE.

It does indeed seem to me, that every hindrance is put to prevent girls and men getting to know each other at all well. At afternoon tea one does not meet unmarried men at all; at garden parties one exchanges a few commonplace remarks with some of the men introduced; and we feel obliged to pass on if one does not wish to draw attention to oneself. At dances the men are few and far between, and are hardly ever seen again.—Correspondent in Lady's Pictorial.

FASHION NOTES.

A white flannel with black stripe makes a very fetching tennis shirt. Make it with a pocket, yoke back, link cuffs, and wear a linen collar. The tie should be one of the soft ones.

Lawns with dainty colored figures make sweet dresses for small children, it being no longer deemed necessary to restrict their costume to all white; in fact, some of the newest and most select designs for tiny people show bits of exquisite color.

Rajah silk makes a handsome light weight bathing suit quite in contrast with the flannels that, as soon as wet, become too heavy for comfort, and interfere with the exercise of the limbs required in swimming. And, all women should swim; if you have not learned, determine to do so this summer.

A noticeable feature of some of the nicer artificial flowers is the beautiful shading, which is so real that one almost expects to smell the fragrance that comes from the real blossom.

The group of forward turning plaits at the middle, front and back of the circular skirt remains a favorite way of producing added width at the bottom.

WORTH QUOTING

However slight the concessions of self-government, they are irrevocable, and Russia is started on the road, however long and difficult, that leads to free and representative government, declares the New York Evening Post.

If giving $1,000,000 worth of transportation a year to politicians, delegates and legislators, says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, which is the estimate of a well informed railroad man as to the value of political free transportation, is not wholesale bribery in effect, we do not know what ought to be designated as bribery. The railroads are not philanthropists in politics.

The northern territory of Australia is little more developed. Its capital, Palmerston, contains more Chinese than whites, and the Mongolians generally are the masters and the whites the servants. The climate is very trying to whites. The aboriginal blacks are of a fierce and sanguinary disposition. Vast herds of buffaloes, the descendents of a few that were experimentally liberated a century ago, roam over the plains.

In the recent past it has become almost impossible for song birds even to nest within our limits, so subject had they become to prowling gunners of all ages and races, notes the Washington Post. It is hoped that this legislation will work a great change, and that there will soon resort here, just as the elk and deer, finding themselves unmolested, resort to the protected parks in the West, large numbers of all the varities of birds whose natural habitat is in this latitude. Our attitude toward the lower animals should be one of friendliness and protection, and once they realize that it is such we shall be rewarded by being able to establish much closer and more natural relations with them, yielding us a delightful companionship.

For the well being and stable balance of every mind it is normally necessary that every man should have some pursuit which shall be unconnected with his business, which he must pursue with absolute seriousness, declares the Queen. The hobby may be a game, it may be a collection of some sort (even stamps), it may be some artistic achievement, and whether a man scarcely attains mediocrity even in it matters not at all, provided he pursues it with fixed idea that nothing else in the world matters.

New Jersey has appropriated $350,000 for fighting the mosquito pest. The sum is to be spent in instalments of $50,000 per year for seven years. Modern study of the life history of the mosquito, says Forest and Stream has shown very clearly that if undertaken intelligently, schemes for the extirpation of the pest may be entirely successful; and the time has come when public moneys may reasonably be devoted to such work. The experience and success or failure of the New Jersey mosquito campaign will be watched with much interest.

Farming is now one of the best careers open to American young men, and the fact is becoming quite generally known. Yet some prejudices survive from less prosperous times. Now and then a young man, forced to drop out of a college or professional school because of impaired eyesight, voice or similar handicap, takes up farming with an air of hopelessness, as if all ambition were passed for him. Such an attitude would mean failure in anything; who tries for little receives less. Let him take up farming with vim and gladness. For the right kind of a man there is no nearer road to all that is most worth having. If you will study and work and hustle, young man, your brains and energy will put you where you belong. But otherwise, if you let yourself sag into the ranks, satisfied with the ways and doings of the average man. Brace up and resolve to become the best farmer in the State, and pave the way for wide influence and leadership.

Sometimes the man who bets and wins is more to be pitied than the man who loses, for there is a dangerous fascination in race track success. It seems so easy, observes the Washington Star, this taking away fifty or a hundred dollars by merely risking five or ten. Visions of great wealth float before the eyes of the victim of his own good fortune. The habit is quickly formed. On the other hand, the man who loses may possibly be cured by his supposed misfortune. If he is iwse and philosophical he regards his loss as a rich investment in the game for him unless he becomes a professional, and to be that he must make a close study of conditions, horses and men. He must devote himself to the work as assiduously as he is supposed to devote himself to his own business or that of his employer. And if he goes into the business he must do so with the full understanding that every dollar he takes in as a winning comes from some other man's pocket, and he has given nothing in return for it.

JUDGE S. M. ADAMS

Candidate for Commissioner of Agriculture and Industries.

The announcement of Hon S. M. Adams for the important office of Commissioner of Agriculture and Industries is an agreeable one for the Democrats of Chilton and we are satisfied it will be well received throughout the State. Few men are better known than Judge Adams, and his rugged honesty has made him many friends. Outspoken, and strong in his convictions, that which he thinks is right, he is going to advocae, and if possible carry into effect. As Commissioner of Agriculture he is the ideal man, a thorough, practical farmer, whose sympathies and ambitions are all with the tillers of the soil, and whose every effort would be made for their benefit. His political experiences enable him to know what is needed, and how to get it. Judge Adams will, we understand, make a complete canvass of the State, and as a forceful speaker will arouse enthusiasm in the Democratic party. That which is worth doing, is worth doing well, and one of the Judge's characteristics is thoroughness. He goes into this campaign heart and soul, and we hope and believe will come out at the head of the poll —Clanton Banner.

Resolved: That we appreciate the expressions of the press and citizens in different parts of the State, suggesting that Judge S. M. Adams become a candidate for Commissioner of Agriculture and Industries, and that should he decide to enter the race we pledge him our active support, and we heartily commend Judge Adams to the Democratic voters of the State as a capable, honest and courageous man and Democrat.

We, the undersigned business men and neighbors of Judge S. M. Adams, wish to endorse the above by the Editor of The Banner, and the Resolution adopted by the Democratic Executive Committee of Chilton County. Judge Adams is a man of high character; he filled the office of Judge of Probate to the entire satisfaction of our citizens, and as a Christian he has ever been found on the moral side of every question. He is a man of undaunted courage, and lives up to the rule, owe no men anything. If he is elected Commissioner of Agriculture and Industries, the State will have a man that has the ability, the courage, and the honesty to do his duty, and one that all of us will be proud of. He has the hearty endorsement and best wishes of the Democrats of his county.

Open the parasol, it is raining and the sun is shining too. We had a fine rain here the other day and the sun was shining so hot it would burn you up.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely considering the sickness we have had in our community.

We are sure glad to see Rev. T. J. Deason improving so well after a long illness.

Every body wants to go to another singing, but I don't think we will ever have any better singing and behavior than we had at Highland on the 24th, ult.

Some are singing for the Fourth. Everyone and his boy say they are going to have a fine time.

The R R and Y J ball players had one of the best ball games Saturday last that I have saw in some time. They were to play only 6 innings, but in the 6th the score stood 9 and 9, and they had to play the tie off. The game went 10 innings before it was won by the Y. J's. 13 to 11. Boys do all you can in the future to make yourself better, you let them beat you that time but if at first you don't succeed, try try again.

We are in need of a good rain.

We are sorry to say that Master Mord Owen has malarial fever, but hope he will soon get well.

Our Sunday school is very dull at present, but we hope it will revive soon, as the measles are all dead, everybody can come to Sunday school now that wants to. Everybody come next Sunday and bring some one with you and let us have a good school. I think Sunday school is fine for the old people as well as for the young So parents, come and bring your children. If our parents would go with us and take a part in the school, our school would be a success. Just think a moment how lonely we children are at Sunday school with no older ones to go ahead in the work and correct our mistakes. All come next Sunday at four o'clock and do not wait till five to start. I guess the literature will be there by Sunday.

Our literary school started Monday, 2d inst.

Letter to J. W. Taylor.

Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sir: You'd strike it rich if you could find a way to shave your customers in less time, for less cost, and make the shave last twice or three times as long.

You wouldn't shave the same person so many times or get so much of his money; but the whole town would be talking about you, and everybody would come to you for a shave.

Devoe lead-and-zinc is exactly that in paints. It takes fewer gallons and it wears longer. Costs less for the job, and you don't have to do it again for years and years—six years at least.

"Fewer gallons; wears longer." Takes fewer gallons to paint a house with Devoe lead-and-zinc than with mixed paints; and it wears longer than mixed paints or lead-and-oil. Yours truly,

F. W. DEVOE & Co.

AN INTERESTING STATEMENT

Florence Drug Co. Say They Have at Last Discovered a Positive Cure for Indigestion.

"For years," said a member of the above drug firm, "we have been waiting for some one to discover a remedy that really will cure dyspepsia.

"We recently learned that a new remedy, Pepsikola Tablets, had been placed on the market, and on investigation we found that at last there is a remedy that surely will cure.

"We laid in a big supply because we knew that as soon as the people began to know about this remarkable remedy there would be a big demand for it, and it is selling beyond our expectations."

It is not often a druggist sells a new remedy on a positive guarantee, but unless cured of nervousness, dizzy spells, sour stomach, coated tongue, palpitation and other symptoms of dyspepsia, Florence Drug co. will hand back your money cheerfully and without argument.

No one should hesitate on trying a 25 cent box of Pepsikola Tablets, as they will not cost you a penny should they fail to relieve and cure the very worst case of indigestion and dyspepsia.

Paint! Paint!

Now is the time to give your house a new coat of paint, and we have the paint that will wear well and please you.

Our Sun Proof has proven to be what we claim for it, a thoroughly good paint. The handsome school house in Clanton is painted with it; the new two-story hotel belonging to Mr. W. M. Wilson, will be an attractive building indeed when Mr. R. J. Lake finishes it with a few coats of Sun Proof Paint. The Capitol of Alabama is also painted with Sun Proof, just recently finished, and if this paint was not good it would not be used on the above buildings.

The old reliable Hammar Paint is too well known throughout the county to need further praise, has been sold in Clanton eight or ten years. So let us furnish you the paint you may need from time to time, will appreciate your trade.

FIRE.

Some time ago, I said in an article published in the Banner regarding the San Francisco fire, that I would give detailed estimates of the losses there by my companies as soon as final settlement could be made, and while as yet the adjustment is not entirely over, yet we are able to approximately estimate our losses. The Liverpool & London & Globe will lose $4,248,000, all of which will be paid from the home office in England, without using any of their United States assets. This will make over $100,000,000 paid to policy-holders in the United States by this company. My other three companies' losses, to wit: The London & Lancashire, the Phenix of Brooklyn and the Atlanta-Birmingham are in proportion; all has, and will be paid without shocking their assets in the least.

THE SILENT LIFE.

Happy the man who has the poet's heart,
E'en though he lack the poet's golden tongue!
Happy is he who having never sung
And hopeless e'er to sing though but small part
Of those fair visions that before him start
Still lives within a world forever young,
Still walks high fancies, noble thoughts among,
And feels the influence which the planets dart.

His life is fed from pure unfailing springs;
And silent flows, a stranger to unrest,
Like some deep stream that finds its voiceless way
Amid the timorous haunts of all wild things,
And their unconscious beauty day by day
Mirrors within the quiet of its breast.

His Free Ticket

By MRS. F. M. HOWARD.

THE bill-boards of the coming circus were unusually showy and aggressive. It was small wonder that Mr. Patten, a lifelong devotee of the circus, fell before the glaring temptation.

"I expect that is just the way Jacob looked in old times, when he went on a journey," he said, his eyes wandering off and lighting on a pictured train of camels.

"Much you care how Jacob looked!" sniffed his wife, resentfully.

"Pretty fine old gentleman, just the same, with family enough to last him when he wanted to take them anywhere," observed Mr. Patten, with mournful humor.

He had patronized every traveling show which had come to town in the past fifteen years, under the ready plea that the children wanted to go.

"Children won't be children but once," he had said only last year, not realizing that the children were children no longer. But this season the last shadow of an excuse was removed, for Jennie was married and Johnny was engaged, and Mrs. Patten "put her foot down" with alarming vigor and insistence.

"It is perfect nonsense, Jerry Patten, spending money and time every year to go and see the same old performance and hear the same stuff we've heard for years! The children are grown now, and can go by themselves if they want to, but we are too old."

"I never saw a giraffe, and they say this is the last living specimen," said Mr. Patten, imploringly; but his wife shook her head.

"We'll live if the last specimen doesn't," she said, conclusively.

"I caught ma looking at one of the circus bills," observed Johnny, next day at dinner.

Mrs. Patten colored guiltily. She had opened one just before consigning it to the kitchen stove, and it had proved so interesting that she had lingered over the description of the grand display of Oriental splendor which was to dazzle the eyes of town and country. Then Johnny had come in, and she had hastily stuffed the whole array of elephants, tigers, lions and acrobats into the hottest of the fire.

"I guess we'd better go, hadn't we, ma?" Mr. Patten looked up hopefully. "You haven't been anywhere this summer."

"Dreadful concerned you are about me, Jerry," said Mrs. Patten, grimly. "We'll go on that excursion week after next, since I'm pining so to go somewhere."

Mr. Patten groaned. The thought of substituting the excursion which he hated for the glittering, gilded circus that he loved was too painful. It completely took away his appetite, and pushing away his pie, he rose and took his way to the barn.

"O mother, don't keep pa from going to the circus!" pleaded Johnny.

"There's no sense in his being such a baby. I'd be ashamed. A man of his age!"

"That is just it; he is old, and he has been to shows all his life, and that's why he's so attached to 'em," urged Johnny.

Mr. Patten said no more about the matter. He went about with a resigned expression upon his usually cheerful, ruddy countenance. The morning of the eventful day came, and Mrs. Patten, by way of compensation, possibly, prepared an unusually tempting breakfast.

"You're going down to see the parade, ain't you, Ann Eliza?" he ventured.

"Well, I don't know. I need some calico, and I suppose I may as well get it to-day as any time." Johnny nudged his father.

"It's amazing, so it is, how many women need a spool of thread or a yard of calico on circus day," he said. "They don't care a straw about seeing the parade, but somehow they don't go home till after it passes."

"I won't get the calico to-day, then." Mrs. Patten looked reproachfully at the men, who tried not to laugh.

"Oh, yes, you will," Mr. Patten said, seeing her hurt look. "Don't mind, Johnny."

The parade passed, and Mrs. Patten went home with her calico, but with no signs of weakening, and Mr. Patten wandered around the scene of the departed glory, a disconsolate, wobegone expression upon his face.

"Hello, Uncle Jerry! What is the matter? You look sort of down. Going to the circus this afternoon?"

"I guess not, Reub. Mrs. Patten allows that it's foolish for old folks to be spending money that way."

"Well, maybe it is. I always go, anyhow. Why don't you go up to John's and buy something? He's giving a ticket for the show with every six-dollar purchase to-day."

"Is that so?" A rainbow of hope lighted up the gloom of Mr. Patten's face. "I'll go up and see about it."

There it was in the window, the announcement, together with a tempting display of dress goods, ribbons and laces, while in another window a variety of linens were displayed.

"Ann Eliza won't care for another new dress," Mr. Patten said to himself, as he studied the placard. "She hasn't made up the one I bought her for Christmas yet."

He stepped inside, and leaning over the counter, beckoned to the brisk young proprietor. "John, what have you got now that would just come to about six dollars, that Mrs. Patten would be likely to fancy? To tell the honest truth, John, I want to go to that show the worst way, but somehow Ann Eliza is bound that I shan't. Got her ideas so firm I can't move 'em. I told her I wouldn't buy a ticket, but she can't say anything if I have one given to me."

The good-natured proprietor comprehended the situation at once. "How would she like a new shawl? I've got some handsome ones." Mr. Patten shook his head. His wife did not like shawls.

"Most ladies are always pleased with a new dress. No? Well, how's the linen department? Just in, and the finest assortment of table linen ever shown in this town." He unfolded a beautiful cloth, fine and glossy. "One of the most expensive cloths I've got; and seeing it's you, Uncle Jerry, I'll make it an even eight dollars. It's marked eight-fifty, you see."

Half an hour later Mr. Patten marched into his sitting-room, a satisfied smile upon his face. He had not looked so happy in a week, and his wife noticed it at once.

"What is it, Jerry? What's in that bundle?"

"Open it," he said, affably, throwing it into her lap. "It's for you, and if you don't say it's the prettiest thing you ever saw—"

"Why, Jeremiah Benijah Patten, what under the sun have you bought me another table-cloth for?" Mrs. Patten exclaimed, as she unfolded the beautiful linen. "I've a new one now that I've never used, and this is—Land sakes alive, Jerry Patten, did you buy this to get a show ticket with it?" She had read the placard when she went in to purchase her calico, and a suspicion of the truth flashed over her.

"Yes, I did," replied Mr. Patten, stoutly, "and you can't say a word against my going if I go on a free ticket."

"A free ticket!" repeated Mrs. Patten, expressively; then she leaned back in her chair and laughed till the tears came. "Well, Jerry, if you want to go to that show as bad as all that—" she said, as she wiped away a tear perhaps not all due to the laughter.

"It's a mighty pretty table-cloth, now isn't it?" asked Mr. Patten, anxiously.

"Yes, too pretty, and too fine for plain people like us, Jerry."

"Not a bit of it. Nothing is too good for you, Ann Eliza. You'll come along to the show, won't you?" he added, coaxingly. "Things don't seem half so pleasant when you ain't about to share 'em with me."

When the performance began Mr. and Mrs. Patten were on the top row of the middle seats as usual, and one would never have gathered from Mrs. Patten's interested face that she had objected to coming.—Youth's Companion.

Waste of the Chefs.

The great chefs of this extravagant age seem to have taken for their motto, "Get the smallest portion of food out of the most costly bird or beast in such a way as to effect the greatest possible waste." A dish created by a famous Paris chef as the piece de resistance of the dinner given to the beautiful Le Bargy, who is, according to recent news from Paris, to marry the son of ex-President Casimir-Perier, consisted of the most delicate portions of thirty geese, ten turkeys, and several woodcocks, served in a sauce made by stewing the tender meat of four sirloins of beef, and leaving only the turkey element to be served up with truffles. The cost of this one course was $400—not because of what it consisted, but because of all that was wasted in its preparation. On this principle of "waste as much as possible to prepare a fashionable dish," truffles will soon be as unfashionable as onions, as they can almost always be obtained for about $5 a pound, and no chef has as yet discovered that any part of them is much better than any other part, to excuse wasting half and double the price.

Company Insures Glory After Death.

Any Austrian believer in a postmortem glory, provided he is not a convicted criminal and can pay the subscription to the "Universal Memorial Insurance Society," may secure the erection of a monument or mural tablet to his memory after his death. This novel insurance company, which has just issued its prospectus, provides memorials to its policyholders who die after reaching the age of fifty, in desirable sites in Vienna, the prominence of position being graduated according to the amount of the premium. Thus, by paying on the highest scale, one may insure a statue in the Stadt Park or other public garden in central Vienna; the two next classes of policies provide monuments in less honorable positions; and the fourth class is for mural tablets. A policyholder dying before he is fifty forfeits his premium. On the death of an insurer a committee meets and decides the character and site for the monument, taking into account the class of policy held by the deceased. To provide data for their decisions, the insured have to send in annual reports specifying anything noticeable they have achieved.

MEXICAN WOMEN AT HOME.

Have Few Outside Interests and Care Nothing for Athletics.

As the Moors practically controlled the commerce and education of Spain for over 100 years, the Spaniards acquired to a great extent the same ideas held by them of the education and treatment of women. And they in their turn carried these ideas to Mexico. In fact, the Mexican women of the upper classes were much freer under the Aztecs than they were afterward under Spanish rule. And until quite lately this condition of affairs has prevailed in Mexico since its freedom from the Spanish crown.

Not so many years ago when a Mexican woman went shopping she remained in her carriage in the street and sent her servant into the store to call one of the clerks to wait upon her. He came out and received her orders and brought the goods to her for examination. This peculiar method of shopping was due to the old Mexican idea that a lady of good family should be exclusive and should shield herself from the gaze of the public, and in fact from every one except her own immediate relatives and most intimate friends. This idea has been dying hard for over a century and it is still far from being completely buried in some parts of the republic.

The Mexican woman is naturally a home lover. She has no clubs to take her away from her home, and she has few outside interests. Even when she is philanthropically inclined, which she very often is, her ideas of life tend to make her place her charitable contributions in the hands of sister superiors of convents or directors of charitable institutions and works for use in the cause she has at heart.

The Mexican women of the middle and upper classes have never been athletic, at least since the Spanish conquest. This, of course, was due to the secluded life they led. But the women of the lower classes have ever been stout and muscular, for much work of a heavy kind has always been their lot. On account of her quieter disposition it is not probable that, for years at least, the Mexican woman will take the interest in athletics that is now being shown by her American sister. Another reason is that the sympathy of the Mexican people is all against her doing so.

In the Mexican schools the girl is taught many things in the way of needlework, painting, embroidering, drawing and designing, and these latter serve to fill in her peaceful, uneventful life after leaving school. To this must be added music. For here, as in Spain and other Latin countries, most women of the middle and upper classes receive an excellent musical education.

In their homes, and in their own way, the Mexican women are delightful entertainers, and their knowledge of music aids not a little in their entertaining.

The piano always forms a very important factor in the entertainment at a Mexican house. No matter how small the gathering of friends, there is always some one who can play well, and his or her services are requested and always cheerfully given, for a Mexican not only likes to help entertain his friends and his friends' friends, but he looks upon it as his duty to do so. With the piano also goes singing of the popular songs of the day.—Mexican Herald.

RAILWAY IN THE DESERT.

Hedjaz Road Expects to Take Pilgrims to Mecca.

A recent report by the German Commercial Attache at Constantinople gives some particulars of the railway, now in course of construction, which will ultimately connect Damascus and Mecca. The Hedjaz Railway is being made primarily on religious grounds, says the Pall Mall Gazette. Were it not for the certain prospect of attracting an enormous pilgrim traffic, the undertaking would never have been entered upon, for by far the greater portion of the twelve hundred miles of railway track will be laid in deserts and unproductive lands. The building is being carried out under German supervision, and as Turkish troops have been largely employed as laborers, the cost of the work will be comparatively small. The line from Damascus to Maan—about one-third of the total length—was opened to traffic last autumn. From a commercial standpoint the only benefit likely to be derived from the line will be the opening up for cultivation of certain districts near the Jordan, which have hitherto been neglected for lack of means to transport the crops. Some branch lines, however, are to be constructed for industrial purposes. One of these, from Haiffa to Deraat, would have been completed in May but for damage caused by heavy floods. This will increase the trade of Haiffa at the expense of Beirut.

THE PULPIT.

AN ELOQUENT SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. R. H. CARSON.

Subject: The Story of Ruth.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—In Grace Presbyterian Church the pastor, the Rev. Robert H. Carson, preached Sunday evening from the book of Ruth. Among other things he said:

We miss a great deal of the beauty and power of the Bible because of the manner in which we are accustomed to read it. There are very few who take time to read a whole book through at a single sitting. We dip into Scripture as if it were a book of fate, reading a verse here and another there, so it is not surprising that we rise from the exercise having received but little help and spiritual refreshment. There is no royal road to knowledge. There is no way to garner the lessons which Holy Scripture teaches save through that steady and persistent searching of which our Saviour spoke when He said, "Search the Scriptures, for they are they which testify of Me."

It is our hope this evening to point out some of the beautiful lessons contained in one little book of the Bible, in one of the most delightful stories ever presented for contemplation by the mind of man. I refer to the book of Ruth. Its very place in the sacred canon makes it a memorable piece of literature. It is, as you know, preceded by the book of Judges, and followed by the book of Samuel. These books are concerned almost exclusively with the national history of Israel—with the wars, defeats, humiliations, murmurings, complainings, repinings and repentances of the people. They are not, in the main, pleasant reading. Their pages are red with blood, and violence, and rapine, and lawless deeds, the unchangeable consequences of a nation forgetting God and neglecting to do His will.

It is a great pleasure, therefore, to turn from these books that tell of the ups and downs of national life, and fix the attention upon the charming story of Ruth. That little book pictures domestic life; it gives us a glimpse into the quiet, everyday habits and customs of the men and women of that time, and we see them in their homes, in the harvest fields, at the festivals, and at religious services.

Biography is, I think, the favorite reading matter. We are deluged with a flood of fictitious biography in the shape of novels which come by thousands from the printing press every year. It is an easy, but not very profitable kind of reading, for in the majority of cases there is a great deal of unreality, too great an absence of the lifelike, and too little of what we know to be a common experience.

It is not so, however, in the book of Ruth. There we have life truly depicted; there we meet with men and women as we find them to-day—not angels and not demons, but erring, enduring, faithful and not unblest.

It is not my intention to enter upon the story. I trust that you all know it, or that if you do not, that you will take a quiet half hour this very evening, and peruse that little book, which, in its superiority, is as far removed from our modern stories as the east is from the west.

In coming into touch, then, with this piece of sacred literature, and considering for our edification some of the lessons which it teaches, we see first of all the superiority of character. The two chief figures in the story are Boaz and Ruth, and it is their characters that make them such. There is not in the whole range of literature a better type of manly, healthy religion than is exemplified in the case of Boaz. You remember that scene in the harvest field. He went down to his reapers, and his salutation without any cant or insincerity, was, "The Lord be with you." My friends, when such a greeting as that can take place between master and men, it testifies to the presence of a religion that leaves its mark upon very act, and upon all the conduct of life. It is the men like Boaz who are the ornament and glory of religion; the men whose beliefs influence them all in the manifold concerns of life, in the forum, in the market place, abroad as well as at home.

Our Lord tells us who are to be accounted blessed. It is not the mere hearers of His word, nor they who can cry, "Lord, Lord," and affirm that they have prayed in public places. It is "Blessed are the doers of the Word," and blessed they alone. Such in his day was Boaz—a man of kindly feelings, pure heart, strong conviction, true purpose, and the benediction of the Most High was upon him.

Such, too, was Ruth, with her loving, tender, considerate heart—one of the fairest characters in the whole range of Hebrew Scripture.

And the most noteworthy fact in this connection is that these characters were produced amid surroundings and an environment that would have discouraged the average person. It was a lawless time; restrains were weakened or entirely removed, and men became a law unto themselves. Such a condition of society is not favorable to the cultivation and development of the nobler virtues, and yet, amid such a state of things, we have the stirring example of these two who bravely maintained the testimony and did the right. It is not at all unusual to hear men blame their surroundings for their errors and mistakes; it is, indeed, the common way by which we seek to condone our failings, but the excuse is not valid. Some men, it is true, are more strongly tempted than others; some are in places that require a strong heart, a firm faith, an unshaken confidence in God and in the power of Christ in order that they may be kept from the evil that prevails around them; but no man, if his purpose be true, can ever be wholly overcome. There is no temptation that hath befallen any man but what is common, and always with the temptation there is a way of escape if, trusting in the grace divine and in the strength omnipotent, our heart and will be set on delivery.

Amid surroundings most unfavorable these two saints went on from strength to strength, growing in grace and in favor, both with God and men, because their hearts were right and their spirits true. By their example we should be taught; we should not weakly blame our place or condition for our failures, but, looking should ask Him to search to see if there is any wicked and lead us in the way

But we learn again, from the place of good works in life.

I do not think we would of Boaz and Ruth if their had consisted of faith alone deeds, the results in daily faith that is especially dwelt this respect the book of an admirable commentary epistle of James. Indeed, most cheering features of ligious life lies in the fact divinely appointed connection faith and works is daily attention. Far be it from criticise our Puritan fathers we read about these heroes whom the world was not it not sometimes seem as if sity of faith was emphasized expense of the necessity of correspond? The two have together, their union perfect religious life and hath joined together let no asunder. What I am trying been summed up in a sentence late F. W. Robertson, a sentence the church should never let that sentence is: "Faith but not the faith that is alone

You remember Christ's w men gather grapes of thorns thistles?" The man who knees with the glow of the munion upon his face the faith hath made him a partaker power of God, and who then to live the life which his revealed to him is the man Christ alone will not be ashamed He cometh in the glory of and of the holy angels to world.

It is noteworthy too I think virtue in which Boaz and celled was the plain every of kindness. The greatest blessings are the most light, water, these are within of all. So also the greatest are within the power of all Paul says, "Now abideth charity, these three, but the these is charity." It is possible to attain to the possession of —the greatest of all. We verse gifts and powers, from another, so that higher than others, but there of us, no matter what our may be, who cannot speak word, do the kind deed and kindly judgment, and that the greatest of the virtues change would take place and weary world if only responded with our faith and filled the royal law according Scriptures: "Thou shalt neighbor as thyself."

But, again, the book of us the necessity of decision that Ruth and Orpah came ing of the ways, that one to Moab and her people, other took her way to the Israel. Is not that a true life? Sooner or later each comes to the parting of the we make the decision whose endless. "The kingdom of saith our Lord, "suffereth the violent take it by force means that one cannot drift It needs a strong exertion a decision that abides. forever is Ruth's decision says to Naomi, "Entreat leave thee, or to return from after thee, for whither thou will go, and where thou lodge, thy people shall be and thy God my God." place, among the first to whom the high and great of all ages pay reverence. is a great thing, it is a life to be capable of a The man is to be envied between this and that of claims and considerations, to say, "Here I see my path and no other will I go." ability to make decision is tion of all true and successful religion there is no escape You cannot drift into a tion in a crowd. "Once to and nation comes the cide in the strife 'twixt hood, for the good or evil each of us individually choice what to do. Many think, is kept from the joy of Christianity not things are undesired, not call of Christ is unheeded claims unacknowledged for the want of the power of strength to go forward sonal quest.

Young friends, to you lesson comes. You have the power of choice, and out eternity comes the cry, choose ye, this day serve." Pray God that good choice, and receive abide therein.

SETTLED CASE OUT OF COURT.

How Two Sisters Dispensed With Services of Their Lawyers.

The Hon. John P. Swasey, of Canton, and the Hon. James S. Wright, of Paris, the two leading attorneys of the Oxford, Me., bar thinking they might bring a settlement out of court between two clients, sisters, who were contending over family property, suggested a meeting in a private room at the Hubbard House to talk matters over on the evening before the day on which the case was assigned for trial in the court at Paris Hill.

The sisters appeared at the appointed time. Mr. Swasey took a seat beside his client on one side of a long table and Mr. Wright took a seat beside his client on the other side. Then they began to bring about a settlement.

Very soon the clients began to get mad, and, to the dismay of the lawyers, began to shake their fists at each other and to use threatening language. The lawyers, seeing this could not go on much longer, took a hand in it and tried to stop the wild flow of angry words. Whereupon the clients jumped on the backs of their lawyers and began to scratch their faces and pull their hair and whiskers.

With bleeding faces the two lawyers fled from the room, leaving their hats and overcoats and a part of their hair and whiskers. For a moment the sisters glared at each other and then burst out laughing as one exclaimed: "For heaven's sake look at this room!"

When the Oxford Supreme Judicial Court met the suit of the sisters was not on the list.—Boston Herald.

The Green of English Lawns.

The human soul is so made that green is one of its most delectable aesthetic experiences. The color is not exciting, like red, nor stimulating, like yellow, nor exalting and inspiring like blue; it is simply soothing, satisfying, reviving, delicious. It is the human color; if there be planets on whose surface green is a color as rare as is blue on ours, our race would speedily languish and die out there. But I speak, of course, of the perfect green—the green of English lawns. Other greens there are, cold, or trivial, or muddy, or crude, which do but irritate or depress us; and there are blue-greens and gray-greens, well enough in their places; and in the caves of icebergs, spiritual greens that exercise a weird enchantment. But for the garment of the mighty, round earth no other green is more worthy than this of England; none other touches so inwardly the heart of man. No wonder that Falstaff, on his deathbed, babbled o' green fields; for my dying eyes I could desire no happier vision than the gracious levels of an English lawn steeped in the gentle sunshine of a summer afternoon.—Julian Hawthorne, in the Atlantic.

A Forgetful Girl.

There is a very forgetful girl in Denver, living on Washington street. Fearing a young man, who called on her last week, would stay too long, she set the clock in the parlor half an hour ahead. She was tired, having been out horseback riding that day, and wanted to get to bed early. The scheme worked. But then she forgot to turn the clock back, and having numerous young men friends, she also very carelessly forgot which one it was. Last night the young man called again. The clock was still fast, and he noticed it.

"That clock is wrong, isn't it?" he asked.

"Yes," she replied. "I set it ahead so a fellow who called Wednesday night would go home in time to let me get some sleep."

"The clock fooled him all right," said the caller, quietly.

"How do you know?"

The young man smiled a sickly smile. "I called Wednesday night."

The girl coughed.

"We're having so much trouble in getting a hired girl," she said. "Does your mother ever have difficulty securing good help?"—Denver Post.

Montaigne and Marriage.

He went toward marriage with the quality of cheerful alacrity which would have inspired a journey to the whipping-post. "Might I have had my own will," he tells us, "I would not have married Wisdom herself, if she would have had me." No quainter piece of polite literature can be found than the letter which our philosopher addressed to his wife as a kind of necessary compliment on the occasion of the death of an only daughter. And the alacrity with which he relegates to Plutarch the task of consoling her in her affliction testifies to the entire consistency of his habitual claim that the dignity of marriage is best subserved when a husband refrains from becoming too fond of his wife. Even in view of this consideration, however, such a brief and refrigerated epistle suggests an amazing degree of reticence in a writer who needs only the turning of a faucet to enable him to pour forth a quenchless stream of ideas on any and every subject, from thumbs to immortality.—Martha Baker Dunn, in the Atlantic.

Essence of Lavender.

Housekeepers with strong linen chests at home are often beguiled by the vendors of sweet lavender in the shopping district and invest to their sorrow in the fine purple herb. For one of the tricks of the vendor's trade is to sprinkle them well every little while with an atomizer charged with essence of lavender, and after the herb has been indoors a brief period the odor has entirely vanished.—New York Sun.

Signed His Name 100,000 Times.

James B. Reynolds, of Boston, has been assistant secretary of the United States treasury for fifteen months and in that time has signed his name somewhere close to 100,000 times. His signature is of a fanciful character and consequently he uses ink by the gallon. As a rule he uses up three funtain pens a day. During a hot spell of weather at one time 12,000 Indian warrants came in. They had to be signed. The other assistant secretaries were on their vacations and "Jimmie" signed them, the whole 12,000. He lost twenty-one pounds and soured his disposition.

CHILD'S AWFUL SKIN HUMOR.

Screamed With Pain—Suffering Nearly Broke Parent's Heart—Speedily Cured by Cuticura.

"I wish to inform you that the Cuticura Remedies have put a stop to twelve years of misery I passed with my son. As an infant I noticed on his body a red spot, and treated same with different remedies for about five years, but when the spot began to get larger I put him under the care of doctors. Under their treatment the disease spread to four different parts of his body. The longer the doctors treated him the worse it grew. During the day it would get rough and form like scales. At night it would be cracked, inflamed and badly swollen, with terrible burning and itching. When I think of his suffering it nearly breaks my heart. His screams could be heard down stairs. The suffering of my son made me full of misery. I had no ambition to work, to eat, nor could I sleep. One doctor told me that my son's eczema was incurable, and gave it up for a bad job. One evening I saw an article in the paper about the wonderful Cuticura and decided to give it a trial. I tell you the Cuticura Ointment is worth its weight in gold, and when I had used the first box of Ointment there was a great improvement, and by the time I had used the second set of Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent my child was cured. He is now twelve years old, and his skin is as fine and smooth as silk. Michael Steinman, 7 Sumner Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., April 16, 1905."

The colors of vegetation are intensified by strong sunlight and a certain degree of coolness, as we see in the redness of northern apples and the deep tints of Alpine plants and other conditions—such as the composition of the soil—have an influence. A recent attempt to color flowers artificially by chemicals added to the soil has been recorded by Henry Kraemner. Aluminum sulphate and potassium sulphate deepened the color of yellow roses and tended to streak the petals of the white carnation with red and ammonium sulphate, aluminum sulphate, iron citrate and citric acid brought out white streaks on scarlet carnations. The effects were too slight, however, to promise commercial importance.

THE CHILTON COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

Elsewhere in the paper will be seen the program and announcement of the Chilton County Sunday School Convention to be held in Clanton, July 21 and 22. This is the one time in the year when the view of the work presented is county-wide in scope and importance therefore it is eminently needful that the convention be composed of county-wide representation. It has been said that the convention idea was born in the desire for and need of mutual helpfulness and the idea has grown so largely that, in the United States last year there were held 13,000 Sunday school conventions attended by approximately two million and a half workers. It is earnestly desired that the Chilton county convention shall result in such good to the delegates and visitors that every school in the county may feel the heartening impulse of new life which comes always from giving and receiving help.

An ideal convention represents every part of the field, therefore to give this meeting the greatest opportunity to achieve the good results hoped for, every school in the county should be represented.

Splendid work has been done by the Sunday schools in Chilton and it will do us all good to hear about this and to plan for even greater things for the future.

The convention will be held under most favorable circumstances. Clanton is convenient to a majority of the Sunday schools, and all who have shared its hospitality know that its "quality is not strained" and the convention is assured a cordial welcome. The executive committee has arranged a most interesting program, so the sessions will be pleasant and instructive. All things tend toward making this one of the most successful conventions we have had and it is earnestly hoped that this promise will be abundantly realized.

DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve

For Piles, Burns, Sores.

CLEARS UP THE COMPLEXION.

[illegible]

It is hard to tell just why these little tablets have become so popular with Clanton ladies, but considering the short time they have been advertised, the demand for them has been cause for wonder. They are no difference in appearance from other laxative tablets, but they really must posses unusual merit, for from own personal observation we know that they always do just what is expected of them

Their action upon the skin and complexion is remarkable, for the principal ingredient in them is extracts of dandelion, and your own doctor will tell you that dandelion is one of the greatest skin alteratives known to the profession.

If your bowels are inactive, your skin sallow, your tongue coated, your breath foul, and if you are troubled with pimples, billious spells and sick headache, a 25 cent package of Laxakola Tonic Tablets will clear up your complexion, tone up your liver, encourage the action of your bowels and make you sweet, clean and healthy, inside and out, or Florence Drug co will gladly pay back your money.

A Tragic Finish

A watchman's neglect permitted a leak in the great North Sea dyke, which a child's finger could have stopped, to become a runious break, devastating an entire province of Holland. In like manner Kenneth McIver, of Vanceboro, Me., permitted a little cold to go unnoticed until a tragic finish was only averted by Dr. King's New Discovery. He writes: "Three doctors gave me up to die of lung inflamation, caused by a neglected cold; but Dr. King's New Discovery saved my life." MAKE MONEY.

Here is an interesting study: Make out a list of all the people you know, and estimate the amount of money each one earns in a year. Total it up. The amount will be surprisingly large. Now, of all those people, only the few who SAVE SOMETHING really MAKE anything at all. Simply earning money isn't making it; what slips through the earner's fingers is finally "made" by somebody else. Don't forget to count yourself in on the list, and if you are not "making" money, begin now to save with us. One dollar will open your bank account.

Editor Banner—Please allow me to state to the people of Chilton county that I have withdrawn from the race for Representative, my health not permitting me to continue. I have received much encouragement from the good people of the county and feel confident of receiving the nomination if I could continue in the race. For the kind support I have received and for that which was promised I am very grateful, and with good wishes to all, and hoping for the success of the Democratic candidates.

Very respectfully,

Letter to F. M. Pinckard & Co.

Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sirs: Messrs. Leachman & Edelin, Grafton, W. Va., had been selling a paint which they thought well of and this had occurred:

They had sold a customer 18 gallons of it to paint his house. A few years later, they sold the same man Devoe lead-and-zinc the same number of gallons to paint the same house. He had 7 gallons left.

The point of the tale is this: 11 gallons Devoe paints an 18-gallon house.

Do you want to sell it?

Of course, that isn't all.

Why does 11 gallons Devoe go as far as 18 gallons of other paint? Because it is all paint, all true, no sham, and full measure.

Do you want to sell it?

But that isn't all. Devoe lasts longer. No, no; you haven't got to wait ten years to find that out. Ten thousand people know it. We've got their names. Our agents know them; they think a heap of Devoe. There's no difficulty in showing your townspeople what to expect of Devoe. $10 will paint a $15 house; and the paint'll last twice as long

Do you want to sell it?

Yours truly,
F. W. DEVOE & Co.

Again we hear the croakers declaring that even the breakfast wheat is not what it is cracked up to be, complains the Chicago Tribune.

It is evident from that $90,000 allowance to his Queen that Alfonso has none of those fallacious notions about two being able to live as cheaply as one.

Says the Chicago Tribune: "Mr. Rockefeller is right in saying that 'the mere possession of wealth does not bring happiness.' It is the spending of it."

Says the Pittsburg Gazette: "With all the irritating limitations to the power of the Duma, the mere fact of its assembling to represent the people of Russia is a step toward that freedom which they will some day attain."

The cure of a cancerous lip in an old woman by radium would have been regarded a few years ago as nothing short of miraculous. Nothing was employed in this cure except the radium tube, declares the New York Mail. Upon such a cure as that, what hopes for the sufferers from this curse of nature's miscarrying plans may be founded!

Professor William Lyons Phelps, of Yale, thinks "it is possible that the whole history of Russia in the next twenty years will be changed because Gorky came here with a woman who is not his wife." This would seem to be taking the Russian novelist at his own exaggerated value. Had he been a Tolstoy or a Russian Victor Hugo the opinion would appear more credible.

Most of us would go in for vegetable diet if those who manage vegetarian restaurants would offer their wares because they are palatable and good to see, observes the Boston Transcript., instead of keeping the healthful properties of certain foods so prominently before our eyes that we return with haste to the flesh pots. We like to eat what we eat because we like it, not because it is good for us.

We are a restless people. Every thin woman longs to be fat. Every fat woman wants to grow thin. Every town man longs for the time when he can retire to the quiet of the country, and every farmer hopes to some day quit work and move to town, where he can take life easy. Country newspaper men would like to try their hands on a city daily. The fellows on the big dailies dream of a time when they can own papers of their own. In youth we long for maturity, in age we yearn for the happy days of childhood, says the Sedgwick (Kan.) Pantagraph.

American food and game fishes have been sent to stock the waters of many foreign countries. Last year Mr. John W. Titcomb, of the United States Bureau of Fisheries, says Forest and Stream, made a successful trip to Argentine with fishes adapted to that country. Now the Gaikwar of Baroda who is touring the United States to study its institutions, has been so impressed by the success of our fishcultural enterprises, that he has expressed a desire to have an expert from the bureau go to India to give instructions in fish culture. This is of increased significance when it is considered that Great Britain might be expected to supply the talent in this field throughout her own possessions.

A New York City water supply project, for which $160,000,000 will be spent, will involve the taking of some 18,000 acres of land in the Catskills, the obliteration of several villages, the removal of nineteen miles of railroad track, and the confiscation of boating and fishing privileges in many streams and ponds and lakes, states Forest and Stream. This is one of a rapidly growing number of instances of water supply extensions which involve the taking away of rights enjoyed from time immemorial by the angler. In Middletown, N. Y., a war has been waged for four years over the prohibition of fishing in the public reservoirs; the strife has split both political parties, made bitter enemies of lifelong friends and caused bloodshed several times. In Massachusetts the Legislature this year passed a bill permitting fishing and boating in several bodies of water in the Boston water system, but Governor Guild has vetoed the measure, holding that the lives of a million people should not be imperilled for the advantage of a few thousands.

Birmingham, Ala.—The supreme court has declared constitutional the statute prescribing a tax of 15 cents per $100 for record of mortgages.

The Escape of Dix.

Birmingham, Ala.—The talk in Birmingham is the sensational escape of Robert L. Dix, the negro sign painter, who stabbed Bert Pesnell, a motorman, to death on an electric car in this city in October last, and who was sentenced to be hanged August 3. The reward offered by Sheriff Burgin was increased by another reward offered for the recapture and delivery to the sheriff of Dix, the Birmingham Railway, Light and Power Company contributing $1,000 to the fund. The motormen and conductors began taking up a collection looking to an additional reward.

Every deputy sheriff, municipal officer and constable in Jefferson county and in the adjoining counties have been urged to be on the lookout for the negro. It is now believed that there was a carriage in waiting in an alley adjoining the jail yard and that when Dix jumped down from the high wall he was placed in the vehicle and hastily driven off.

Dix belonged to half a dozen secret societies. Sheriff Burgin and his deputies have not been idle since the negro murderer escaped. All kinds of rumors are being run down. A report came in during the morning that the negro had been captured at Trussville, in the northern part of the county, but this report was like the rest of them. The sheriff and deputies made a thorough search of the cells in the county jail and discovered a dozen homemade knives and two razors. The bars sawed out of the cell and the window through which the negro murderer made his escape have been repaired.

Negro Escape Caught.

Montgomery, Ala.—Much excitement was created in the city by the rapid firing of many revolers on Intendencia street, near the business section. Bob Washington, a notorious negro, who has once been shot by a police officer, and who is now serving a five year sentence, escaped from the convict camp and came to the city with the avowed intention of killing a negro woman who had married the week before. The officers were looking for him, and half a dozen deputy sheriffs and policemen were on the street where he was expected when he appeared. He ran and several shots were fired at him. Being surrounded in a block by officers the negro would go from one street to the other to be fired upon. Finally in jumping a fence his pants caught in a picket, and he hung there helpless until the officers arrived and placed the handcuffs on him. A large reward had been offered for his capture.

Senator Pettus Home.

Selma, Ala.—Senator Edmund W Pettus reached home last night from Tate Springs, where he spent a few days after the adjournment of congress.

"I slipped a little on the ice in Washington last winter," said the affable senator, "and I was heralded abroad as being in severe straits. A little later I had a slight attack and the world was informed that I had an apoplectic stroke. A few days before congress adjourned I had a regular old Cahaba chill, and I was desperately ill, but you boys see me, and I don't think I ever felt better."

To all appearances Senator Pettus is as robust and as full of vigor as ever in his life or for twenty years at least. His home friends, and they comprise everybody, have given him a royal welcome..

Terrific Rainfall.

Anniston, Ala.—Two of the heaviest rains ever known fell here Saturday afternoon at 2 and 6:30 o'clock. The first rain exceeded in immensity that of the Galveston flood. The total precipitation for fifty-eight minutes was 2.77 inches, the largest volume for five minutes being .60, while that at Galveston was only slightly in excess of .40. Mr. Clarke, of the weather bureau all his experience. The heaviest wind velocity was thirty-five miles, at 2:37 o'clock. There was also a fall of hail with the rain. Several stores were flooded and the stores badly washed, so that the damage will amount to several hundred dollars. Eros' book store was the principal loser, his loss being about $1,000.

Cullman, Ala.—The canning factory of the Cullman Fruit and Produce Association commenced business last week, and is putting up all the seasonable fruits and vegetable in the most cleanly manner and under the most attractive labels. The factory is probably the largest in the south, and will be of great benefit to truck farmers. beat all previous records. Strawberries can still be had here, and all other fruits and vegetables have done very much better than usual.

M. Guesde, a French socialist, says that when society is properly constituted nobody will have to work more than eleven minutes a day.

Huntsville, Ala.—The office of constable of the Huntsville precinct, one of the best state offices in the city, was vacated by the death of Thomas W. Ward, and there are four applicants, John H. Crothwaite, Policeman James Overton, Deputy Sheriff John Bullard and Deputy Constable Robinson. The vacancy will be filled by the appointment of the governor.

In New York city there is one policeman to each 500 persons.

Bloody General Trepoff Casts Lot with Democrats—This Marks a New Era.

IS AN UNWELCOMED ALLY.

Bluntly Tells Czar's Friends That Only Hope of Empire Rests With Semi-Conservatives.

S. Petersburg.—General Trepoff's advocacy of a ministry composed of constitutional democrats introduces a new element into the situation which, though the fall of the Goremykin cabinet is momentarily postponed, is steadily tending toward parliamentary government as being the only expedient which may ward off the impending storm of anarchy.

The statement which he made during the interview at Peterhof shows that the constitutional democrats have a wholly unexpected and perhaps undesired ally at court and in Premier Goremykin an opponent who is held in contempt as a procrastinator and drifter.

Trepoff's conversion to the idea of a responsible ministry is based, however, not on regard for the constitutional democrats, whom he considers to be half revolutionists, but on the conviction that repression by a disaffected army and disorganized police would no longer serve.

General Was Blunt.

The general spoke with his usual remarkable bluntness, not attempting to cover the desperate condition of the country and the strength of the revolutionary cause and giving the lie direct to France. Urusoff, whom he further characterized as a traitor who had sold himself in the hope of attaining a place in the new government. The interview with General Trepoff will precipitate a remarkable sensation when it is published here and force an issue at Peterhof between the Goremykin and Trepoff factions.

The constitutional democrats will take no part in that portion of the policy of the radicals, which can only plunge the country into streams of blood. Parliament must exist as the instrument of pacification or not at all. The constitutional democrats in the future are bound to actively combat the tactics of the extremists as well as those of the government.

The inspiration for the disorders in the guards and other troops is clearly traced in the socialist organization. The secret police are investigating the movements of M. Alladin, the present leader in the lower house, hoping to conect him with the mutiny of the first battalion of the Preobrajensky regiment.

Mutinous Resolutions.

The resolutions drawn up by the mutinous garrison of Oswied, one of the great fortresses defending the Polish frontier, include the usual social revolutionary demands for the nationalization of the land, full amnesty for political offenders and the summoning of a constituent assembly.

In the reorganization of the guard corps the emperor has replaced the "carpet knights" among the officers by fighting soldiers of the type of Major General Letschitsky, the new commander of the first guard division, which includes the Preobrajensky regiment. Letschitsky has spent almost his entire life in Turkestan and the far east, commanding with distinction in China and Manchuria. He is an utter stranger at court.

The newspapers print an open letter from the Letisch Royal Democratic League of Libau in regard to the execution of Makhovsky, a revolutionist, who refused to go to the scaffold protesting his innocence. The guards handled him so roughly that they broke his wrists and crushed in his chest. The man died before he reached the place of execution. His body nevertheless was strung up.

Classed as Typhoid.

New Orleans, La.—Information that a report was published in Mobile saying that yellow fever had appeared in New Orleans was received by the Louisiana state board of health.

Dr. C. H. Irion, president of the Louisiana board of health, authorized the statement that the Mobile report was probably based on the fact that a case of fever, which was officially diagnosed as typhoid, was reported to the state board as suspicious.

Dr. Irion said also that, as far as the state board of health can learn, there is now no yellow fever anywhere in New Orleans.

In Night Attire.

Lincoln, Neb.—An attempt was made before dawn to wreck the Commercial Hotel with dynamite, but without success. A dynamite bomb was thrown into an area way, exploding with terrific force, damaging a wall of the hostelry and breaking windows generally in the vicinity. None of the guests were injured, but a panic ensued, and the guests rushed out of the hotel in night attire, but were finally pacified. The police are investigating.

To Fire Losers.

San Francisco, Cal.—One hundred and sixty-six settlements that have been effected by fire insurance companies indicate that in the business section of San Francisco more than $100,000,000 will be paid in coin to fire losers on the face of the adjustments made on losses that have already come before committees. The average adjusted loss in the 166 instances mentioned is $84,225, the total payments being $14,000,000. The round value of the 166 properties is given at $19,000,000 by the adjusters. Consequently the reduction for earthquake damage and for all other causes in the adjustments is $5,000,000.

These figures are supplied by an entirely competent authority. The large sum of $100,000,000 for pending and effected settlements is an estimate upon the averages already noted.

The loss committees appointed up to date number 1,221. The $100,000,000 is based upon the multiplication of the average of $84,325 by 1,221.

Philippine Cholera.

Manila.—The cholera situation has improved. The report showed nineteen new cases since midnight of July 4 and ten deaths. The report for July 4 shows twenty-eight cases and nineteen deaths. Two Americans, Robert Imoberts and — Hart, are dead, but to date only five Amercans have been seized with the disease.

Thus far cholera has not appeared in the American section of the city. The Americans who have been stricken live in the native sections of Manila. The bureau of health has refused to permit the sale of food stuff that may have been liable to infection.

The efforts of the doctors engaged in combatting the disease show results in the decrease in the number of new cases reported. While the disease is stronger than the great epidemic of 1892, the authorities believe that they have the situation under control.

Hearst Prefers Bryan.

San Francisco, Cal.—William Randolph Hearst is not a candidate for nomination for the presidency by the democrats. He is in favor of Bryan or Folk.

Here is a statement given out by him:

"I would like to state very positively that I am not a candidate for the democratic presidential nomination in 1908. Mr. Bryan said the other day in London that there were others besides himself who had claims on the nomination through services rendered the democratic party, and mentioned pleasantly Mr. Folk, Mr. Bailey and myself.

"While appreciating Mr. Bryan's compliment, I must decline to be considered a candidate. Let the list stand if Mr. Bryan pleases, Bryan or Folk or Bailey. For my part I would substitute Stevenson for Bailey."

Man Enveloped in Flames.

Chicago, Ill.—Almost completely enveloped in flames which started by the accidental combustion of a package of peroxide of soda which he carried in his pocket, William Schoen ran through Jackson boulevard pursued by a large crowd, the members of which were anxious to catch him and extinguish the flames. Schoen was finally caught by a policeman, who tore his burning clothes from his body. He was taken to a hospital, where it was said that he was fatally burned.

L. & N. Takes Another Road.

Pensacola, Fla.—The Louisville and Nashville railroad has announced that it has taken over the Yellow River railroad, which runs from Crestview, Fla., to Florala, a distance of about thirty miles, connecting at the former place with the P. & A. division of the Louisville and Nashville. The road will hereafter be known as the Yellow River division, and the passenger service will be improved by a through daily train being put on between Pensacola and Florala.

Bad Powder Explosion.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—Four men were badly hurt by an explosion in a tunnel on the Memphis and Charleston railroad extension near Jasper, Tenn. While loading a drill hole the charge ignited,, blowing out prematurely and firing four kegs of powder.

First Cotton Stalk Plant.

Atlanta, Ga.—The Cotton Stalk Products Company, capitalized at $15,000,000, of which Harvie Jordan is president, at a directors' meeting in Atlanta decided to erect an experiment plant in Montgomery, Ala., at a cost of $200,000.

Atlanta, Birmingham and New Orleans were after the plant, but failed to land. Eastern and southern capital will be used in this venture, $100,000 from each. Among the directors present was W. P. G. Harding, president of the First National Bank of Birmingham.

Windsor, Ont.—A gang of wire tappers cut in on the Windsor raace track and intercepted and changed the result of the second race. Confederates in Cincinnati, Chicago, Louisville and other cities all over the country won large sums of money on the horse sent over the wires as the winner of the race. An attempt to make another haul on the third race was frustrated by the operator at the race track, who discovered that some one had tampered with the wire.

BRYAN IS WILLING

Unless the Unforeseen Happens His Nomination is Assured.

WILL ACCEPT IF NOMINATED.

Says He is Delighted to See That Democratic Principles Have Been Vindicated.

Washington, D. C.—Former United States Senator J. K. Jones, of Arkansas, who was chairman of the democratic national committee when William J. Bryan made his campaign in 1896 and 1900, has received a letter from Mr. Bryan, in which he announces he will accept the nomination for the third time if it is tendered to him. The letter is dated June 18, at Stockholm, and is as folows:

"I have been watching political development and have noted with gratification the vindication of democratic principles. You have correctly stated my position. As I write to Col. Wetmore, I shall do nothing to secure another nomination, and do not want one unless the conditions seem to demand it. I may add that I enjoy the freedom of private life and feel that I can do some good without holding any office.

"There are, however, certain reforms which I would like very much to see accomplished, and to assist in the accomplishment of these reforms I am willing to become the party candidate again if when the time for nomination arrives the advocates of reform are in control of the party and think that my candidacy will give the best assurance of victory. If some one else seems more available I shall be even better pleased.

"I need not assure you that I am more interested in seeing our principles triumph than I am of the personnel of the ticket. The country needs to have Jeffersonian democracy applied to all the departments of the government, state and national, and I am content to help to make this application. Yours truly,

"WILLIAM J. BRYAN."

Birds Destroy Weevils.

Washington, D. C.—The problem of controlling the ravages of the cotton boll weevil in the United States is of such moment that it is being studied by the department of agriculture from a number of different standpoints. One of these is the relation of birds to the weevil. Accurate information as to the value of our native birds as destroyers of this pest is of considerable importance to the cotton growers, but such information can be obtained only by means of careful observation in the field, supplemented by study of the stomach contents of the birds. Field observations alone, unverified by stomach examinations, have proved unreliable. Birds may be observed picking insects from cotton plants, but it does not follow that the insects are boll weevils; nor is the statement that boll weevils have been found in the stomach of birds, if made by persons unaccustomed to the identification of insects, to be accepted as conclusive. Incests remains in a bird's stomach are nearly always a more or less in a disintegrated condition, so that identification of the species is difficult and requires the services of a specialist.

The department has recently given much attention to the bird feature of boll weevil ravages, and has announced the long list of species of birds which have been ascertained to feed on the weevil.

New Weather Data Plan.

Washington, D. C.—Several plans have recently been submitted to the postoffice department for advising patrons of the rural delivery service of weather predictions. One of these plans proposes that the forecasts of the weather bureau be printed on the back of mail matter delivered by rural carriers in conjunction with the back stamp used in the postoffice.

Going to the Stock Yards.

Washington, D. C.—Secretary Wilson and party of officials of the department of agriculture, who will have charge of the working of the new meat inspection law, have left Washington for Chicago. They will confer with superintendents of inspection, who have been summoned from the various packing centers of the country. The secretary has not determined whether he will visit any other cities at this time.

Bandit Gets Busy.

Fresno, Cal.—A dispatch from Wawona say that eighty Yosemite valley stages have been held up by a lone bandit. No details have been received.

Little Rock, Ark.—Attorney-General Rogers and Prosecuting Attorney Rhoton, of Pulaski county, have filed suit against the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, alleging a conspiracy to control the output and prices of oil and asking damages in the sum of $2,800,000. They also ask that the company forfeit its right to do business in Arkansas. The bill alleges that the Waters-Pierce Oil Company is associated with the Standard Oil Company, Republic Oil was once a poor fisherman, his net by the shore of the times he cast; the first drew forth the carcass of an second time a jar filled with third broken pots and jars; fourth time, having prayed he drew forth a jar of cop-with lead bearing the Solomon the King. He rejoiced at this, for he could take the jar to the markets and sell it for gold. So he set the jar on the sand and picked out the lead with his knife to see what it contained. But nothing came out but black smoke, which rose slowly toward the sky and spread out over the heavens; at which he was greatly astonished. After a while the smoke collected together and became a gigantic genie. The genie told the terrified fisherman that he must die, for while in the jar he had made a vow that, whosoever liberated him must perish. The fisherman in vain implored him to spare his life; finally he conjured the genie by the great name of Solomon to answer him one question. Upon hearing the great name, the genie trembled, and replied, "Ask, and be brief." Then the fisherman said: "How wast thou in this bottle? It will not contain thy hand or thy foot; how can it then contain thy whole body? I will never believe thee until I see thee in it." Upon hearing this the genie shook and again became smoke, and slowly entered the jar. When he was all in, the fisherman quickly seized the lead stopper and made the genie a prisoner, and all his cunning could avail nothing against the great seal of Solomon. Threatening to throw the jar back into the sea, the fisherman made the genie swear by the Most Great Name of God that if set free again he would do no harm, but instead would give him great riches. Thereupon the fisherman took the stopper from the jar, and the genie, soaring into the air as before, said: "Follow me." They walked on until they came to a lake in a desert between the mountains. Here the fisherman was ordered to cast his net, and he did so, and drew forth four enchanted fish. These he took to the Sultan and in consequence was made a great and rich man.—Arabian Nights Entertainment.

THE JOURNEY.

"It's so hard to be sick with the mumps, mama! Tell me a story. A make-believe one that just couldn't happen! That will make me forget." And mama took Donald on her lap and told him this story:

"Once there was a little boy who was lame, and very, very tired of keeping still.

"It was a summer day, warm and beautiful. Overhead the clouds were so white and fleecy in the blue sky, and they floated so dreamily that the little boy's eyes followed them wistfully.

"'I wish I could sail a little way on one!'

"As he looked he thought, 'I will sail on one,' and he seized his little crutch, and very slowly climbed a high hill at the back of his house.

"The clouds floated on the very top, he knew, and when he reached it, a dear little cloud was there waiting for him.

"Up, over, in, he was nestled in the soft, white cloud and ready to sail.

"The air was cooler than on the earth, but he pulled a bit of cloud round him, and it was soft as a lamb's back.

"And he sailed—far, far away!

"Past green fields and over thick forests, over bright rivers and lakes, and his cheeks grew pink and his eyes began to grow dark.

"Lovely colors were in the sky, which changed to deep, dull blues—and then a tiny moon crept out and a few beautiful stars, and then this little cloud passenger grew sleepy and hungry, too, and said, 'Now it is time for me to go back to my own mother.'

"And it was wonderful all the time, for the cloud dropped lower, lower, until it was again at the top of the hill behind this little boy's house, and he softly slid out and over, and went down the hill to his own mother. There, that is a story that couldn't have happened! Did it make you forget, Donald?" asked mother. But Donald was asleep. Another little passenger was starting toward the land of happy dreams.—Katharine B. Walker in the Youth's Companion.

A NOVEL PUNISHMENT.

Corporal punishment is said to be the resource of a lazy and uninventive mind. A Washington woman does not believe in it. She makes the punishment fit the crime, according to Harper's Weekly. On one occasion one of her boys had surreptitiously appropriated an orange belonging to his younger brother. The misdemeanor was discovered before the culprit had disposed of his spoil; so the two youngsters were summoned to the judgment seat.

"James," was the stern command of the mother, "take this seat, and you, Thomas, that one. Now, Thomas, give James the orange you have stolen from him."

When the lads had done as they were ordered, the mother added;

"James, I want you to take as long as possible to eat that orange. You, Thomas, are to sit there and watch him eat it. Under no circumstances are you to leave the room."

Not so Very Raw.

There were some things the man who had fought in Cuba bore with composure, and some which aroused his wrath.

"It's a wonder such a lot of raw recruits did such good work," somebody said in his hearing one day.

"Look here," said the soldier. "After a man's baked in that heat for a couple o' days he isn't so raw as you seem to think."—Youth's Companion.

..Indians Ruled by a Woman..

THE KICKAPOOS HAVE FOUND A HOME IN MEXICO.

Tribe Noted For Its Wandering Propensities---Its Remnants Have Prospered in the Mountains of Mexico, Although Dying Off on the Tribal Reservation in Kansas.

THE announcement that George A. Outcelt, Assistant United States District Attorney of Oklahoma, writes the Guthrie correspondent of the New York Sun, has been ordered to leave Mexico, where he was investigating the conditions of the Kickapoo Indians, brings into the limelight the most persistent wanderers among all Indian tribes.

During the Civil War the Kickapoos fled to Mexico. Later much money was expended by the United States to return them to their reservations in Kansas and Oklahoma. All but 176 members of the tribe did return.

The 176 escaped into the mountains of Mexico and have remained there ever since, increasing in the meantime to more than five hundred in number. Of the 412 members brought back to the Oklahoma reservation there are to-day but 184 remaining.

The Kickapoos fought under Tecumseh against General William Henry Harrison at Tippecanoe, and were prominent as a fighting tribe until their final defeat by General Zachary Taylor at Fort Harrison, following the outbreak of the war with England in 1812. Originally the Kickapoos lived in the upper Mississippi River country and belonged to the Algonquin family.

Gradually they moved down into Illinois and roamed over the country between the Mississippi and Wabash rivers. In the early history of the country they were bitter toward the English and supported the colonists against England in the war for independence. Later they turned against the colonists and a state of war against the Kickapoos continued until 1792.

It was in 1811 that they fought under Tecumsen. In 1815-13 treaties were made with the Government by which they gave up their lands in Illinois and removed to a reservation in Kansas on the Osage River. Remnants of the tribe were in Illinois as late as the '40s.

Following the removal to Kansas a degree of civilization was established for a few years. Then the predatory and savage instincts of the Kickapoos resumed the ascendency and their warriors went out killing and horse stealing, making raids on the people of neighboring States, and at length turning upon the United States Indian agents, one of whom they murdered in 1854.

They were then removed to a reservation in northern Kansas, near Atchison. Some of them gradually settled down on separate holdings and became farmers and citizens. The remainder fled to Mexico about the time the Civil War began and lived by raids over the frontier for booty. In 1873 there were only 300 in Kansas, while the number in Mexico had grown to 1000.

After the majority of the Mexican Kickapoos were returned to the United States all that was left were removed from the frontier by Mexico at the request of the United States, and settled on good lands in the mountains of the State of Guerrero. They longed for their old home around Santa Rosa, 1200 miles to the north, and gradually drifted back there.

The Mexicans speak highly of the Kickapoos as industrious, skillful hunters, given to cleanliness. While some of them have become farmers and experts in stock raising, the great majority adhere to the old custom of hunting and fishing. Their dress, as a rule, is the primitive costume, all their clothing being made of buckskin and trimmed with beads, the squaws being adept with the needle.

At the present time very few Kickapoos are remaining in Oklahoma. They have flocked to their kinsmen in Mexico whenever an opportunity has presented itself. Their removal was first opposed by the Government, but finally they were allowed to move when they desired to do so. No Indian was allowed to take any live stock or property of any kind which had been furnished him by the United States Government.

Their lands in Oklahoma, six miles south of Shawnee City, are leased out. The rentals average $100 a year for an average farm of eighty acres. This fund will support the Indian and furnish all the luxuries he desires. For years the Government has made an annual appropriation of $8000 for the Kickapoos, this fund being disbursed by the Indian agent for agricultural implements, stock and wearing apparel.

The principal object of the investigation which is being made by the United States Government in connection with the removal of the Kickapoos to Mexico is to determine whether any improper methods were employed in obtaining the removal of the restrictions whereby the Kickapoos parted with their Oklahoma lands. It is alleged that the price paid for these lands by white people has in no instance approached the real value of the land, and the department officials believe that in some instances, at least, the Kickapoos received nothing for their lands in this territory, but were to get in exchange other lands in Mexico, practically without value when compared with the rich agricultural lands they held in Oklahoma.

During the last year an inspector for the Indian Department was thwarted while attempting to secure evidence in Mexico, although he went there after assurances had been given by the Mexican Government to Minister Conger that he would be allowed to proceed with the work. The investigation has been in progress ever since, and it was on this business that Assistant United States Attorney Outcelt was recently instructed to go to Mexico.

The Kickapoos are a pure race, never having intermarried with whites or blacks. This is due to their religion. Within a few years a Kickapoo girl was wooed by a white man and he had every reason to believe that she would marry him. She persistently refused and, pressed for an explanation, she said:

"You are fair to look upon and agreeable to me, but your God is not my God and our offspring would be neither Indian nor paleface, and therefore a spiritual orphan, to be denied in the unending life the protection of the Good Spirit."

Love him as she might, yet she loved her race more and refused his offer. It is a boast of the Kickapoo that none of his tribe has ever become a Christian.

The Kickapoos in Mexico are ruled at the present time by a woman chief, known as Wapahoka. She is about forty-five years old and her title is inherited. She has had much to do in getting the remnants of the tribe in Oklahoma to come to Mexico, as her advice to them has ever been to leave the United States for that country.

Whenever they have lived any length of time by the water the Kickapoos have become famous as swimmers. This would not be peculiar if the tribe had lived on the coast or on an island; they, however, are an inland tribe. The most expert of Kickapoo swimmers have been known to remain under water for two minutes.

News of the satisfaction of the Kickapoos with their new locality has spread among the fullbloods of other tribes in Indian Territory, and a plan is now on foot whereby all fullbloods will move to Mexico and colonize there. The Indians are willing to dispose of their lands in order to make the transfer, and many of them are so anxious for the change that unless prevented they will not remain long enough to dispose of their lands.

"Deadhead" Originated in Delaware.

The term "deadheads" is in various connections very much to the fore at the present time. How did it arise? Its origin is purely transatlantic.

Sixty years ago all the principal avenues of the city of Delaware led in one direction, to a tollgate close to the Elmwood Cemetery road. This cemetery having been laid out long before the construction of the plank road beyond the tollgate, funeral processions were allowed to pass along it toll free. One day as Dr. Price, a well-known physician, stopped to pay his toll, he observed to the gatekeeper.

"Considering the benevolent character of the profession to which I have the honor to belong, you ought to let us pass toll free.'"

"No, no, doctor," the man replied, "we can't afford that. You send too many deadheads through here as it is." This story soon traveled far and wide until the term came to be applied to any one who claims the privilege of traveling on a railway system or passing into a place of amusement free of cost.—London Tribune.

He Recovered His Artist.

It was at an afternoon party. The hostess, anxious for a sensation, and desiring something other than the orthodox thought reader and the fraudulent palmist, engaged a troupe of performing fleas for the entertainment of her guests. The party was a great success. When it broke up a loud wail rent the air. It was the voice of the impresario frantic with excitement.

"What is it? Tell me, I implore you," said the hostess.

"Ach, madam, I has lost vun of my fleas. Vere has it gone?"

At that moment a lady wearing a gray gown brushed past him.

"Ach, mada, pardon," said the manager, greatly relieved, lightly picking something from her shoulder; "vun of my artistes."—London Tatler.

Why the Bear Can't Take Off His Coat.

The inspector asked the boys of the school he was examining: "Can you take your warm overcoats off?"

"Yes, sir," was the response. "Can the bear take his warm overcoat off?" "No, sir." "Why not?"

There was a silence for a while, and then a little boy spoke up. "Please, sir, because God alone knows where the buttons are." — London Evening Standard.

The Spirit of the Age.

If the spirit of the age is incorporated and concisely expressed in anything, it is in the automobile, declares the Automobile Journal. There is speed, mechanical genius and compactness. It constitutes, in fact, the triumph of the application of scientific principles to practical purposes, and if that is not the spirit of the age, one may well ask what is!

WANTED, A DISEASE.

One Good Pest Deserves Another, Says Science.

ANY one who can contribute a fatally sick rat, mouse or rabbit to the Department of Agriculture may unwittingly confer a benefit of millions of dollars annually on this country. What the department wants is a fatal and contagious malady, and it is working hard to get one now. But up to date the work is merely promising. There has not been any satisfactory result to record. So, if any one has a hutch of rabbits swept off by a sudden and mysterious disease, or if he notices any swift and sudden mortality among the rats and mice in his locality, that may be the very thing the department is looking for.

Of course, every one knows that the gopher problem is a serious one in many parts of the West, and the rabbit pest has at times threatened to devastate Australia. Altogether the small animals do a great amount of damage, but most people do not realize how great the aggregate of this damage really is. Yet in one county of the State of Washington last year field mice did damage estimated at half a million dollars. In the same time wolves in Wyoming alone mulcted the stock men of $1,000,000 worth of cattle, while the damage from field mice, field rats, ground squirrels, pocket gophers and similar little "varmints" throughout the United States, especially in the West and South, amounted to many millions.

To cope with these pests is one of the most interesting tasks of the biological survey of the Department of Agriculture. It has been at the problem in a quiet way for several years, and it has about come to the conclusion that, although it is possible to trap, poison and otherwise reduce the pests in many instances, the thing that is really needed is a contagious disease that can be bottled up in the laboratory and distributed to do its own work on an infinitely more effective scale than can traps and poisons.

That there is some such disease, or that one can be produced, the scientists of the department do not doubt. The trouble up to date has been to find it. The biological survey has been working in conjunction with the bureau of animal industry, and there have been some promising leads struck, but none of them has turned out to be just what was wanted. For instance, they are working with one disease now that is fatal to a certain breed of field mice. But it will not touch others, and the rats laugh at it in conscious immunity. Also there are plenty of contagious animal diseases that could be turned loose on the rats, ground squirrels and rabbits, but they would kill a horse just as quickly as they would a rat, so they are not wanted.

It was some years back that the survey lost just the chance it has been looking for. Ernest Seton Thompson was up in Canada, where there was a pest of rabbits. Then he noticed that the rabbits were rapidly dying out. There was some mysterious disease carrying them off, and it was not long before the country was almost cleared of them. He realized that the disease might prove valuable and managed to catch some sick rabbits and shipped them to a laboratory in New York, but the problem was not just in the biologist's line, and he did not realize the immense importance of it, so the secret was not grasped. Now the biological survey is looking out for similar occurrences, and if the chance offers will make the most of them.

There is a field mouse disease that is harmless to domestic animals, and the survey is trying hard to make it virulent enough to do business with some of the larger pests. It promises well, but the scientists have had too many disappointments to be bragging in advance. But they are actually trying to reinforce the disease and make it worse than it has proved up to date. This is getting pretty deep into the network of germology and toxic science. It means really breeding up disease germs on somewhat the same plan that plants and animals are now bred by the department. But there is a hope that they may be able to do something with it. Anyhow, they are trying.

There have been a number of reports from abroad of the wonderful things foreign bacteriologists have succeeded in doing in the contagious diseases line for small animal pests, but though cultures have been bought abroad and tried faithfully here no results have ever been obtained. Some of the germs have proved fatal to the animals that ate them, but the same is true of any sort of poison that can be bought by the pound and spread on bread. The contagion quality has not developed yet in any of the foreign cultures tried.

The biological survey has been able to do a good deal in a practical way with the rabbit pest. Some time ago the forest service set up a howl of indignation. It had planted some hundreds of thousands of young trees, nursery stock, in one of the California forest reserves, and the rabbits ate them up in about a week. Then it seeded several hundred acres with white pine seed to restore the land after a fire, and the rabbits cheerfully set to work, dug up all the seeds and ate them. But the biologists were loaded for rabbit, so to speak, and they furnished the forest people with a harmless wash to soak their pine nuts in before planting, and with a cheap dip for the nursery stock which a self-respecting rabbit will no more nibble than will an ordinary human being smell bisulphide of carbon for a perfume.

In this the biologists confessedly took a leaf out of the book of the Piute and other desert dwelling Indians. The Piutes have been cacheing food supplies of pine and pinion nuts in the desert for hundreds of years, and they found that the rabbits, the ground squirrels and prairie dogs would clean out their cache. But they found by experience that there was a little desert weed that the ground animals disliked excessively, and that anything dipped in a tea steeped from the bark of the weed was rabbit proof for a long time thereafter. So the rabbits were checkmated on that play and the forest officers have no more trouble in the rabbit country.

But it is the very presence of the forest reserves that has bred the present plague of timber wolves in the West. There is no hunting allowed in the reserves and they form nurseries for game of all sorts. But it seems that they breed wolves quite as fast as they breed anything else, and the cattle raisers have been made painfully aware of the fact.

In the days of the buffalo on the plains there were thousands of wolves who lived off the herds. When the buffalo was killed off the wolves disappeared also, till there was not one where there used to be a thousand. Then the cattle men began to stock the ranges, and the wolves found the conditions much the same as in the buffalo days. They promptly multiplied and increased till they are now doing an immense amount of damage, aided largely by their asylum in the forest reserves.

The biological survey has sent out one of its best men to study the wolf problem, Vernon Bailey, and he has been skeeing and snowshoeing through Wyoming and Montana, while the snow was on the ground and the wolves were particularly easy to track and study. He has not done any shooting, but is trying the effects of poisons and traps. But the wolves are about as cunning as foxes, and after you have trapped a few and poisoned a few in a given district the rest grow wary, and the poisons and traps are relegated to seat twenty-three. The wolves get so crafty that they will not swallow a piece of meat without mouthing it, and if they get the bitter taste of strychnine or arsenic they will drop it and look for something else to eat. Whether or not the survey will be able to kill them off with some contagious disease is a question, but they are rapidly becoming as great a pest and far more dangerous than the smaller "varmints."—Washington Star.

Ease of Reading.

In a study of the physiological aspect of reading the curious fact has been brought out that the characteristic features of letters are found for the most part in the upper halves, so that as the reader's attention is here directed he is often able to read a line with the lower half of the letters covered. It has, accordingly, occurred to some French scientists that considerable improvements could be made in typography, working along these lines, and that increased legibility and rapidity of reading would result. Some of these suggestions have received a practical application in some European advertising signs, where legibility is a prime essential, and the results have been most satisfactory.—Harper's Weekly.

Juju Worshipers.

The Aro tribe, inhabitants of southern Nigeria, worship the "Long Juju." This is a jealously guarded circular pool of water to which sacrifices of human beings and animals are made. Each house has also its own private "Juju." The boys of this tribe, on reaching a certain age, are put through various tests of physical endurance, one of which is to run twice round the town, about four miles, without stopping.

Eighty-six per cent. of the population of Peru are negroes, half breeds, Indians and Asiatics.

Costly Photos of Fallieres.

Photographs of M. Fallieres to the value of 80,000 francs ($16,000) have been distributed throughout France at the expense of the Government. It is customary to hang a portrait of the President of the Republic in all the government offices throughout the country. Not only do the heads of the departments have the Chief Magistrate's portrait in their offices, but all the secretaries, head clerks, etc., are also so favored. The photographs, reproduced in such large numbers (life sized heads, to be sure) cost only seventy centimes, or fourteen cents each, but there are so many to be distributed that every time there is a change in the presidency it costs the Government a fortune to supply officials with pictures of the Chief Magistrate.

The Motor Heart.

A man is compelled to harden his heart while running, or riding in an automobile in the city streets, according to the latest story, or take chances of an attack of heart failure. The tendency of pedestrians, particularly of little children, to dart unexpectedly into the path of the machine gives many a heart a sudden wrench.

"Children seem to spring out of the ground," says an auto-driver. "Unless one is always keyed to the top notch, ready to swerve away from a pedestrian, there is serious danger. The result is that an auto-driver must have a specially controlled heart, if he wants to last in the business."

DEMOCRATIC MASS MEETING.

Under and by virtue of the authority conferred upon me by the Democratic Executive Committee of Chilton county, at a meeting held May 6, 1906, I hereby call a mass meeting of the people of Chilton county at Clanton, Saturday, July 21, 1906, when the following well known Democrats will address the people:

Ex-Gov. Jos. F. Johnston; Hon. Sydney J. Bowie; Hon. W. B. Craig; Hon. H. S. Doster; Hon. S. M. Adams.

The Executive Committee is hereby called to meet at Clanton, July 21, 1906.

JOHN C. DENNIS, Chm.

W. L. CAMPBELLE.

This gentleman, one of Chilton's old time citizens, announces for the office of Sheriff. Some twenty years ago Mr. Campbelle made the county a fine Sheriff and there is no doubt that if he receives the nomination and is elected he will again make an excellent officer. A thorough Democrat, he asks your support.

A NOTABLE INSTALLATION.

An interesting and spectacular ceremony, such as never before been seen in Clanton, was the installation of officers of the Clanton Chapter, R. A. M., last Thursday night at the Methodist church by Grand Secretary and Past Grand High Priest, Beauchamp, who came up from Montgomery to perform the installation.

It was five minutes past nine when the chapter marched into the sacred edifice, their magnificent apparel contrasting strangely with the civilian garb. Silently and solemnly they wended their way to the chancel, where each in turn was presented by Master of Ceremonies J. P. VanDerveer, to Secretary Beauchamp, who in a very impressive manner installed them.

The ceremony was interspersed with some fine appropriate music by the choir, and the intense stillness throughout marked the interest of the audience.

Exactly one hour was occupied by the installation, each officer as he was installed taking his seat in the chancel, their picturesque costume being greatly admired.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, the guests, numbering 240, were entertained at the Masonic hall at a banquet which was much enjoyed until nearly midnight.

Following were the officers installed:

Excellent High Priest, E. A. Matthews; King, W. H. Sartor; Scribe, W. T. Aldridge; Captain of Hosts, E. B. Deason; Principal Sojourner, J. Watts Moore; Royal Arch Captain, H. T. Pipes; Treasurer, W. I. Mullins; Secretary, A. C. Smith; Master Third Veil, J. W. Stanfield, Master Second Veil, J P. Hayes; Master First Veil, J. H. Shepherd; Sentinel, W. M. Gore.

According to report made by Postmaster Dudley for the three months ending June 30, 1906, the rural routes from the Clanton post office did the following business:

Total No. pieces of mail handled by all six routes.. ..	65,709
Total No. applications for money orders........ ..	466
Total sales of stamps by carriers.....................	$233.20
Cancellations on mail matter collected by carriers......	235 74

The banner route is No. 4, W. J. Armstong, carrier, which route did the following amount of business for the same three months:

Total pieces handled.........	15,296
No. of Money Orders..........	108
Sales of Postage...............	$57.55
Cancellations..................	56.34

The route has 103 boxes.

When F. O. Dudley assumed charge of the Clanton post office three years ago, we did not have any rural route service at all, there not then being a single route in Chilton county. On the 16th of this month we will have seven routes leading from Clanton, with

Total length of service....	162 miles
Number of houses served......	804
Population served..............	3436

The gross receipts of the Clanton post office for the past three months were $300 more than the same three months last year.

Revival services will be held here Sunday morning, July 15, at Mt. Carmel, Adams Station, and the week following a meeting will begin at Sardis.

Verbena, July

Editor Banner—Since my last communication I have been especially favored in various ways, one of which is to be informed that my political enemies are telling lot of tales on me. They may or may not be true, suffice it to say, each accusation is a fine advertisement, besides it wakes up the man of pluck, gives him renewed energy, furnishes him food for thought and brings his resources to the surface. I want to add in this connection that if the fellow wants it well told if he will ask me, I can beat the other fellow telling it, at least I can tell it to better subserve my own purpose. Now, for the social feature; will say on June 26 I went to Jemison to the Masonic celebration; got lots to eat and that of the best; met lot old friends I had not seen in twenty five years; saw an unusually large number of fine looking ladies which caused me to offer Peyt Wilson a proposition which he has under advisement. See him for his version of the matter. Then on the 1st inst. Verbena and the surrounding country turned out in solid mass to do honor to the new Methodist church, recently built by the good people just west of Verbena. There we had an "All day dinner and singing on the ground," interspersed with or by a real big old fasioned, good "Scotch Irish" country sermon, which had the ring of true religion. At this gathering we had the "Good looker" in profusion, including the lass, young maid, old, maid, young widows and good looking old married women, and from each viewpoint I will say that it was truly a success. The forerunner of this church is Rev. B. F. Messer, late of Coosa county, and is one of the descendants of the late Rev. Ezekiel Messer of Coosa county, and of whom many ex-Coosa county people, now in Chilton, can attest their religious characteristics and many other good qualities.

On the 4th inst. there had been sent out by the force of W. W. Wadsworth, president Wadsworth Lumber Co. of Rushton, invitations to attend the annual picnic and barbecue at Rushton, in response to which the whole earth, it seemed, sent forth its varied specimens of living, and if you will excuse me, I will say hungry humanity. The trip was pleasant over the Cooper and Coosa River Great Eastern railroad, it being under the direct management and control of one of the truly wonderful men of middle Alabama, viz.: That resourceful and original character, W. W. Wadsworth.

On arrival at Rushton the crowd was found to be immense, platform large, good string band and a free for all dance, and in the general mixup your "Uncle Snap" swung the calico to a queen's taste. Don't let this get out, you hear?

At the proper hour we all left for our respective homes, after having passed one of the most enjoyable days of our lives; having had good riding, good eating and drinking, also good looking and talking. I want to say in the latter case I, myself, was not so fortunate as I heard one candidate who was there say he was, viz.: That he was trying to find someone who would say he would not vote for him. On the contrary I find them occasionally and sometimes unoccasionally who say right out, "I will not vote for you nor any other Democrat." I tell them this is all a mistake and in some cases I am able to convince them. In others, it is a case like the fellow who bet the other he could show him 500 rats run out of a hole in the corner of his crib. So he placed his man near the hole and he went 'round to scare out the rats. After he had done so, with the response that he had "Not seen a rat yet," he went 'round to find his man on his knees near the hole with his eyes shut hard and fast, when No. 1 said to No. 2 that the thought had just occurred to him that the hardest man to make see on earth is the one who just will not see. But after all, we have a good county and State, with good people, and I believe all will go well in the end.

CLEARS UP THE COMPLEXION.

Florence Drug Co. say Laxakola Tonic Tablets Work Wonders for the Skin.

It is hard to tell just why these little tablets have become so popular with Clanton ladies, but considering the short time they have been advertised, the demand for them has been cause for wonder. They are no difference in appearance from other laxative tablets, but they really must posess unusual merit, for from own personal observation we know that they always do just what is expected of them.

Their action upon the skin and complexion is remarkable, for the principal ingredient in them is extracts of dandelion, and your own doctor will tell you that dandelion is one of the greatest skin alteratives known to the profession.

If your bowels are inactive, your skin sallow, your tongue coated, your breath foul, and if you are troubled with pimples, bilious spells and sick headache, a 25 cent package of Laxakola Tonic Tablets will clear up your complexion, tone up your liver, encourage the action of your bowels and make you sweet, clean and healthy, inside and out, or Florence Drug co. will gladly pay back your money.

AN INTERESTING STATEMENT.

Florence Drug Co. Say They Have at Last Discovered a Positive Cure for Indigestion.

"For years," said a member of the above drug firm, "we have been waiting for some one to discover a remedy that really will cure dyspepsia.

"We recently learned that a new remedy, Pepsikola Tablets, had been placed on the market, an on investigation we found that at last there is a remedy that surely will cure.

"We laid in a big supply because we knew that as soon as the people began to know about this remarkable remedy there would be a big demand for it, and it is selling beyond our expectations."

It is not often a druggist sells a new remedy on a positive guarantee, but unless cured of nervousness, dizzy spells, sour stomach, coated tongue, palpitation and other symptoms of dyspepsia. Florence Drug co. will hand back your money cheerfully and without argument.

No one should hesitate on trying a 25 cent box of Pepsikola Tablets, as they will not cost you a penny should they fail to relieve and cure the very worst case of indigestion and dyspepsia.

A watchman's neglect permitted a leak in the great North Sea dyke, which a child's finger could have stopped, to become a ruinous break, devastating an entire province of Holland. In like manner Kenneth McIver, of Vanceboro, Me., permitted a little cold to go unnoticed until a tragic finish was only averted by Dr. King's New Discovery. He writes: "Three doctors gave me up to die of lung inflamation, caused by a neglected cold; but Dr. King's New Discovery saved my life." Now is the time to give your house a new coat of paint, and we have the paint that will wear well and please you.

Our Sun Proof has proven to be what we claim for it, a thoroughly good paint. The handsome school house in Clanton is painted with it; the new two-story hotel belonging to Mr. W. M. Wilson, will be an attractive building indeed when Mr. R. J. Lake finishes it with a few coats of Sun Proof Paint. The Capitol of Alabama is also painted with Sun Proof, just recently finished, and if this paint was not good it would not be used on the above buildings.

The old reliable Hammar Paint is too well known throughout the county to need further praise, has been sold in Clanton eight or ten years. So let us furnish you the paint you may need from time to time, will appreciate your trade.

FIRE.

Some time ago, I said in an article published in the Banner, regarding the San Francisco fire, that I would give detailed estimate of the losses there by my companies as soon as final settlement could be made, and while as yet the adjustment is not entirely over, yet we are able to approximately estimate our losses. The Liverpool & London & Globe will lose $4,248,000, all of which will be paid from the home office in England, without using any of their United States assets. This will make over $100,000,000 paid to policy-holders in the United States by this company. My other three companies' losses, towit: The London & Lancashire, the Phenix of Brooklyn and the Atlanta-Birmingham are in proportion; all has, and will be paid without shocking their assets in the least.

POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS.

GREAT BRITAIN'S ADMIRABLE AND EXTENSIVE SYSTEM.

Develops Nation's Thrift—Money Deposited at One Office May Be Withdrawn at Any Other in the Kingdom With But Little Formality.

Great Britain's Post Office Savings Banks, which rose in 1865, had for their purpose the fostering and encouragement of thrift among the poorer classes by furnishing a governmental depository that would be within reach of all, and that would offer perfect security for the largest as well as the smallest sum. Two hundred million pounds sterling or $1,000,000,000, today represent the amount invested in these public institutions of Great Britain and Ireland.

The disastrous failure of several banks in the middle of the nineteenth century stirred up public indignation, and the Post Office Savings Banks was the solution of a persistent problem that worried poor and rich alike. These hundred offices represented the start, and on the first day 435 people of the working class deposited in all one thousand pounds.

From the beginning the success of the institution was assured because the government saw the importance of extending the system to villages and sparsely settled districts. Primarily the advantage to the masses as a whole lay in the fact that the Post Office Savings Banks gave any person the power of making a deposit or taking out money in any part of the country in which he might happen to be at the time without reference to the place where his account was originally opened.

The success of the governmental venture induced the authorities to encourage the working classes to make provision for their old age and for the support of their families. As far back as 1864 an act was passed to afford facilities for the purchase of small governmental annuties and for assuring payments of money on death.

Great Britain opened the Naval Savings Bank as a Post Office department in 1871, for the benefit of the sailors on board its warships. It was well-patronized from the start.

Penny banks followed, and school banks came as a matter of course, finding the children eager to start an account in their own names.

Today there are 14,362 post office savings banks in the United Kingdom, with 9,403,852 depositors, and a sum of 146,135,157 pounds to the credit of the department. Taking the population of Great Britain and Ireland at 40,000,000, it proves that one person in every 4½ has deposits, and that the average amount per person is fifteen pounds, ten shillings and ten pence. Every class is represented among the depositors; and the fisherman often elbows the clerk at the post office.

The advantage to the public: First, the absolute security from loss; second, the convenience of making deposits; third, the ease of repayment, which is not affected by change of residence; fourth, safety against personation and fraud; fifth, the prevention of poverty by the development of thrift; sixth, the ready means where no other banks exist, of a safe deposit; seventh, the education of the young and untrained to the knowledge of the use and management of money; eighth, the tendency to discourage reckless and speculative expenditures.

The advantages to the country itself group themselves under seven headings: First, the people receive the profits as interest on their savings when these are used as a public investment; second, the country's wealth is kept growing within itself; third, by the wide distribution of these savings, money can promptly reach points needing it suddenly from local causes; fourth, in remote places stringency from too limited banking facilities is prevented or lessened; fifth, the laboring people feel a direct personal interest in the stability of the country; sixth, sectionalism among the less intelligent classes is lessened by continual and close touch with a common financial institution; seventh, by special investment the people's savings may be made the foundation of securities for financial institutions, or loans for municipal improvements, or special national undertakings.

Italy, Holland and all the colonies of the British Empire now have these banks.

A NEW ISTHMIAN RAILROAD.

Mexico to Shorten the Route Many Miles.

Mexico is about to take a twelve-hundred-mile "kink" out of the line of international commerce which has been using the Panama route. At the same time it will give the American trans-continental railroads a tremendous shock by opening a new short route from the Atlantic to the Pacific which they cannot control. By the end of the year the new railroad across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec is to be opened to interoceanic traffic on a large scale. The railroad has been completed for some time and is in operation for local traffic. It is only awaiting the completion of its terminal ports to begin handling ocean freight. These ports though they will not be fully completed in less than two or three years, will soon be sufficiently advanced to be used by vessels of any size.

The railroad, being six hundred miles north of the Panama Railroad, is that distance nearer the natural line of the world's east and west commerce. It will bring New York and North Atlantic ports twelve hundred miles, and New Orleans and Gulf ports fourteen hundred miles, nearer to San Francisco, Japan and China. The sailing time from New York to Coatzacoalcos, the Atlantic terminal port, will be six or seven days, two days less than to Colon, the Atlantic Port of the Panama railroad. Cargo from a vessel landing at Coatzacoalcos, say of 10,000 tons, can be aboard another vessel in the harbor of Salina Cruz, in four or five days. In an emergency the trans-shipment could be accomplished in thirty-six hours. The same freight could not be transferred across the Isthmus of Panama in less than three weeks, possibly longer. At Salina Cruz, the Pacific port, the vessel is two days nearer San Francisco than it would be at Panama. This serves to illustrate what the new route means in saving time.—World's Work.

OUT IN OKLAHOMA.

Wide Land Under Vast Skies Where Flowers Tempt and Tornadoes Threaten.

Oklahoma is beautiful, with a beauty all its own. Here and there, in fissures between the swells, brooks run, red like wounds, or clear and gyppy. Above them cottonwoods bend.

But, for the most part, says Harper's Bazaar, the land curves, trembling, to a treeless horizon. The plains are never still. They move as constantly as rippling water.

In the unbroken country shin oak, mingled with buffalo grass, shakes and rustles under the thousand handed urgence of the wind. Shin oaks are baby oak trees, as high as your shin, burned off every year by the prairie fires, and thus never attaining full growth. Their leaves dance glossily all the time, playing with the sunshine or the shadows.

It is a hurrying sky, a restless sky, piling its clouds in strange masses; spitting out rainstorms; thundering in the east while yet it smiles in the west; shot with lightning; hazed by dust storms; vast—unbelievably vast! Every one watches it, as sailors watch at sea; for every now and then its endless changes pile up the dread cyclone funnel, and no one, on pain of his life, must miss that warning.

The resemblance to the ocean grows upon one as one looks. The little houses pitch about on the great swells helpless and unstable as boats. Others, dug into the earth, venturing only a few feet above ground, show like loaded schooners stripped of sails, setting deep in green water. And the houses are as far apart as boats out at sea.

Shinney and grass are set thick with the most beautiful wild flowers The sensitive rose, its stem guarded by fine little prickers to prevent handling, shrinks at a blow, but if left undisturbed, creeps along the ground and holds out lilac colored soft balls full of rosy fragrance. Like a permanent morning-glory is the bloom of the sturdy man-in-the-ground, a small plant with a big root almost like a man's body. Some of the people call it deadman.

Dearest of all to the Oklahoma woman the pink daisied snake root bows a frequent and friendly head. Through the hard days now passing many a family escaped starvation because of the presence of this valuable herb. Women and children dug it all through the long blowing days, selling the roots for 50 cents a pound to wholesale pharmacies.

Snake root is said to contain the most powerful known antidote to various poisons and to be especially noticeable in that, unlike most antidotes, it is not a poison in itself. The supply is continually insufficient for the demand, and as nobody is cultivating the plant the discrepancy is likely to grow greater.

Snake root may soon be as rare as buffalo. Yet, by commercial jugglery, no sooner had the business of digging the roots begun to be systematized than the price was forced down to 10 cents a pound, and now a woman has to be badly in need before she will hunt snake root.

TAKING OXYGEN FROM AIR.

Interesting Experiments Witnessed by French Savants.

Consul Brunot of St. Etienne writes that a group of savants of the Academie des Sciences, Paris, very recently paid a visit to a factory at Boulogne-sur-Seine to witness the manufacture for industrial purposes of enormous quantities of oxygen and nitrogen, extracted in a liquid state from the atmospheric air. The Consul says:

"Georges Claude, the inventor of the interesting process, furnished the explanations. As the liquid oxygen flowed out from the generator it was of a bluish hue, while the nitrogen was colorless. Several experiments were made for the visitors to prove the importance of having an abundant supply of oxygen at one's disposal; a forge set up in the grounds showed the wonderful effects of the gas. The fire which had almost died out, was immediately rendered incandescent by a current of hydroxide from the blowpipe. A bar of iron was brought to a red heat and then melted like lead. Two pieces of iron were welded in a few minutes by the aid of a powerful flame from the blowpipe. Much costly and tedious riveting will be no longer necessary; iron will be welded against iron, copper against copper, etc. The doctors already foresee the possible treatment with liquid air of certain affections of microbian origin, such as osteomyelitis, anthrax and the malignant disease of the skin termed lupus."—Washington Post.

WORLDS LATEN TENERGY.

POWER THAT MIGHT SERVE SHOULD FUEL GIVE OUT.

Use of the Winds and Waves—Five Principal Water-Power Regions in This Country—Sun May Be a Future Source of Supply.

The possible exhaustion of the world's fuel supply in the near future has brought to the front the question of what natural sources of energy may be relied upon when this stage is reached. Already water-power, wind-power, tidal-power, and solar energy are being utilized on a large scale in many ways; but of these, the most reliable source of power in the United States is the water-fall.

There are five principal water-power regions in our country. Mention must be first made of the New England area, which is most developed and has natural advantages in lakes, capable of large storage—a situation almost exacted by the heavy rainfall of forty inches per annum.

The Appalachian power area, as yet but slightly developed, is a region of heavy rainfall exceeding fifty inches per annum, and is rich in streams. But there are no lakes to store power, and artificial means only are within reach. Hydraulic enterprise, however, is made possible by the great slope of the area toward the sea.

The Great Lake region is not very promising unless artificial daming is resorted to; but the tendency is to reduce the lake level by canals, and no water-head of any magnitude can be depended upon.

The fourth region is the Rocky Mountain area, which contains some great power districts. Near Great Salt Lake the head is unusually high, and has allowed for special power development.

Finally, there is the Pacific Coast area lying along the Sierras—running north and south—and already the seat of great industrial establishments utilizing the high water heads. It has played an enormous part in electrical power development, although the storage of water was an artificial process.

In discussing water-power it is to be hoped that at 1.1 horse-power per acre-foot of stored water under an effective head of 500 feet, a 1000 acre-pond, stored 10 feet deep would produce 5,5000,000 horse-power, or would run a 200-kilowatt electrical station. In a district of fifty inches per annum, rainfall—as in the Appalachian district—if the water could be properly handled, it would only require 5000 acres of water shed to keep a 1000 acre-pond full.

Tidal power is to be considered as a possible extensive source of energy and at present there are tidal mills at favorable spots along the coast. The problem here is mainly the effective storage of the power.

Wave motors have been occasionally used, but the power is irregular and obtainable only on a small scale.

Wind-power, from its general distribution, is a far more valuable source of energy than tides or waves. The chief objection to it lies in the uncertainty of the amount, and the variable speed of the motor. The average velocity of the wind is low, being in most places from five to ten miles per hour, corresponding to a wind pressure of two to eight ounces per square foot, a quantity of little value in motor operation. Where-however, the velocity approaches fifteen miles per hour, power generation will repay the installation of machinery.

Eliminating the winds, the chief available source of energy on a large scale other than hydraulic is solar radiation. Its full mechanical equivalent is something like 10,000 horse-power per acre of surface exposed to the perpendicular rays of the sun. Outside of the temperate regions, where a low sun excludes this utilization of power, there are extensive areas where light rainfall and meagre hydraulic resources are compensated for by strong sunshine; and the whole arid district of the West is a region of 80 per cent. sunshine, and is wonderfully fertile when irrigated.

The plan for transforming this energy is to build a mirror to heat a boiler, and it is a parabolic structure of plane rectangles so disposed that each throws the solar image fairly upon the boiler. The heating is at short range, and the apparatus is in form something like a huge umbrella with silvered glasses on the inside and a boiler (the very short handle), turned always towards the sun. The reflector, therefore, is carried on a polar axis, about which it is automatically turned so as to follow the sun.

Motors of this sort are not expensive, and are made up to fifteen horse-power output from the attached steam engine; beyond this size it is unwieldly. It is also capable of use for small power purposes. If necessary, a group could be coupled electrically, so as to furnish power on a somewhat larger scale. It is really a steam plant, with the sun for the furnace; and the fuel bill is eliminated.—Philadelphia Record.

HYDROPHOBIA IS REAL.

Dreaded Disease Not a Mere Product of Imagination.

That the so-called hydrophobia is not a mythical malady, but a terrible disease resulting in cases where persons are bitten by animals afflicted with rabies, was the contention of Dr. M. P. Ravenel at the recent annual meeting of the State Veterinary Medical Association. Dr. Ravenel supported his assertions with proof furnished by his personal study of the disease as bacteriologist of the State Veterinary Board and the researches and conclusions of high scientific authorities abroad.

The medical world has been at loggerheads for years on this subject, and some very prominent physicians have not only been skeptical on the point of hydrophobia, but have even scouted the idea of such a disease as rabies being prevalent among animals. According to Dr. Ravenel, science has established beyond a doubt that rabies does exist, and further that it is transmissal from all animals to man and from man to animals.

Thus a human being bitten by a rabid animal may develop the disease known as hydrophobia, and in turn could transmit it to another person or an animal in the same manner as it was acquired. The statistics presented by Dr. Ravenel showed that 16 per cent. of all the persons bitten develop the disease. According to his observations, which are confirmed by the studies of other scientists, cat bites are more liable to innoculate persons than dog bites. There are fewer cat bites recorded, however, and the dog is regarded as the great propegator of the dreadful malady.

"The bite of the wolf," Dr. Ravenel said, " is much more virulent than that of the dog, because of the method of attack. A wolf leaps for the throat or face, where there are the greatest number of nerve ends and lymphatic glands, which are the most favorable centres for the development of the disease. Fortunately in this country there is rarely such a thing as a wolf bite, but in Eastern Europe practically in Russia, a great many persons are victims of the rabid brutes. It is the bites about the face or head that are most dangerous."

Dr. Ravenel than cited the case of a prominent New York physician, Dr. H. P. Loomis, who lost his son because of his skepticism, which led him to ignore precautionary measures when the young man was bitten by a rabid dog. He stated that the disease might require 40 days for development, but sometimes it developed in 20 days or thereabouts.

"When I studied it aboard at the Pasteur Institute there had been 360 transmissions of the disease from one animal to another, which certainly did not confirm the theory that rabies is an imaginary disease," Dr. Ravenel declared.

He stated that the Pasteur treatment was effective and harmless and that improved methods of diagnosis made it possible to accurately determine within 24 to 36 hours whether an animal that had bitten a person was suffering with rabies. Dr. Ravenel asserted that only an animal afflicted with rabies could transmit the disease.—Philadelphia Record.

OUR WOMEN MERE DOLLS.

Skillfully Wound Up to Entertain Husbands, Says French Critic.

The American woman is a delicious doll, skillfully wound up. She is trained to attract the husband she often merely entertains, and her brilliant appearance frequently disguises an absolutely superficial education. Her husband is happy if he finds in her no secret leaning toward strong waters."

This is the impression with which the distinguished Frenchman, Georges Moreau, returning from a sojourn in the United States, has favored his countrymen. Apparently completely disillusioned, he has written a scathing treatise on "the land of the free."

Moreau declares that the Americans have formed a sort of conspiracy to blind the eyes of the tourist. The stranger, he says, is scarcely landed before he is sought out by opulent magnates, who overwhelm him with invitations to entertainments of such a lavish splendor as to make his head swim. Everywhere he sees only wealth and luxury and is given no opportunity to study the reality. His only resource is to go away charmed. The memory that remains to him is like a golden dream.

On this second visit, he declares, his eyes were opened. He discovered that the scenery of the United States cannot hold a candle to that of France; that the much-vaunted American trains do not make as quick time as those on the French railroads, and that even the stupendous bridges, whose bold outlines have so astounded Europeans, are essentially lacking in solidity and inimical to safety.

Industrial life in America Moreau regards as slipshod. There is no steady advance. Progress goes by leaps and bounds. In all lines speed is the great demand, and this desire for rapidity cuts out every consideration. All elegance is sacrificed to it, and industry has no kinship with art. It is the standard of the commonplace.

As to the homes, the French writer admits that many express taste, and their sumptuous fittings are often well chosen. He expends some satire on the millionaire art collectors, who, he says, proudly display picture galleries superior to famous European museums, but, he adds, it is their agents who have bought the masterpieces, and the owners rarely have looked at the marvel of human genius that hang upon their walls.

Liberty, in some States, Moreau concludes, is merely a word.- Their

To Avert a War.

Washington, D. C.—The state department has been notified through a cablegram from American Minister Combs, dater at Guatemala City, that efforts are being made to prevent hostilities between Guatemala and Salvador, as a result of an alleged breach of neutrality by Salvador during the progress of the insurrection which has just failed. Mr. Combs says that Senor Pacus, a special envoy appointed by the president of Salvador, is already on his way to this city, and he (Mr. Combs) is about to leave immediately for Washington to confer here with Senor Pacus and the officials of the state department and endeavor by negotiation to bring about a peaceful settlement of the difficulty.

Meantime the government of Guatemala has agreed to suspend preparations for war with Salvador pending the conclusion of the peace conference at Washington.

The state department was advised by a cablegram from American Minister Merry that he had arrived at San Salvador, and is endeavoring to make arrangements there for an agreement between Guatemala and Salvador.

COMPLETEST BUSINESS BUILDING

Features of W. L. Douglas' Administration and Jobbing House.

The dedication of the new administration and jobbing house building erected at Brockton, Mass., by the W. L. Douglas Shoe Co. as a part of its mammoth manufacturing plant at Montello was marked by the thoroughness and attention to detail characteristic of the firm in all its undertakings. As the new building is said to be the most complete and convenient of any ever built for a commercial house in the United States, so were the expressions of appreciation by the many persons who visited it for inspection sincere and of a highly congratulatory nature.

The dedicatory program included open house from 11 a. m. to 8 p. m. with concert by the Mace Gay orchestra and the presence of a Boston caterer to attend to the wishes of all. The building itself afforded a feast for the eye, especially the offices, which are marvels in many ways. Fifteen thousand invitations were sent out, including over 11,000 to the retail dealers in the United States, who handle the W. L. Douglas Co. shoes, the others going to shoe manufacturers and all allied industries in Brockton and vicinity. Mr. Douglas will be glad to have anybody who is interested call

The new building is situated just north of the No. 1 factory on Spark street, facing the Montello railroad station. Its completion marks the establishment of a modern up-to-date wholesale jobbing house and office building. Mr. Douglas has long considered the advisabilty of a jobbing house, not only for the purpose of supplying his own retail stores more readily, but that the 11,000 dealers throughout the United States handling the W. L. Douglas shoe might be able to obtain shoes for immediate use with greater facility.

Under the present system all shoes are manufactured to order, and customers sometimes lose sales waiting for shoes to arrive. With the new jobbing house they will be enabled to have their hurry orders shipped the same day they are received, which will be far more satisfactory to the customer and will result in a largely-increased business to the W. L. Douglas Shoe Co.

The new building is 260 feet long and 60 feet wide and two stories in height. The jobbing department will occupy the entire lower floor, while the offices will occupy the second floor.

Leaving the new jobbing house on the first floor, the main staircase ascends to the second floor level in two divisions separating on the first landing and meeting again upon the fourth, where the large Palladian window is situated, which appears over the entrance.

At the head of the staircase in the mosaic floor appears the word "Atrium," the name of the inner hall, planned and decorated after the manner of the central apartment of the Pompeian house. This room is directly in the center of the main building, being 20x68 and 16 feet in height, and is lighted by three large ceiling skylights of classic design.

Around the atrium are placed the private offices, where the heads of the departments are located, with their assistants. Beginning at the right of the main entrance, in order, are those of the C. F. Richmond, buyer; H. T. Drake, general superintendent; Hon. W. L. Douglas, president; and H. L. Tinkham, treasurer. They are finished and furnished in mahogany and are ensuite. Mr. Douglas' own room occupies the southwest corner of the building, and is a very handsome apartment. To the left of these comes the room of C. D. Nevins, assistant treasurer, Mrs. Marion Shields, correspondence clerk, and the store department.

On the east of the atrium and opening into this hall are two alcoves separated by mahogany counters, the fronts of which are plate glass and grilles of bronze. These are the offices of Warren Weeks, paymaster, and Harry L. Thompson, the bookkeeper.

The next in order to the left are two rooms devoted to the credit department, one the private office of A. T. Sweetser and the other occupied by his clerks. The next two offices are those of F. L. Erskine, advertising manager, and his assistants.

The three other rooms completing the outer wall line of the atrium are the reception room to the left of the staircase hall, directors' room and lavatory and the sample room. Here are located the telegraph instruments, telephone switchboard and booths for use of guests.

The directors' room is a fine chamber occupying the space in the northwest corner of the building. This room is finished and furnished in mahogany and all appointments are in keeping. Here hangs a portrait in oil of Mr. Douglas, the president. The last room in this series is the sample room, also in mahogany.

On center with the entrance and between the bookkeeper's alcove and the credit department is a hall leading to the general bookkeeping room, where is located the host of clerks which this huge business employs.

Value of Lightning Flash.

A German scientist, after several years spent in experiments, has calculated the value of a flash of lightning in electric current at $1,400.

Demand for the Bible.

The sale of the Bible increases with wonderful rapidity. During the year ending March, 1906, nearly 6,000,000 copies of the scriptures were circulated by the British and Foreign Bible Society, which exceeded the society's previous highest output by 33,000 copies. This is the more remarkable in the face of the disturbed conditions which have prevailed in Russia, China and Japan, where some of the society's heaviest sales take place. The polyglot nature of the Bible society's work is instanced in the fact that at Winnipeg, for example, the scriptures were supplied in forty-three different languages, while at Johannesburg versions in fifty-two languages were sold at the depot in that city, and a fifty-third was asked for by a newcomer, who demanded a Bible in Icelandic, which the agent had not in stock. During the past year eleven new languages have been added to the society's list of versions.

Tree 6,200 Years Old.

The distinction of being the oldest living thing undoubtedly belongs to one of the giant trees, and many attempts to locate it and determine its age have been made. A century ago De Condolle found two yews—one at Fortingal, in Perthshire, and one at Hedsor, in Bucks—that were estimated to be respectively 2,500 and 3,240 years old. Both are still flourishing, and the older tree has a trunk twenty-seven feet in circumference. A gigantic boabob in Central America, with a trunk twenty-nine feet through, was thought by Humboldt to be not less than 5,150 years old. Mexican botanists believe that they have discovered a life-span even greater than this, and from the annual rings in a cypress of Chepultepec, whose trunk is 118 feet in circumference, as assigned an age of about 6,200 years.

Origin of Italics.

Italic letters were first used about the year 1500 by Aldus Manutinus, a Venetian printer. He observed the many inconveniences resulting from the vast number of abbreviations which were then so frequent among the printers that a book was difficult to understand. A treatise was actually written on the art of reading a printed book and thus addressed to the learned. By introducing the italic letter he contrived an expedient by which these abbreviations might be entirely got rid of and yet books suffered little increase in bulk. He dedicated his invention to the Italian states; hence the name. It has also been distinguished by the name of the inventor and called the Aldine. The first book printed in italics was an edition of "Virgil," printed at Venice by Aldus in 1501.

The glass lens has been brought to a diameter of about five feet for astronomical purposes, but when of such size the cost is tens of thousands of dollars and several years of time. The Hungarian chemist who has at last made a successful fluid lens claims that it equals the glass product in performance. It consists of two curved plates of thin and and unusually hard glass, between which is hermetically sealed the fluid substance, and the refractive power and other properties are so adjusted that the usual defects of lenses are overcome. Time and temperature do not affect the fluid, while the contraction and expansion are practically the same as those of the enclosing glass. A ten-inch lens that has hitherto cost about $2,000 can be made by the new process for $40 or less. The saving is even greater with larger sizes, and it is believed that, instead of having reached the highest possible limits, lenses can now be made three times as large as any yet produced.

He has a fine palace in Brussels, but when within his own domains he prefers to spend his tme in the country. His majesty is the richest monarch in Europe so far as real estate is concerned.

AGGRAVATING ECZEMA.

Troubled Badly For Several Years With Eczema on Limbs—Another Wonderful Cure by Cuticura.

"For several years I was troubled badly with an eczema on my limbs and wrists. Physicians in several towns had prescribed for me without giving me any results. I had often used Cuticura Ointment and received relief temporarily. In the spring of 1904 I took the Cuticura Resolvent Pills and used the Cuticura Ointment for about five weeks, and at the end of that time there was not a blotch on me anywhere. This spring I took a few vials of the Cuticura Resolvent Pills as a precautionary measure, and will continue to do so every spring simply as a spring tonic, as they are so easy to carry with you, and they certainly fix your blood for the ensuing year. I now use only Cuticura Soap. The Cuticura Ointment and Pills certainly cured me of an aggravated case of eczema. St. Clair McVicar, San Antonio, Texas, July 6, 1905."

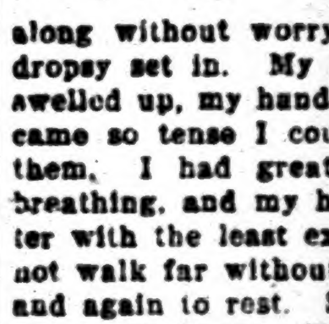
BLOATED WITH DROPSY.

The Heart Was Badly Affected When the Patient Began Using Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. Elizabeth Maxwell, of 415 West Fourth St., Olympia, Wash., says: "For over three years I suffered with a dropsical condition without being aware that it was due to kidney trouble. The early stages were principally backache and bearing down pain, but I went along without worrying much until dropsy set in. My feet and ankles swelled up, my hands puffed and became so tense I could hardly close them. I had great difficulty in breathing, and my heart would flutter with the least exertion. I could not walk far without stopping again and again to rest. Since using four boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills the bloating has gone down and the feelings of distress have disappeared."



Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

The province of Quebec, Canada, has a new license law respecting nonresident commercial travelers employed by persons having no place of business in Canada. Under this law a commercial traveler doing business in that province must pay from $100 to $400 per annum license. The tax is not a popular one, even in Canada, but there is no immediate prospect of its abrogation.

Exportation of Manufactures.

The rapid growth in the exportation of manufactures is shown in the fact that the February exports in 1906 were nearly three times as great as those of 1896 and $7,000,000 greater than those of February, 1905.

OPERATION AVOIDED

EXPERIENCE OF MISS MERKLEY

She Was Told That an Operation Was Inevitable. How She Escaped It.

When a physician tells a woman suffering with serious feminine trouble that an operation is necessary, the very thought of the knife and the operating table strikes terror to her heart, and our hospitals are full of women coming for just such operations.

Miss Margret Merkley

There are cases where an operation is the only resource, but when one considers the great number of cases of menacing female troubles cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after physicians have advised operations, no woman should submit to one without first trying the Vegetable Compound and writing Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for advice, which is free.

Miss Margret Merkley, of 375 Third Street, Milwaukee, Wis., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:

"Loss of strength, extreme nervousness, shooting pains through the pelvic organs, bearing down pains and cramps compelled me to seek medical advice. The doctor, after making an examination, said I had a female trouble and ulceration and advised an operation. To this I strongly objected and decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The ulceration quickly healed, all the bad symptoms disappeared and I am once more strong, vigorous and well."

Female troubles are steadily on the increase among women. If the monthly periods are very painful, or too frequent and excessive—if you have pain or swelling low down in the left side, bearing-down pains, don't neglect yourself try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

CAPUDINE CURES INDIGESTION and ACIDITY
It acts immediately—you feel its effects in 10 minutes. You don't have to wait a week to know its good. It cures HEADACHES ALSO by removing the cause. 10 cents.

Rate of Veterans' Death.

Veterans of the civil war are dying now at the rate of 10 a day, according to the records of the United States pension office. The monthly reports for several months past have shown the death rate among the old soldiers to be in the neighborhood of 3,000 a month. Pension office officials who have watched the figures closely and know the tendency of the death rate are of the opinion that the number of civil war pensioners has reached the maximum and that hereafter each succeeding month will show a decrease.

YOU CANNOT
all inflamed, ulcerated and catarrhal conditions of the mucous membrane such as nasal catarrh, uterine catarrh caused by feminine ills, sore throat, sore mouth or inflamed eyes by simply dosing the stomach.
But you surely can cure these stubborn affections by local treatment with Paxtine Toilet Antiseptic which destroys the disease germs, checks discharges, stops pain, and heals the inflammation and soreness.
Paxtine represents the most successful local treatment for feminine ills ever produced. Thousands of women testify to this fact. 50 cents at druggists.

MAKE MONEY.

Here is an interesting study: Make out a list of all the people you know, and estimate the amount of money each one earns in a year. Total it up. The amount will be surprisingly large. Now, of all those people, only the few who SAVE SOMETHING really MAKE anything at all. Simply earning money isn't making it; what slips through the earner's fingers is finally "made" by somebody else. Don't forget to count yourself in on the list, and if you are not "making" money, begin now to save with us. One dollar will open your bank account.

Clanton, July 16, 1906

Editor Banner—I want to express my feelings towards the patrons of my mail route, and especially those that I will have to transfer to another route, for they are certainly a good lot of people, and some of whom have been extra nice to me. It is a pleasure to serve them. The rural service is a great service, it brings the farmer (the backbone of the world) in touch with the great business world and enlightens the home and makes happy hours out of dreary ones, and I will be glad when the farmers will all take a good daily paper. I can't see for my life why the country people don't take more interest in the rural service than they do. Every person living on a route ought to have a box erected and in such a way that the carrier could serve it without dismounting from his vehicle. And then it is the duty of every patron to keep postage on hand and buy it from your carrier so as to help him on his report at the end of the month, and for the Lord's sake do away with the penny business; and the post office department rules that no carrier shall carry anything that is mailable without the proper amount of postage. I write this that my patrons may understand my position and not ask me to do so any more and be refused. And we can't sell postage on credit, either.

Now, I positively will not violate these rules any longer, for the more I do it the more I will be asked to, and it is treating the department wrong, and I might, and ought to lose my job, sooner or later.

Now, a word about the roads and I will ring off. There is a part of my road that is not kept up very well, some of which is not public, and the neighbors ought to work these roads, and there are public roads that are not kept up as they should be, and now let me insist that they be looked after at once, as it is best to work roads in the summer.

I am now closing out my entire line of Spring and Summer Shoes regardless of cost. Come one and all and I will please you in price and quality. J. W. SMITH.

Editor Banner: Well the 16th inst. is nearly here and the new mail route No 7, will soon start. There will be many a glad person on account of the conveniences that the new route will bring. But every sweet has a bitter, and the bitter in this is that we will miss the every-day visit of our old carrier, Mr. Charlie Swint, who has endeared himself to every one in this part by his kind words and cheerful smiles which he is ever ready to bestow upon all whom he meets. Everybody likes Charley, he is such a nice, polite, congenial fellow, always has a pleasant word for all, and especially for the children, and if you want to find a man with a true heart, you can test him by the way he treats the little ones. Christ said suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for Christ loved little children, and every true-hearted man has a tender place in his heart for children.

I hope the new carrier on route 7 will feel at home with us, for as far as our acquaintance goes with him, we like him alright and we feel sure that he will like us. If so, we will doubtless pass many pleasant moments together in the future.

Summerfield, Ala., July 14, '06

Editor Banner—Please allow me space in the dear old Banner to say a few words from this lovely little town of Summerfield. I gave up my dear old home in Chilton to make my future home here in Dallas. So I will tell my Chilton friends that I still love them and especially the dear old Banner.

Well, they have fine crops here, corn and cotton are just fine; plenty of fruit and watermelons.

This is a very quiet oldtime town. The beauty of the place is the Orphans' Home; there are 95 or a 100 children here and they keep coming in every week. I wish everyone could visit the Orphanage, then I think there would not be so many but what would throw in liberally to the Orphans' Home. There is so much money spent foolishly that could be put into so much better use, for bread cast upon the waters shall be gathered many days hence. I will close with much love to all Chilton friends

ON U. S. SUPREME BENCH.

Question of Secretary Taft's Appointment.

Washington, D. C.—In answer to a direct question as to whether or not he intended to visit the Philippine Islands next spring, and if so, whether that decision might be taken as an indication that he intended to decline the offer of a place on the supreme bench, Secretary Taft said that he had received an invitation from the Filipinos to be present at the opening of the first native assembly next June. So far he had not come to any decision, but it might be stated stated that, whether he accepted the invitation or not, that decision would have no effect whatever upon his political or judicial future. In other words, he might, as a justice, visit the islands quite as well as while he occupied the office of secretary of war.

Unless there is a change in the present program, the new justice to succeed Justice Brown, retired, will not take his seat on the supreme bench before the next calendar year. There will be little or no business before the court in which the new member could participate before the court reassembles after the Christmas holidays, and it has also been the unbroken practice to make the confirmation of the senate a condition precedent to the assumption of office by the supreme justice. So it is pointed out that there is really no occasion for a speedy decision by Secretary Taft, and it is indicated that certainly not before the next session of congress will he announce his purpose.

GROUND TO BITS.

Body of Man Run Through a Stone Crusher on Staten Island.

New York.—Frank Getzner, a workman employed at the Windsor Plaster Mills, at New Brighton, Staten Island, was run through a stone crusher and his body ground to bits. When eight of Getzner's fellow workmen were arrested charged with causing their companion's death they said that as a joke they tied him while asleep, and that when the machine started unexpectedly the man's body was pulled through the crusher. Fragments of bones and pieces of clothing were found among ground stone under one of the crushers. The men arrested are Italians. The police do not accept the prisoners' explanation of Getzner's death.

SETS FIRE TO HOUSE

Where Man, Wife and Three Children Lay Slain.

Winston-Salem, N. C.—Isaac Lyerly, his wife and three youngest children were murdered in their home, one mile east of Barber's Junction, early Saturday morning by unknown parties, who afterwards robbed the house and then set fire to the bed on which Mr. and Mrs. Lyerly were killed. Two older daughters, who were sleeping upstairs, were awakened and rushed down just in time to extinguish the flames and save the home from destruction.

It is thought that the robbers killed their victims with clubs. Mr. Lyerly was a wealthy merchant and farmer, and the family was recognized as one of the best in the section.

Portuguese Steamer Sinks.

Lisbon.—The small Portugese steamer Sylva Americano sank recently at the entrance of the Kwansea river (Portugese West Africa) while on her way from here to Dondo, on the left bank of the Kwansea. Nineteen persons who were on board the vessel were drowned.

Baptize Babe in Mississippi Water.

The water will be used at the christening of the duke's young son. ALABAMA GLEANINGS.

Items of Interest Gathered as They Transpire Over the Entire State.

Flooded in Montgomery.

Montgomery, Ala.—A rain storm, nearly approaching a cloudburst, broke upon Montgomery at 6:55 o'clock Saturday evening and continued with remarkable severity until 7:25. In these thirty minutes 2.2 inches of rain fell. Streets were submerged, many cellars were inundated, and probably $2,000 property damage was done.

A water sewer on the Commerce street side of the New Exchange Hotel burst with such force as to break an adjacent water pipe, and in a few seconds there was four and a half feet of water in the basement of the hotel, where the barber shop, billiard parlors, wine rooms and the linen rooms are located. The damage to property in this part of the hotel was estimated as high as $700, with no insurance.

The basement of the Advertiser building was flooded to a depth of about one-half foot, and a number of cellars under large wholesale stores on Commerce street were half filled with water.

Lightning Destroys Brick Works.

Birmingham, Ala.—The plant of the Copeland Brick Manufacturing Company at Pratt City was almost totally destroyed by fire Friday morning about 4 o'clock. During the thunder storm which was raging a bolt of lightning struck the top of the three-story machinery building and set fire to it, the entire structure being burned to the ground. The Pratt City fire departmen was summoned, but could do nothing with the flames, and the whole plant was demolished with the exception of the boiler house, which was saved by its thick walls. About three years ago the same plant was destroyed by fire, being ignited by a spark from a passing engine.

Night Watchman Killed.

Birmingham, Ala.—By a blow with a six-pound piece of iron, which crushed the back of his skull like aneggshell, C. C. Wright, night watchman at the Southern railroad freight yards at Woodlawn, was murdered Friday night by unknown assailants. The body, found lying under a car on a side switch of the Alabama Great Southern road, was horribly mutilated. The wheels, which were still embedded in the chest, had almost severed the head from the trunk. Indications were that life had been extinct for several hours.

Went to Sleep on the Track.

Gadsden, Ala.—The manner in which K. H. Smith, who was killed at Blue Pond by a train on the Chattanooga Southern railroad has come to light. Smith and a companion had gone fishing the night before, but had returned home. Smith was seen lying on the track apparently asleep by the engineer, who made every effort to stop his train, but failed to do so before running over the man. He was employed as a telegraph operator and was the son of James Smith, of Menloe, Ga.

Has Both Legs Cut Off.

Gadsden, Ala.—David Staton, a negro employed in the Louisville and Nashville yards in Attalla, had both legs cut off by being run over by a car which was being pushed by a switch engine. The man was swinging from one of the cars and leaned too far out and was struck by a telegraph pole, which knocked him to the ground with his legs across the track. The engine was immediately stopped, but not in time to keep from running over him.

Pratt City Goes to Gadsden.

Gadsden, Ala.—Pratt City will play a series of games with the local ball team, beginning next Wednesday, instead of Trion, Ga. The latter team could not come on the dates originally set for them.

Youths in Jail.

Tuscumbia, Ala.—Sheriff A. F. McCloskey arrested three youths of this city on warrants sworn out by W. R. Sevier, charging them with burglarizing his safe several weeks ago, from which $248 was taken. Frank Rousseau, aged 16; Hays Montana, 13, and Charlie Montana, 18, are now in jail awaiting a trial next Monday. Gene Montana, aged 15, is in Memphis, and the sheriff has notified the chief of police of that city to arrest and hold him until the sheriff can reach there. Gene is also said to be implicated.

Sometimes it seems as if the less a woman knows about anything the more she likes to talk about it.

Gadsden, Ala.—The different operators of iron, steel, coal mines and rock quarries are importing quite a lot of Germans, Italians, Poles and Swedes to work in the different industries here. The immigrants are brought to Savannah by steamer from Ellis Island. This class of labor, especially the Italians and Poles, have proven to be good laborers.

Verdict Premeditated Suicide.

Birmingham, Ala.—Premeditated suicide is the verdict of Coroner Paris after making an investgation of the death of Jerry Fountain a native of Georgia, who swallowed almost the entire contents of a bottle of morphine in the presence of his wife, from whom he was divorced, and washed the drug down with a pint of beer. Not satisfied with the first teaspoonful, he took a second dose, which he swallowed with milk. Placing the arm of his wife about his neck, he said he was ready to die. From that time until the end came he was unconscious and never uttered another word. Coming here with his parents about twenty years ago from Macon, Ga., Mr. Fountain taught school for a number of years, and at one time was county superintendent of education. He was chief deputy sheriff at Bessemer up to November, 1905, when he resigned to become state president of the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

Failure to effect a reconciliation with his wife is thought to have caused the deed.

Dies from Injuries.

Birmingham.—E. H. Satterfield, a tinner living at 1121 N. Twentieth street, died at St. Vincent hospital from injuries received by being crushed between freight cars. A. C. Cross, recently from Atlanta, who was in company with Mr. Satterfield, was slightly injured about the head. Sunday morning about 9 o'clock it seems the two men stepped in between freight cars standing on the Morris avenue track of the Louisville and Nashville between Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets when an engine unseen by them bumped against the cars. Mr. Satterfield was mashed in the hips.

New Steamboat Line.

Gadsden, Ala.—A new steamboat line has been placed in operation between Decatur and Guntersville. The steamer White Oak, a neat and trim craft, leaves the former city every Friday afternoon and arrives at Guntersville the next morning at 10 o'clock. The line has sprung into instant favor, and is being liberally patronized by the farmers and residents of the rich Tennessee river alley.

Peach Growers Alarmed.

Gadsden.—The peach growers are considerably alarmed on account of the continued wet weather of the past ten days. Some of the unripe fruit has already commenced to rot, and if the rains continue much longer it is feared that the loss will be serious. Too much rain at this season also injures the flavor of the fruit.

Tax Increases.

Gadsden.—Tax Collector A. H. Barnes has made a full settlement of the state taxes of Etowah county for the year 1905 with the officials at Montgomery. The totals for the past year show a considerable increase over the previous year, and it is believed that the present year will show the greatest increase in the history of the county.

Foreigner Hit on the Head.

Gadsden, Ala.—A foreign laborer employed at the Southern Steel Company's plant in this city was struck on the head by one of his companions with a heavy piece of iron. The blow was a hard one and fractured the skull and caused a serious, if not fatal, wound. It is not known how the trouble came up, as the injured man cannot speak a word of English, and it is impossible to even understand his name, but he is thought to be a Pole and one of a colony recently imported by this company.

WAR DECLARED

Honduras Has Declared Against Guatemala. Situation Complicated.

JOINS FORCES WITH SALVADOR.

Proclamation in Salvador Announces a Victory Over Cabrera's Forces.

United States Seeks Peace.

Panama.—A telegram received here from San Salvador says that Honduras has declared war against Guatemala.

According to this same message, the following proclamation has been circulated in Salvador:

"Gen. Bonilla, commanding the Salvador army, has repelled the Guatemalan forces at Metapam, in Salvador, ten miles east of the Guatemalan frontier. The victorious army of Salvador regained the positions captured from the enemy."

The declaration of war by Honduras upon Guatemala brings a third state actively into the Central American trouble, which has been progressing with more or less severe fighting and bloodshed for a month or more. Honduras and Salvador are now arrayed against their neighbor on the west. Nicaragua and Costa Rica are the only two states still passive, and it has been said that the former is about to take part in the fighting.

Up to noon Saturday Honduras has seemingly taken no part in the difficulty between her neighbors. Recent reports, however, declared her territory had been invaded by Guatemalan troops in pursuit of fugitives from the army of Gen. Begalado, the Salvadorean commander, who was killed in the fighting at Jicaro.

The trouble in Central America has been brewing for a long time. For five years the revolutionists in Guatemala have been intriguing for the overthrow of President Cabrera, and they have appealed to certain elements in Honduras and Salvador, working on national jealousies.

President Cabrera has been especially criticised by his enemies. They declare that he rules with extreme despotism, that no man's life is safe under his administration and that the country morally and economically is going to the dogs. On the other hand, President Cabrera has declared that this revolutionary movement is inconsequential and that the government would promptly put it down.

President Cabrera's term of office expired in 1905. He has insisted, however, on holding office.

Washington, D. C.—The state department has no information concerning the declaration of war by Honduras against Guatemala, but no surprise is manifested, as the frontier of Honduras is in the disturbed district.

The state department has heard nothing since Friday from Central America or Mexico relative to the efforts being made to bring about peace between Guatemala and her neighbors. It is believed, however, that in conformity with the instructions of the department Ambassador Thompson, at the City of Mexico; Charge d'Affaires Brown, at Guatemala City, and Minister Merry, at San Salvador, are in direct communication with one another and will soon have comething to report.

With the active co-operation of Mexico now assured it is hoped that President Cabrera, of Guatemala, can be induced to abandon any revengeful designs he may cherish against the little republic of Salvador.

The statement in news dispatches that war has been decreed in Guatemala is believed by the state department officials to be based upon the declaration of martial law in that country, of which the deparment was advised Friday by Charge Brown.

Oyster Bay.—In extending the good offices of the United States, in conjunction with Mexico, to end the dispute between Guatemala and Salvador, President Roosevelt has no program of action outlined. The United States will follow the suggestion of the contending governments if they indicate a desire to accept the mediation offered. No suggestion as to the mode of procedure to be followed will come from the United States, it was announced here, unless request or suggestion should be made by Guatemala or Salvador.

The mediation might take the form of a joint arbitration tribunal representing Mexico and the United States, to which Guatemala and Salvador could present their respective cases. Again, Guatemala and Salvador might act through a peace commission composed of representatives from their own governments.

By the President.

Oyster Bay.—David Lubin, of Stockton, Cal., has been appointed a member of the permanent committee of the International Institute of Agriculture, with headquarters at Rome, Italy. Eugene Haskill, of Detroit, Mich., has been appointed by President Roosevelt as a member of the international waterways commission, to succeed George Y. Wisner, deceased.

SAN FRANCISCO FIRE.

Thirty-five Insurance Companies Report $75,000,000 Loss.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Call publishes statements of thirty-five fire insurance companies doing business in this city, which have been filed in the insurance departments of New York. According to these statements, which have been sworn to, the gross losses of thirty-five companies alone were $75,000,000. The net losses are but $45,000,000, which shows a reduction to the benefit of the companies on their ledgers to the amount of $30,000,000 from the gross aggregate.

The re-insurance money to be received by thirty-five companies is stated to be $12,000,000 in round figures, leaving the large sum of $18,000,000 to be accounted for as salvage. More than 100 fire insurance companies were losers in San Francisco. They will all make sworn returns.

Reception to Bryan.

New York.—The committee, headed by Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, of Boston, which was appointed by the plan and scope committee of the Commercial Travelers' Anti-Trust League to secure the co-operation of the business interests of the country in the reception to be tendered William J. Bryan at Madison Square Garden on his return from Europe on August 30, has issued the following statement:

"The Commercial Travelers' Anti-Trust League, Wm. Hoge, president, headquarters New York City, Victoria Hotel, inaugurated a movement for a fitting reception on his return from a tour around the world to Mr. Bryan, the foremost and most trusted leader of an aggressive opposition to all trusts and monopolies.

"It is the desire of the league, uder whose auspices the recepton wil be gven, that all persons and organizations, irrespective of party or faction, interested in the fight against trusts and monopolies, will join without further invitation and in their own way in the welcome home to this great American citizen at Madison Square Garden, New York city, August 30, 1906, when speeches will be made by Mr. Bryan and other distinguished men of the nation."

The statement is signed by Mr. Fitzgerald and the following members of the committee: John W. Tomlinson, Birmngham, Ala.; Norman E. Mack, Buffalo, N. Y.; Tom L. Johnson, Ohio; Wm. Hoge, New York; Willis J. Abbott, New York; Harry W. Walker, New York.

Shocking Affair.

Bolivar, Tenn.—Near Hickory Valley Cy Rooker, an old negro, was cleaning a well on the farm of Charlie Harris, when it caved in, covering him under four feet of earth at the bottom of the forty-foot well. Henry Kinney, another negro, agreed to dig him out for $35, and the amount was raised.

The groans of the unfortunate man were heard as the digging progressed.

After an hour's work Rooker's head was uncovered, a rope was put about the neck to pull out the body, when the head came off.

As it was dark, the work was abandoned until morning, when the headless body was secured. Rooker was a well digger and cleaner by profession, a former slave and well thought of by the community.

Killed at Patrol Box.

Indianapolis, Ind.—A "dead" wire in some mysterious manner not yet explained by expect electricians killed Patrolman Edward Dolby, of the Indianapolis police department and badly shocked several other members of the police department.

Officer Dolby had just inserted his key into the Gamewell signal box in the west end of the city when he was thrown to the ground, shocked to death. On the same circuit with his signal box were eleven other police call boxes. Other patrolmen in making their calls to the central station on the same circuit received shocks, some severe enough to knock them down.

Reports Premature.

Cologne.—The Cologne Gazette publishes a dispatch from Berlin saying that the reports of a meeting between Emperor William and King Edward are premature. An exchange of views is proceeding between Berlin and London, the newspaper says, to determine the possibility of a meeting, but they have not yet reached a stage where the time and place of the meeting can be definitely fixed.

Spokane Gets Next Convention.

Omaha, Neb.—Spokane, Wash., won the next international convention of the Baptist Young People's Union of America. The meeting also decided upon the adoption of two new books as a part of the evangelistic reading course—"Methods of Soul-Winning," by Dr. H. C. Mable, and "Ancestry of Our English Bible," by Dr. Ira M. Price. The date of the next convention was not decided.

Cheats Cell by Taking Poison.

Chicago, Ill.—Ralph Le Isle, convicted of the murder of Samuel Goldberg, a saloon-keeper three months ago and sentenced to life imprisonment, was found dead in his cell in the county jail.

The death followed a determination to cheat the cell in case he should be sentenced to life imprisonment. He had obtained poison by some means and ended his life.

, one day, in a great burst of confession and confidence, the count said: "Meester Martindale, I would be so glad to pay my attentions to your niece."

"Why certainly. Go ahead," exclaimed Mr. Martindale, with a laugh that was on the point of an explosion that might have shaken the ship if it had found its full vent.

And so it went on, and the climax came one lovely morning when the great vessel passed Queenstown on her way to the old country.

The young lady with the flush of health deep in her cheeks, her eyes as clear as the skies, and her whole being a personification of vigor and beautiful happiness, was standing in a corner by herself when the count approached and told her that he had found that for which he had searched the earth in vain—the object of his love—the most adorable of women, whom he loved with an unselfishness that no language could express.

He certainly expressed it very inadequately in his broken English. But as that journey seemed quickly ending he grasped the chance with all the ardor of a man determined to win before the ship was docked.

While he was speaking she was gazing toward the horizon, and there was upon her face a half-smile like the play of sunlight upon the face of a goddess.

Finally he exclaimed:

"I have ze permission of Mr. Martindale, your uncle, to speak zus wiz you."

"Of Mr. Martindale, my uncle!" she exclaimed.

"Yes, Mees," he replied, "of him; he knows of it. You may ask him; he will comprehend."

She said nothing, but seeing the rotund face of the millionaire coming down the deck advanced to meet him, and without a word came back with him to where the count was standing.

"Mr. Martindale, she said, very soberly, "I understand Count Fricadelli to say that you are my uncle, and that you have given him permission to speak to me upon a somewhat personal subject."

Mr. Martindale smiled broadly and replied:

"The count must be mistaken. I have never claimed to be your uncle, although I should be very proud if I were."

The count was becoming strangely agitated, but he said:

"Meester Martindale, you said I might pay my attentions to your niece."

"Well, count, I have not the slightest objections to that, but it happens that that the only niece I have lives in Dakota and has the finest family that any man ever saw."

"Then Mees Wiltsong," mumbled the poor man on the verge of collapse—

"'Mees Wiltsong,'" said Mr. Martindale, taking the words from him, "is a most delightful and most capable professional nurse who, I am sure, will be most attentive to my wife during our little trip to Europe, and she is a lady whom I can cordially recommend to any one needing her services—after we have done with her."

It would be hard to follow the rest of this disaster, but "Mees Wiltsong" and Mr. Martindale were laughing after the count had found solitude in his cabin, from which he did not emerge until the stewards were almost obliged to put him off the ship at Liverpool.—Illustrated Bits.

The Negro and the Conductor.

An "old-time" Southern negro got on the train the other day and was enjoying himself quietly when the conductor came through for tickets. The conductor punched him and asked him for his ticket.

"Yas, boss; I got a ticket. It was a red one. Right here in my pocket. Put it in my inside pocket." He fumbled around in the pocket for a while until the conductor, getting impatient, tried to hurry him up.

"Now, don't rush me, boss. I ain't rushin' you. Did you ever get somethin' down between the linin' and your pocket? Awful hard to get out."

The conductor got tired of waiting and said, "Well, I can't wait any longer on you. You will have to pay your fare or get off. Pay me forty cents."

"All right, boss. I'll give you forty cents. Co'se I got forty cents. Always have forty cents. Always carry it with me. When I walk down the street people point me out and say, "There goes a man that's got forty cents.'"

The conductor got tired of waiting and stopped the train, saying, "Here, you'll have to get off. I can't wait any longer."

"All right, boss, I'll get off. Wanted to get off here, anyhow. See that little log-cabin over there? That's my house. 'Bliged to you for the ride."—Judge's Magazine of Fun.

Saharan Exploration.

Lieutenant Colonel Laperine, a French officer commanding in the Tuat Oasis of Southern Algeria, has left his headquarters at Adrar with a detachment of troops to explore the Taoudeni country, where the French uniform has never yet been seen. It is a district of considerable importance, seeing that it is the main depot for the supply of salt for the Central Sahara and the Northern Soudan. An effort is also to be made to improve the road from Southern Algeria in the direction of Timbuctoo. At present it is one entailing great hardships on travelers by reason of the want of water.

Motor Dust and Flies.

The Chairman of the Westbury (Wilts) District Council told the members that the dust raised by motors did one good thing for the farmers—it killed the flies on the turnips. "It might be an advantage to the turnips," retorted a member, "but it spoils the grass and hay crops."—London Chronicle.

WORTH QUOTING

It does not necessarily follow that a large salary indicates commensurate or legitimate service, suggests the New Haven Register. The great insurance president received enormous salaries, and the investigation revealed in a number of instances an actual lack of knowledge of the very business they were paid to know and direct.

The season is again at hand when joyous, buxom, athletic American womanhood starts forth for health, recreation and "broadening influences," leaving the stingy, antiquated, tiresome husbands to encumber the earth at home, comments the Zionsville Times. More of a menace to the country than the soulless greed of trusts or the outrageous demands of labor unions is the growing vacation habit of the country.

Speed is an excellent quality in its place, remarks the New York World, but endurance is its desirable complement. Weston, the veteran, surpassing at sixty-eight a longdistance walking record of his early manhood, is a happy example of the combination with agility of the virtue of "lastingness."

If all the smells in the Chicago stockyards were reduced to liquid and sprayed with attar of roses they would form a body of perfume seven-eighteenths the size of Lake Como, reckons the Chicago Tribune. The perfume lake would evaporate in three years, two months and 14 days, and, when the wind was blowing northeast, two points east, the perfume would be plainly distinguishable at Formigas, Azores islands.

A contemporary thinks, says the San Antonio Express, "one result of the beef trust exposures will be to encourage local butchers in the smaller towns to do their slaughtering for themselves, as it was done in the days before the trust. And it will not be as easy to kill these small competitors by rebates as it was before." And it may be added that we got very good beef at moderate cost before there was any beef trust.

It would take a bold man, or one far gone in liquor and reckless of consequences, to call Miss Billington, the English woman's rights leader, a "suffragette," says the New York Sun. Miss Billington heckles the Chancellor of the Exchequer, slaps a constable in the face and kicks him twice on the leg, and refuses to recognize the jurisdiction of a magistrate, all in one day. We would sooner call Carrie Nation a "suffragette;" it would be safer.

The Havana Telegraph observes that the agitation for a new and permanent reciprocity treaty between Cuba and the United States, which is backed by the United Corporations of Cuba, is chiefly interesting as showing the full appreciation, by those who are real representatives of Cuba's commercial and industrial events, of the vital importance to Cuba of the American market for Cuban products.

There can be no excuse for the woman who spends on needless dress the dollar that should be laid up for a rainy day, or who by extravagance drives her husband into bankruptcy or despair; but the number of such women is comparatively very small, says the New York Herald. Taking a broad view of the matter, we must look at results. The naval armaments costing vast sums become obsolete in a few years, and the money spent on excessive indulgence in drink produces only red nosed, incompetent men, while that devoted to dress gives us the tastefully dressed, lovely American woman—a thing of beauty and a joy forever.

The days of emaciated clerical bodies, consumptive clerical throats, the power of quoting poetry rather than of giving forth original thought, coupled with what was once considered an essential unworldliness meaning absolute incapacity for affairs, have gone by. The days of preachers thrilling by sustained rhetoric and oratorical powers seems to have lapsed in the pulpit, as in legislative halls, on the lecture platform, and at the bar, comments the Christian Register. A new type has come into being, and we may call him the builder, the man who does not work on the sandy foundations of sensation and showy oratory, but on firmer and more lasting material, the man who aims to make a church that will go alone, so to speak, will exist without him if his absence is necessary.

The modern magician comes from the laboratory. He speaks in the name of science, for there is a science of the immaterial—a science of witchcraft—a science which has it professors and learned societies, its journals and magazines. The very ghosts that haunt the societies for psychical research have taken on a scientic air; they walk no more in windy corridors, clanking spectral chains; in a practical, modern way they exhibit themselves to scientific congresses, declares Everybody's Magazine. World over, psychic phenomena are being studied by trained scientists. Dismissing theories, they give themselves to the observation of scientifically established facts. Their labors range from the transmission of psychic forces, to the time-old mysteries of enchantment and apparitions.

THE PULPIT.

A SCHOLARLY SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. R. M'DONALD.

Subject: "Beauty: How to Keep It."

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Sunday evening the Rev. Robert MacDonald, pastor of the Washington Avenue Baptist Church, preached to young women. His subject was "Beauty: How to Keep It." His text was from Proverbs iv., 23. "Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life." Mr. MacDonald said:

What has such a text to do with beauty? Everything. The source is the heart. Beauty of character depends on quality of heart. Every thought, desire, sentiment, ambition, that enters the heart is sooner or later expressed in character and conduct. All the life issues radiate from that center. And when the writer of the Proverbs tells us to keep the heart with all diligence, he speaks the foundation word of all wisdom and carries us back to the primary cause of truth or error, righteousness or sin. We have already seen in this series that beauty of character is a divine possession, existing only where truth holds sway. And that we can never satisfy the claims of Almighty God until we give back to Him that which is possible to us all—beauty of character, instead of illformed, homeup, unsymmetrical lives. What Michael Angelo said once to a young artist about his statue applies to us all. "Do not trouble too much about the light on your statue. The light of the public square will test its value." So the light of the public square beyond, which is the light of God's countenance, the unerring light of judgment, will be the test of our characters. All modelling, all building, should be with the light of eternity's public square in mind. We are all under obligation, a contract based on and rooted in our very constitution, to build for eternity, inasmuch as the Creator has marked out a celestial destiny for us all, and it ought to be our chief business to conform to that gracious provision which will mean realization along all infinite lines throughout the eternal years. Be careful, then, oh, be careful, what influences you bring to bear upon the formation of your characters. No outward embellishing, no exterior molding, will suffice. It depends upon what you receive in your heart whether your character will be perverted and deformed, or true, well proportioned, beautiful.

Numberless are the precepts that suggest themselves just here. All the Christian virtues bound toward us to offer their assistance to help us keep that we have striven so hard to acquire. We gladly accept their help, but instead of packing your memories with these multitudinous aids to the retaining of this high possession, let us fasten our thought on a few foundation principles.

The first I would suggest is self-control. No beauty of character can be where there is no self-control. Daniel Webster was once asked which he thought the greatest virtue. It was just after one of his most powerful speeches, but in which, interrupted and contradicted by the opposing counsel, he lost his temper, and also the case he was pleading. That evening, in the course of conversation, he was asked the question, and answered, "Self-control, and it is the most difficult, too." 'Tis true, young women. It is an underlying principle, including a host of greater virtues. Who has not felt sorely the need of greater self-control. Patience is represented in the Scriptures as the very fruitage of Christianity, but patience is only a constituent part of self-control—namely, self-control in pain, in affliction. Very Christ-like it is. Endurance of wrong treatment. Misunderstanding. So easy to complain, and be disagreeable when the sky is dull, and the way drear. I refer not to that patience that springs from our natural disposition, which is purely temperamental. Constitutional heroism is good, but it does not stand the strain. A patience that fails at the hardest point, is weak all through. Nothing short of the Christ type of patience will suffice.

But not only self-control in pain, also in pleasure, another name for which is temperance. Young ladies need to be temperate as well as young men. I am not referring to the liquor question, although never more need than to-day for temperance there, but to the whole problem of living. To be temperate in thought, in speech, in desire, in act instead of extravagant. It is so easy to let pleasure run away with us and cause us to think life has no value beside. Dissipation is only extravagance in pleasure. The curb has been thrown off our necks. Pleasure was given too much license. We entertained it too freely, endowed it with our own personality, and before we were aware of it, it took us up in its arms and ran away with us. We handed the control of the situation over to it. We became dissipated. We are lost. Self-control in pleasure as well as in pain is the demand. Temperance as well as patience.

But a second requirement is self-command. This may be regarded as intensified self-control. Self-control is passive. Self command is active. The other is to force yourself on. Patience and temperance are good, indispensable to beauty of character. Forbearance and forgiveness are harder still. We speak from experience in saying so. Controlling your speech, withholding the adverse criticism when just dying to speak, to give your adverse opinion. We often think we are not saying anything worth while unless we criticise. Forbearance of the senseless gossip, and the retailing of slander. Forbearance of the disagreeable person.

Then forgiveness of that which it is natural for you to resent. We like to hold spite. They injured me. I must get even with them. And we never thought that the getting even with one who has injured us means to get uneven with ourselves and uneven with God. "I will never forgive," spells human nature. But it also spells basest sin. Not until we can stand with Jesus and say, "Father, forgive them," have we any beauty of character worthy the name. To hate is human; to forgive is divine. To remember that is to help yourself over many a hard place of temper and hatred. It is an axiom that no beauty of character can be where no spirit of forgiveness abides in the heart. Hatred, anger, tying yourself up into a knot, kills beauty. Forgiveness expands the heart, opens the mind, exalts the spirit. Then beauty exists. Would you be able to command self? Get rid of sin. Bring in a stronger will, God's, to reinforce your own.

A third necessity in the retaining of beauty is self-forgetfulness. This is a passive quality, as is self-control. It is also negative. But it is neither passive nor negative until certain active graces and positive virtues enter in and make it so. I mean by self-forgetfulness the becoming oblivious to those desires and demands of your nature, the remembrance of which make you self-contained and ill at ease, even miserable and sinful. To become so, possess faith, belief in some personality greater than yourself. Belief in any objective fact or person more important than yourself, and they all are, for you are a very insignificant factor in the life problem, a mere atom in the midst of the sensualities, will produce self-forgetfulness. The greater the object of faith the greater the oblivion of self, for it gives self a chance to expand along the line of the other person's excellence, and gradually a newer, larger self takes the place of the old in your consciousness. It is a foregone conclusion that faith in God, through Jesus Christ, enlarges and regulates the life as can no other person, for you are immediately given the worthiest possible object on which to fix your attention.

Then trust. Do not be afraid to trust somebody. Test, then trust. More loss comes to us mortals through under trust than through over trust. It is hard to believe it, just as hard to believe as to believe that sins of omission are more unpardonable at the hand of God than sins of commission. Sins of omission are so vague and attenuated that they cut little or no figure in our consciousness. We need to be preached to that these are the great lack among mortals in the consciousness of Almighty God. The higher and grander the object of your trust, the more beautiful the character fashioned. Really remarkable that we are so constructed that we can trust beyond sense perceptions. It shows us to be spirit more than aught else. The heart in us all was destined before the foundation of the earth to be God's guest chamber. Forbid him entrance, entertain less important guests, and the spirit is burdened, and the heart is sad. It is His residence, by both creation and redemption. And still we are such foolish children not to yield to God and find rest, eternal rest, infinite calm, that no turmoil in time or eternity can overthrow. All this helps us to see why trust in Jesus produces beauty in the life. He was the beautiful life "par excellent." All the virtues blossomed and emitted fragrance in Him.

Of course, self-forgetfulness is enhanced and made more sure through love. And faith and trust always blossom into love exercised toward a spiritual object. Love is the peerless transformer of our life. All else is medial. Love only is ultimate. Love only is all-powerful to mold like unto itself. Love God and you become God-like. Self slips out the same door that God comes in. They pass each other on the threshold. The evicted tenant goes out bruised, defeated, friendless. The victor, ruler of our fate, comes in with all strength of cheer and grace of countenance, and all wealth of blessing in His outstretched hands. No trouble henceforth to forget self, and no difficulty to be beautiful. In forgetting self we forget our weakness and failures, our disappointed hopes and sorrows. Then the soil is ready for the good seed to be sown, for truth and righteousness to grow, for beauty to blossom.

This array of foundation principles is hardly complete without self-surrender. The give-up principle in life counts for all. The reason we do not find is because we are afraid to lose. We fail to take hold of truth because we fail to let go of ourselves. Through obedience we become divine. Ah, you say, you are beguiling us into religion. Just so. Did you dream you could possess beauty of character without being religious? We desire to proclaim nothing other than the old gospel. But to set it before you in new dress and under an attractive, bewitching title. A man hearing the second sermon of this series forced his way to the pulpit after it was done, and exclaimed, "I thought you would be sensational. The subject looked it, but you everlastingly preached Christ to-night. I am both disappointed and pleased." Yes. That's where the effectiveness of the gospel comes in. It refuses to be suppressed. No topic, if the preacher be true, can strike home, however roundabout the journey it takes, without meeting Christ somewhere in the way. And when the meeting takes place. Jesus always gains the central place, and glides into our consciousness as the hope of glory. Christ's place of residence is in the heart. He is the God-destined Master of Ceremonies. He directs the life issues that emanate from that citadel of attack and defense. Let Him in and all is well. Then it is easy to keep the heart with all diligence. Remember, the heart's emphasis is always right. Emerson said another lasting thing. What the heart deems great is great. The Master of Men as our Master will see to it that all the life issues will be true and beautiful. Sorrow will not corrode those outgoing tides of affection. Sin will not weaken them. Death will not obliterate nor overwhelm them. Nor eternity exhaust them. God will recognize the beauty and exclaim, "Well done; enter into the joys of thy Lord."

Wesley's Motto.

John Wesley's motto: "Get all you can; save all you can; give all you can" should be taken to heart by everyone who wants to become efficient in the service of God and to know the joy of fellowship with God in Christ.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR JULY 22.

Subject: Jesus Teaching How to Pray, Luke xi., 1-13—Golden Text, Luke xi., 1—Memory Verses, 9, 10—Topic: How to Supplicate—Commentary.

I. Christ teaching His disciples to pray (vs. 1-4). 1. "Was praying." It was the habit of Christ to pray. "When He ceased." Perhaps He was praying such a powerful prayer as to arouse the feeling that they knew not how to pray aright. "As John also taught." Each new dispensation may not only have its new unfolding of truths, but its new revelations may open new modes of access, and new topics of prayer and modes of worship. A different prayer was offered in the Mosaic ritual from the patriarchal form. John opened up a new scope of prayer, and this new dispensation requires of Jesus to set the range of prayer in accordance with the new range of truth, and the new position of man with God.

2. "Say." The beauty and value of the lessons in the Lord's prayer arise from, 1. The tone of holy confidence—it teaches us to approach God as our Father (Rom. 8:15), in love as well as holy fear. 2. Its absolute unselfishness—it is offered for all the brotherhood of man. 3. Its entire spirituality—of seven petitions, one only is for any earthly boon, and that only for the simplest. 4. Its brevity and absence of all vain repetitions (Eccl. 5:2). 5. Its simplicity, which requires not learning, but only holiness and sincerity for its universal comprehension. For these reason the fathers called it the "epitome of the gospel." "Our Father." An expression of love and condescension. "Which art in heaven." In the former clause we express His nearness to us, in this His distance from us. This phrase in the Scriptures seems used to express, 1. His omnipresence (1 Kings 8:27). 2. His majesty and dominion (2 Chron. 20:6). 3. His power and might (Psa. 115:3). 4. His omniscience (Psa. 33:13-15). 5. His infinite purity and holiness (Isa. 57:15). "Hallowed be Thy name." The "name" stands for the man himself—his character, his ability, his possessions. "Thy kingdom come." The kingdom of His power, His gospel, His grace and His glory. "Thy will be done." The will of God is infinitely good, wise and holy. "As in heaven." By the angels and all the hosts of heaven. "So in earth." By mortals.

3. "Give us." The good things of this life are the gifts of God. "Day by day." In the order in which our needs are felt. "Our daily bread." Life's most common necessity. Strength to gain it, skill to earn it, power to eat—all are from God.

4. "Forgive us our sins." Sin is here represented as a debt. "We also forgive." Else how could we entreat Thee for pardon. "Not into temptation." As the prayer for daily bread raises us above care for to-day, and the prayer for the forgiveness of sins is meant to quiet us concerning the past, so is the prayer against temptation a weapon for the uncertain future, that we may not fall again under the might of evil. "Deliver us from evil." From all the wicked fascination and miserable results of sin, from its blindness and insensibility, from its unspirituality and rebellion, from its hardness and its punishment; from all that dishonors God and ruins the soul, from its guilt, its power, its shame and its doom.

II. The parable of the importunate borrower (vs. 5-8). 5. "He said." Although idle repetitions in prayer are forbidden, yet persistency and importunity in prayer, wrestling with God and not letting Him go until He has blessed us, are here distinctly taught. See Luke 18:1-8. "Midnight." In those hot countries it is common, where it can be done safely, to travel in the night. "Lend me." It was usual with the Jews to borrow bread of one another.

6. "Friend—is come." Benighted, belated and who has lost his way. A strong reason why he should have prompt relief. 7. "Trouble me not." The trouble made him insensible both of the urgency of the case and the claims of friendship. "In bed." We learn from travelers that it is usual in the East for a whole family to sleep in the same room, each laying his mattress on the floor. "I cannot." Without exertion, which was equal to, "I will not." 8. "His importunity." Literally, his shamelessness; that is, his unblushing persistence.

III. The disciples urged to persistency in prayer (vs. 9-13). 9. "I say unto you." We have it from Christ's own mouth, who knows His Father's mind. "Ask—seek—knock." In everything, by prayer and supplication, we are to make our requests known unto God; then we are to "seek"—continue to ask and knock at the door of His mercy.

10. "Everyone—receiveth," etc. Christ promiseth to hear and answer. No soul can pray in vain that prays as God has directed. 11, 12. "If a son shall ask," etc. From that which the friend will do, the discourse of the Saviour rises even to that which one could expect of a "father," and from that which an imperfect earthly father does even to that which the perfect Father in heaven bestows.

13. "Being evil." Sinful people are ready and anxious to give good gifts to their children. "How much more." How much more will one whose nature is love and who is infinitely holy and good give good things to them that ask Him. "Holy Spirit." The essence of all good gifts which the Father in heaven can bestow on His praying child. "To them that ask." The asking must be hearty, sincere, earnest, fervent and in faith.

Pope Pius X. Ill.

Rome.—Alarm has been caused throughout the world by the reported illness of Pope Pius X. The physicians at the Vatican, however, deny that it is serious, and hope that if the Pope can be persuaded to take sufficient rest he will speedily recover. His duties as head of the Roman Catholic church are very arduous, and he permits himself little relaxation.

DEMOCRATIC MASS MEETING.

Under and by virtue of the authority conferred upon me by the Democratic Executive Committee of Chilton county, at a meeting held May 6, 1906, I hereby call a mass meeting of the people of Chilton county at Clanton, Saturday, July 21, 1906, when the following well known Democrats will address the people:

Ex-Gov. Jos. F. Johnston; Hon. Sydney J. Bowie; Hon. W. B. Craig; Hon. H. S. Doster; Hon. S. M. Adams.

The Executive Committee is hereby called to meet at Clanton, July 21, 1906.

John C. Dennis, Chm.

Everydody come to the meeting Saturday and have a good time, lots of good speakers,

Of the seven "Democrats" whose names appear at the tail end of the petition beseeching Mr Middleton to become a candidate for Representative, only two are are voters, the others having disfranchised themselves. Not being interested in the election, anyone does for them.

A number of communications are unavoidably omitted this week for lack of space. If correspondents would only try and make their communications shorter it would give us a better chance. Chilton county only employs three printers and they can only do so much aud no more.

Montgomery in its race for 100,000 in 1910, has captured an important plant which probably means a vast deal to this territory. It is a plant for the conversion of cotton stalks into paper and other by products, and in a short time the cotton stalks may be marketed, as experiments have proved their availability for the purpose. The company will spend $200,000 in erecting the plant. Harvey Jordan is chairman.

T. J. TRAYWICK.

A new candidate for the office of Sheriff is T. J. Traywick, that sterling Democrat of Verbena. For over thirty years Mr. Traywick has made his home in Chilton; has served his apprenticeship as deputy sheriff, and now invites his fellow Democrats to give him the nomination for Sheriff. A good and true man, he will make an excellent officer if nominated and elected.

ROLLEFFE F. BATES.

This gentleman announces his candidacy for Sheriff of Chilton county, subject to the action of the people in the November election. As an independent candidate Mr. Bates, a popular citizen of Beat 11, asks the support of all citizens, promising that if he is elected he will faithfully discharge the duties of the office. Mr, Bates believes there are more than enough independent voters to elect a candidate who is not affiliated with either party.

Evergreen.

Editor Banner: Please allow me space in your valuable paper to say a few words.

Health of this community is exceedingly good at present and the farmers are blessed with most excellent crops, and we do thank God for it all. We are thankful again that we have a most excellent school which opened July 2nd. under the able management of Miss Lottie Johnson, who has proved to be one of Chilton's most successful teachers. We wish her a most pleasant time while she is with us, and thank God for the rich blessings He bestowed upon us in securing her as a teacher.

A Friend.

Clanton, Ala., July 16, 1906

To the people of Chilton county:

You will pardon me for coming to you once more with a few suggestions and a request. My apology for doing so is the interest I feel in Chilton county, and the future wellfare of her people. I notice that a mass meeting is called to meet in Clanton, July 21st, and I sincerely hope that the people will go to that meeting. I also hope that there will be no nominations made on that day for County officers, but that the mass meeting will call a Primary to meet August 27, the day that the State Primary meets. I hope that I will be pardoned for the suggestion, but I know that it will be best to invite every white man in the county to take part in that primary, and for the good and sufficient reasons:

1st, That the people of Chilton county are one, in interest, and there is no reason why they should be divided.

2nd, If the people do not vote in the August primary, that primary being a general election, and one in which the choice of the people in the State is made for all State officers, then all who refuse to make their choice in the primary will virtually have no choice. It is true, the people may vote in the general election in November, but if they do not take some interest now, the ticket nominated in the August primary will be elected in November; so you see now, in the coming primary, is the time to be felt for good.

I have been out in this campaign and I say that now is the time for the people to wake up and vote. The corporate interest of the State is fully aroused, and you need not doubt it; and that interest will be felt at the polls.

Will the people on account of past prejudice stay away? Will they stay away on the advice of those who hope to be elected to some county office, or on account of any bitterness or quarrel with each other about things of no profit? Or will the people do as they did in the days of "Old Hickory" Jackson, vote at the right time and place, and be felt for good, not alone for those that want office, but for the best interest of our homes, and our beloved State. I pray God that the people may look, and see, and act before it is too late. My friends, I tell you plainly, that it is too late after the Democratic primary has passed, for in that primary, men who will fill the offices of this State will be named, and the good people of Chilton county have as much interest in this State as any other people.

I know that some of you are politically prejudiced against me, and I know there are a few men in the county that will continue to say to you that I went back on them, but my friends, I beg you to weigh the matter in the light of reason and to ask yourselves if it is not a fact. that the Democratic party, however much we may have disapproved of some things in the past, is not the only party through which the people can be heard in State matters? If you have any other machine through which the people can be heard in their interest, pray tell me where it is.

If the people in 1892, with 50,000 majority failed, and if it is a fact that our Democratic brethren, who were then on the side of the machine, were disgusted with the methods then used, and of their own free will gave us a law in which no hand except the white man's hand figures, and if it is a fact that all our own people are now one, on the proposition of fair and honest elections, then why, O, why not fall in line with a majority of the people who were with us in 1892, and be felt in the most effectual way? You may have felt hurt at me, but I am now where I have always been—for the people, and I am for the best political methods, and that is the Democratic party, and many of you know it.

Your friend,

S. M. Adams.

Editor Banner—Up to the 8th inst., I had had an idea that the Cane Creek church people, like good old Coosaians, lived in the backwoods, but I found this was a mistake. Judge Deason had previously asked me to go out to the singing with him on that day, so I went and my! my! what do you suppose? Why the Judge just got me out there, turned me over to the men while he sat 'round cutting his eyes hither and thither, while I had my eye on him and his job. He looked and he looked. Finally, I saw him "come to a perfect point." I knew there was game about, and now he can tell you the rest.

Well, we passed a pleasant day and I got in my work of enjoyment and it was no uphill proposition. am going back out there again at the close of Prof. Gore's singing school, and I feel the Judge will go too if he finds out a certain person, with certain cold beautiful eyes is to be there. Think she will go too if she thinks or hears the Judge is to be there. All in all I decided then and there that it was a case of——at first sight by both.

Then last week I went out among the "Hill Billies," spent each day talking to the "dear people," ate, drank and made merry with them, and now I want to say to those who want to know my sentiments that the man who never goes out among the country people, does not know a good thing when he sees it. I spent four nights with them and I tell you we liked to have not gone to bed at all, and I am going to keep it up daily and weekly till November, and if I don't get elected, will have a consciousness that I have had a good time, have associated with my equals and know their needs and wants, and if elected, will be posted and "ready for the question,"

I find crops fine, people all in fine shape and in good humor, the only thing lacking is to give one and all, who is out of it, a hearty invitation to their first love, the Democratic party, and when they return, which they are inclined to do, then let us all be careful of their feelings and interest and all will go well. I want to say in this connection that Chilton county is one of which we might feel proud, except for the political strife which has existed for past twenty years, which I feel sure will soon resolve itself down to the question of voting for the man instead of suffering party or individual dictation, and which so far as county elections is concerned is not bad politics. If we had a complete telephone system over our county. How nice it would have been last Friday while at J. W. Sorrell's or H. C. Conway's or at those other fine places in the Collins Chapel neighborhood, to have stepped up to the telephone and said. "Hello! that you, Delia? Am up here among these good people in Beats one and nine; can't get away, they are so clever. Well, guess I will be home some time. Bye, bye."

Well, then, I went out yesterday to Unity, and Jehosephat, what a time I did have, but about 12:15 they "called me." Then it was I felt real small, but some good brother took my job off my hands and I was relieved, and I want to say that hereafter I am going to hide out at such places until all is ready and they holloa out, "bread and butter, come to supper," after which I will come forth and try to get a child's part of the good things. All in all Unity people are people after my own heart, and if any of you ever get in a mile and a half of my house, stop and get your dinner or stay all night.

AN INTERESTING STATEMENT.

Florence Drug Co. Say They Have at Last Discovered a Positive Cure for Indigestion.

"For years," said a member of the above drug firm, "we have been waiting for some one to discover a remedy that really will cure dyspepsia.

"We recently learned that a new remedy, Pepsikola Tablets, had been placed on the market, an on investigation we found that at last there is a remedy that surely will cure.

"We laid in a big supply because e knew that as soon as the people began to know about this remarkable remedy there would be a big demand for it, and it is selling beyond our expectations."

It is not often a druggist sells a new remedy on a positive guarantee, but unless cured of nervousness, dizzy spells, sour stomach, coated tongue, palpitation and other symptoms of dyspepsia. Florence Drug co. will hand back your money cheerfully and without argument.

No one should hesitate on trying a 25 cent box of Pepsikola Tablets, as they will not cost you a penny should they fail to relieve and cure the very worst case of indigestion and dyspepsia.

Paint! Paint!

Now is the time to give your house a new coat of paint, and we have the paint that will wear well and please you.

Our Sun Proof has proven to be what we claim for it, a thoroughly good paint. The handsome school house in Clanton is painted with it; the new two-story hotel belonging to Mr. W. M. Wilson, will be an attractive building indeed when Mr. R. J. Lake finishes it with a few coats of Sun Proof Paint. The Capitol of Alabama is also painted with Sun Proof, just recently finished, and if this paint was not good it would not be used on the above buildings.

The old reliable Hammar Paint is too well known throughout the county to need furlher praise, has been sold in Clanton eight or ten years. So let us furnish you the paint you may need from time to time, will appreciate your trade.

FIRE.

Some time ago, I said in an article published in the Banner, regarding the San Francisco fire, that I would give detailed estimate of the losses there by my companies as soon as final settlement could be made, and while as yet the adjustment is not entirely over, yet we are able to approximately estimate our losses. The Liverpool & London & Globe will lose $4,248,000, all of which will be paid from the home office in England, without using any of their United States assets. This will make over $100,000,000 paid to policy-holders in the United States by this company. My other three companies' losses, towit: The London & Lancashire, the Phenix of Brooklyn and the Atlanta-Birmingham are in proportion; all has, and will be paid without shocking their assets in the least.

An Epitaph.

Beneath these stones recline the the bones
Of 'Pologetic Brown,
Most pathetic, 'pologetic
Feller in this town.
Asked to be forgiven, sir,
Minute he was born;
'Pologized fer livin', sir,
Reg'lar, night and morn.

'Pologized fer eatin',
An' when he went to meetin'
Prayed the Lord, "Excuse me, please, fer askin' so an' so!"
When he courted Susan
He went right on excusin'—
'Pologized fer askin' her as soon's she'd answered, "No!"
Everyone picked on 'im,
Cur dogs was "sicked" on 'im,
Brown he took 'is martyrdom with pious, humble pride;
Fin'ally, jest to spite us,
He got 'pendicitus,
'Pologized fer troublin' us, then went away and died.

Here lies Brown, and let us speak
With due respect fer such;
Heaven loves the mild and meek,
But we don't need 'em much.

MUCH CHUCK.

All day long and every day while I was at the agency he sat upon the trader's stoop or lounged upon his counters. I often wondered at Bonhomme's tolerance, and set it down to the easy-going ways of the French-American. Of all the Gros Ventres at Yellow Water, Much Chuck seemed to me the nearest to a useless vagabond.

Then one evening, for a silver quarter, the trader sent him to the camp of the agency's "boss farmer," six miles away. Much Chuck carried fifty pounds of side pork on a shoulder, and the rate at which he loped across the prairie was surprising. Bonhomme laughed as he saw me looking after the awakened Gros Ventre.

"Didn't think there was so much action there, heh?" he said. "Much Chuck is like the rest of our Indians—pay one for doing what he knows how to do, and away he goes. That fellow was on the police force here twenty-five years ago, and did a service to this agency that no white soldier could have done.

"After Sitting Bull had been run off to Canada the troops were withdrawn from this neighborhood, and soon we began to have trouble. First a Gros Ventre stole a pony from the Crows; then a young Crow shot a Gros Ventre in the hand. After that there was stealing and skirmishing back and forth, till at last the Gros Ventres made a grand coup, and came in with two hundred Crow ponies.

"Worse than all, the rascals ran their booty into the government corral. McCall, the agent, sent ten of his Indian police out to turn the herd loose. His men came back presently without their guns, revolvers and ammunition belts.

"Much Chuck, then a young fellow, was the only policeman to retain his arms. He had been kept on duty at the office. As there were only a half-dozen old needleguns left in the armory, McCall found himself in a poor way to enforce authority. He hadn't even telegraph communication with the posts five hundred miles away.

"The Gros Ventres herded those stolen ponies, and kept a lookout in daytime, and at night shut them in the big corral under guard. The agent then occupied the vacated barracks opposite what is now the Gray Sisters' School, and the government coral was in a loop of the river below, where a deep channel, cut into the rocks, protected it on all sides except that facing the agency. The fort, or barracks, was a log quadrangle built upon a little height overlooking the corral and the flats below. My store stood outside, next to the left wing of this quadrangle. The Gros Ventre lodges, for the most part, were strung along a fringe of timber below the loop.

"For a number of days things went on smoothly to all outward appearance. Then the Crows came. About four hundred—all of Broken Kettle's band and some of the mountain Crows beyond—rode down to the agency at sunrise. They were mostly armed with breech-loaders, and when they summoned McCall out to them, I reckon his hair stood on end.

"Through their interpreter they accused him of sending his Indians to steal their horses, and they demanded the return of the animals and a lot of goods and rations for indemnity. And McCall could only tell them, with a great show of indignation that he was not responsible for any sort of Indian thievery. He told them how he had tried to turn their ponies loose and what the Gros Ventres had done.

"This was openly admitting that he had no authority over his Indians. But he was a new man out here, and he was scared and excited. When he had finished, the Crows set up a howl of wrath, and shook their guns at him. They told him that they were going to wipe out his Gros Ventres and then burn the agency.

"The Crows outnumbered our Indians two to one, and we had at the barracks less than a dozen half-armed employes. Broken Kettle had secured men and ponies from Gray Bull's mountain Crows—the worst lot of untamed savages north of Mexico.

"As I stood in the doorway of my store, taking in that angry crowd, I admit that I was scared.

"I looked toward the Gros Ventre village, and saw the inhabitants scurrying, men, women, and children, to the cover of the breaks just above their teepees. From the broken coulees they could command the horse corral with their rifles.

"The Crows had relied upon their numbers and the justice of their claim to gain the return of their ponies. They had not expected they would have to fight.

"But now they wheeled, scattered, and rode, with guns at a ready, straight toward the corral. On they went till a volley from the Gros Ventres halted them.

"They wheeled about, retreated out of range, and opened fire on the agency. Luckily, everybody who was looking out of an opening had time to dodge. They fired only a single shot or so to the man, but every door and window on that face of the barracks was riddled. Only my store was untouched.

"When their firing was checked, the Crow chiefs rode back and forth in front of their men, flourishing their guns and whooping threats.

"It was plain that they held the agency responsible for the taking of their horses, and in a measure they were right.

"What was to be done? McCall came hastily into my store to seek advice. But the matter had already gone beyond my wisdom in Indian affairs.

"Then a single figure appeared on our right—a policeman who had ridden round from the stables in the rear. It was young Much Chuck, dressed in his blue uniform, riding a white cavalry horse, with his rifle swung across the saddle in front.

"He was trim and soldierly, not so fat as now, and he made a fine show, at which we looked for a second in astonishment.

"'What can he be thinking of!' said McCall. 'The only fighting soldier I've got!'

"The Crows wondered, too, at first, for Much Chuck rode straight toward them. When close to a group of chiefs he halted, raised his right hand, and spoke some words in their own tongue. Many of our Gros Ventres had a smattering of Crow.

"We could hear nothing of what was said until, at the close of the conference, a number of the Crow chiefs shouted, 'Ho-ho-ho!' That was encouraging.

"Then we saw Much Chuck ride on down the line of the hostiles, pass them, and go straight on toward the Gros Ventres.

"To his fellows in the breaks he made signs as if to approach them for a talk. This he kept on doing until he was opposite the horse corral, when he turned suddenly and made a dash to the gate, which was on the side facing the fort. Then he jumped quickly from his horse, threw the gate wide open, and rushed in among the ponies. In a second or two he had the whole herd going at the opening like a flock of sheep.

"Then the Gros Ventres cut loose with their rifles. In a half-minute's firing they had killed a dozen ponies; but Much Chuck was unhurt, and at the tail of the herd he jumped a pony and came on, lying flat upon its back.

"Under a hail of shots he pushed the big bunch out of range, and then, with a whoop, the Crows swung in behind and took charge. They had recovered all their own animals, except the few killed, and some thirty or forty Gros Ventre horses besides. The capture satisfied them, and they rode off, yelling.

"Then that brave policeman came walking slowly toward the agency.

"'The last of Much Chuck,' said I, and I could hardly keep from crying. McCall looked at me, winking hard.

"'He's saved us,' he said, 'and the Gros Ventres will skin him alive. I can do nothing.'

"Much Chuck walked by without so much as looking at us. He went round the barracks and disappeared. McCall left me to go to him, but I never heard what the agent said to his policeman.

Some two hours afterward Gros Ventres began stringing up from their village, and in a little while the group of police cabins back of the fort was surrounded by Indians on foot.

"While I stood looking out of my rear door, I saw Much Chuck come out of his shack and walk toward a bunch of Indians gathered at a corner of the stockade. He had painted his face and body in yellow and green, and wore only the breech-cloth and bonnet of eagle feathers. The chiefs and others that he came toward were within a few rods of my rear yard, and I could hear the click of breech-bolts as they uncovered the carbines concealed beneath their blankets.

"'It's all up with Much Chuck,' thought I.

"He had come to surrender in time to save an attack on his cabin, where he had a wife and baby. I walked out to the stockade fence, and stood leaning against the timbers as Much Chuck came up to the chief. The young fellow looked the chief in the eye for a moment; then he spoke.

"'You have seen,' he said, 'what I have done. I did it to save my people and because I was a soldier of the Great Father. Your father here, the agent, knew nothing of my intention—he is in no way to blame for my acts. I am an Indian,—a Gros Ventre—and I am not afraid to die.'

"When he had finished, his own brother, Blue Face, leaped at him, struck him on the mouth, snatched his war-bonnet off, threw it on the ground and stamped on it.

"'You say you are a Gros Ventre,' he shouted, 'and I say you are a liar!' and he stepped back and cocked his gun. He would have shot Much Chuck then and there, but I jumped at Blue Face, flung him in a heap, and wrenched his gun from his hands. Then I stepped in front of Much Chuck, and the words came hot and fast. I suppose I never was so furious.

"'You miserable cowards!' I said. I will shoot the first one who lays a hand on this brave soldier. How many of you, this morning, expected to see another sun? This man has turned aside the vengeance of the Crows and the anger also of your Great Father. You are fools. You could not have saved a horse of the stolen herd. Some of your own are driven away. Very well, I will pay you for them myself—ten dollars in goods for each Gros Ventre pony killed or taken.'

"Well it happened I jumped in at the right moment, and the promise of pay for their ponies saved Much Chuck. Very likely that's the reason, since the police force was reduced, that he sits round in my store so much."—Youth's Companion.

ISOLATE DEGENERATES.

Benefits to Society From Segregation of All Deficients.

There is no reason why society should not relieve itself of the burden of mental and physical degenerates in two or three generations according to Alexander Johnson, secretary of the National Conference of Charity and Correction. This can be accomplished very easily, Mr. Johnson told the School of Philanthropy, simply by segregating these individuals.

"They should be educated to the fullest extent possible," he said, "and it is astonishing what can be done with a feeble minded child if it is taught young. They should be made useful and happy and provided with every possible amusement, from 'Puss in the Corner' to grand opera, but they should not be permitted to share the joys and sorrows of married life.

"This is not a great deprivation, and the only happiness possible to defectives is in an environment specially adapted to their condition. In the right environment it is very easy to make them happy. They should be taken into the care of the mother state from childhood until death, and thereby the state will be serving not only its own best interests, but those of the defective individuals. I don't like paternalism in government, but we can't have too much maternalism.

"The state is the greater parent and has rights paramount to those of the natural parent. For hundreds of years the state has stepped in to protect a child's property against its natural guardian. Later we came to see that the state should protect a child's person against the violence of parents, and now it is beginning to interfere in behalf of the child's intellect and character."

Mr. Johnson added that this segregation of defectives was merely the beginning of a science of stirpiculture.

"The time is coming," he said, "when we will take just as much care in reproducing the human species as we do now in feeding animals."

Although Mr. Johnson believes in eliminating bad stock, he thinks that the idea of heredity has been greatly overworked, and that environment is a matter of infinitely more importance.

"I would rather be born in the worst slum, of the worst parents that ever were," he said, "and be removed to a satisfactory environment at birth than be born under the best possible conditions and then be removed to a bad environment. Heredity is a powerful factor, and we need never be surprised at anything it does. There is an aristocratic family in England where one of the males in every second generation becomes insane at the age of forty-five. Think of the wonderful properties of a microscopic speck of matter which will produce such a chain of events. Yet this influence is slight compared with that of environment, and much that passes as heredity is really the result of environment."

Mr. Johnson expressed the opinion that Guiteau and probably Czolgosz were defectives and ought to have been sent to insane asylums, instead of being executed.

"It is just as well, perhaps, to hang those fellows and get them out of the way," he remarked. "It is cheaper than confining them. But they are not morally responsible."—New York Tribune.

As to Apples.

A good apple is the finest alterative in the world. It beats all the drugs named in the Red Book of Allison. But where are we to obtain a good apple? I have not been able to buy one in five years—an apple red, firm, reeking with juice halfway between sour and sweet, pure to the core, where the last morsel consists of beautiful black seeds which are as delicious as the olive in the cocktail. The apple of today is a mealy affair, juiceless, tasteless, pulpy and generally rotten at heart. There is no medicine in such a growth. It is a quack. The famous seedless apple is the biggest imposition ever practiced upon an "advancing" civilization.—New York Press.

GOLD AT GRASS ROOTS.

Recent Rich Strikes Along Small Alaskan Streams.

Gold is found at the grass roots in many places of the Yentna district, particularly on some of the new creeks of the Upper Kahiltana and Lake Creek, which have been prospected since the beginning of the year. At least 300 men are now in the district and all are busy prospecting and making ready for summer work. Many of them have sluice boxes in place to begin washing gravel as soon as the creeks clear of ice.

This is the report brought down by John A. McDonald, who with D. H. Conklin arrived in Seward last night. They left the headwaters of the Yentna April 22 and came straight through with the exception of a stay of two days at the lower end of Lake Creek as they came past. Water was running over the ice on the Yentna and they were obliged to wade part of the way. It was slushy traveling all the way from Lake Creek to Knik and the Little Susitna was showing signs of a breakup.

Mr. McDonald has been in the Yentna district since last fall with the exception of a few weeks in the winter when he came outside. He left here in February the last time, and since then has been on most of the explored creeks of the district. While no mining has been done since last summer experimental panning has shown good indications everywhere and Mr. McDonald says the miners are all extremely sanguine of results. A majority of them are experienced in placer mining, and many of them are Alaska sourdoughs, who know what they are trying to do.

On a majority of the creeks there is timber enough for all purposes. It is usually small. On some of the higher creeks, particularly the upper Kahiltna, there is no timber and the men located there have had a hard job sledding timber up for the summer's work from the lower end of the main creek.—Seward Correspondence of the Seattle Times.

Ants as Honey-Makers.

The ant honey has an aromatic flavor suggestive of bee honey, and is agreeable to the taste. An analysis made by a competent chemist of the product of the Mexican species showed a nearly pure solution of sugar of fruits, differing from grape sugar in not crystallizing. The Mexicans and Indians have, or had at the period of these studies, several uses for the ant honey. They eat it freely. The late Professor Cope, when in New Mexico, had a plate of rotunds offered him as a dainty relish. Dr. Loew reported that the Mexicans press the insects and use the honey at their meals. They were also said to prepare from it by fermentation an alcoholic drink. Another naturalist learned that the natives apply it to bruised and swollen limbs. It has been suggested seriously that these ants might by culture attain the rank of bees as honey producers. The difficulty of farming the colonies, and the limited quantity of the product, would prevent a profitable industry. The average amount of honey in a single rotund was by weight about forty (0.3942) grams, a little over eight (8.2) times that of the ant's body. But counting the number of rotunds in a nest at 600—the utmost that observation would justify—the entire product would be only two-thirds of a pound troy, collected at the cost of all the honey bearers' lives. Such results disbar these insects from the field of human industry.—H. C. McCook, in Harper's Weekly.

Military Wireless Telegraphy.

For some time communication by wireless telegraphy has been possible between the Eiffel Tower and Belfort, on the eastern frontier. At present the engineers in Paris are trying to discover in what degree their wireless messages can be interpreted or falsified. An apparatus fitted in the grounds of the Military Aerostatic School at Meudon has been communicating with the office of a divisional commander on the eastern frontier, and at the same time messages have been exchanged between the Eiffel Tower and an apparatus fitted in a captive balloon lying over one of the frontier fortresses. The War Office will make no statement about the experiments, but I think we shall hear no more for some time about the demolition of the Eiffel Tower.

Senator Wolcott's Wit.

The late Senator Wolcott, of Colorado, who was an ardent Republican campaigner, was delivering a stump speech in a red-hot Democratic community of the South. He had a large audience, the white people occuping the "pit" and the negroes the gallery. During his speech he became a little too ardent to suit his Democratic hearers and after making an unusually telling point for the Republican side, one Southern listener gave out an impulsive "Rats!" Wolcott stopped short and quietly surveyed the sea of colored faces in the gallery as though looking for aid. Finally he singled out one, and beckoning with his finger he said: "Will the waiter please come down and take the Chinaman's order?"

Jumble of Tongues.

There are towns in Hungary, and small towns too, where from seven to ten idioms are constantly being used. On the Galician frontier there is in a lovely valley the old town of Eperjes. The number of its inhabitants does not exceed 12,000. To this day the good people of Eperjes are in the habit of talking or being talked to in six different dialects. An ordinary household will include a Slovak man servant, a Hungarian coachman, a German cook and a Polish chambermaid. What is still more remarkable, each grade of society will tenaciously cling to its own language for converse.—Grand Rapids Herald.

RAREST OF OUR GOLD COINS

ONLY THREE 1822 HALF EAGLES —$2,165 PAID FOR ONE.

Only Twenty Years Ago Another Brought $6—1804 Dollar Outdone—King of Sweden Paid $2,000 for 1815 Eagle—Other High Priced Gold Pieces.

When $2,165 was paid the other day for a five-dollar gold piece of 1822, that coin took its place as the rarest of American coins, eclipsing the 1804 dollar, which for many years had that distinction, says the New York Sun. The price surprised coin dealers and collectors, for it exceeded by more than $1,000 the greatest sum previously paid for a specimen of this denomination and year.

A curious phase of the history of this gold piece is that even those well informed about coins did not know of the rarity of the 1822 half eagle until about twenty years ago. It is a matter of record that the last owner of the coin bought it from a New York dealer in old coins for $6. Yet at that time only three specimens were known of.

No one knows why there are so few left, for the mint records show that 17,796 half eagles were struck in 1822. One of the two other specimens is in the coin cabinet at the Philadelphia Mint, while the private collection of Virgil M. Brand contains the third.

The half eagle is the most popular coin with the collectors of all the American series of gold coins, and it leads all the rest in the number of varieties. Some 250 varieties of this denomination have been issued. Of other gold coins there have been issued 177 varieties of the eagle, 132 of the double eagle, seventy-nine of the gold dollars, sixty-five of the quarter eagles and forty-seven of the three dollar piece.

The design of the rare 1822 five dollar gold piece was not different from the other dates of the period. The design on the obverse has the head of Liberty, of about the same character as that used on all the silver coins up to the time of the change of general design in 1836. A cap surmounts the head, on the band of which is the word "Liberty," while around the border are thirteen stars.

The first time this coin was offered at public sale was in 1890, when the specimen owned by Lorin G. Parmelee of Boston brought $900.

The half eagle is the oldest of the gold coins, having first been issued in 1795, the second year of operation of the United States Mint. From that date it was issued steadily until 1801, in which year none was issued. Their coinage was resumed in 1802 and continued until 1816, during which year and 1817 none was struck. In 1818 their coinage again began, and they have been issued regularly each year ever since.

A great many varieties and dates of the half eagle are held in high esteem besides the 1822 issue. There were two varieties of the 1795 half eagle. Recently these varieties in superb condition, brought $160 each.

Three varieties were produced in the year 1797. Two varieties of this date sold not long ago for $320, but they looked as if they had come direct from the coinage press, which accounts for the very high premium. Those in ordinary condition are worth a great deal less.

In 1815 only 635 coins of the five dollar value were coined, and up to the present time this piece has been regarded as the rarest of the gold coins. The King of Sweden, who owns one of the world's greatest coin collections, made the record for this coin some years ago, when he paid $2,000 for a specimen to complete his series of American issues. At a recent sale $1,050 was paid for a specimen of the same date, which makes the 1804 dollar now rank third in point of rarity.

Only five of the 635 coins originally issued are now known. The value of this coin also was not appreciated until recent years, for it was not very long ago that a good specimen could be bought for $50.

A remarkable coin in the five dollar series is that of 1819. The mint records show that 51,273 were struck, and yet a single one brought $550. The scarcity of this coin presents another problem hard to solve.

The 1821 half eagle has brought $300, which is still another source of wonderment, for 36,641 were issued. Another rarity is that of 1826, which brought $100, yet 18,069 were coined originally.

IMPORTANCE OF THE NOSE.

If Knocked Out of Shape Heavy Damages Are Usually Given.

A contributor to the British Medical Journal amuses himself at some length on the relative market value of parts of the human organism, says the Boston Transcript. He begins with the nose. This of itself is sufficient to commend the writer to our respect. He shows some sense of the fitness of things, and we feel we can trust him when he comes to the eye and the ear. The nose is a very fine thing. Life would be incomplete without it. Even Cyrano de Bergerac would have missed his, and we should have missed a great play if Cyrano had been without his nose. Those of us who still possess a nose often forget its immense importance. Let us by all means have somebody to celebrate the nose.

"A misshapen nose," observes this profound thinker, "will spoil the most beautiful face." And at once we have to be thankful for some fresh information, some fresh These truths have shock and thrill of a good "A damaged nose his exquisite wa pines of a young w any man's prospects ly a young clergyman of England who had horse and mutilated his process was the authorities noses must be correct in of England.

LEAVES AS FERTILIZERS.

Agricultural Method Practised With Success in France.

The Nantes market gardeners, the most expert commercial cultivators in France, owe their success primarily to the use of leaves of trees as a fertilizer, according to a correspondent of the London Globe. The leaves that fall from the trees in the district are carefully collected each autumn. They are put into heaps with loam and are left to decay. The result is a compost far more valuable than can be provided by the aid of loam and manure. Freshly gathered leaves from trees are also used as a mulch to protect crops from frost during the winter months, with excellent results. They are also fried and used freely for bedding material for horses and cows. The manure thus obtained is far more valuable than that furnished by the aid of straw. In English agricultural circles straw is considered to be of greater fertilizing value than leaves. This is an error. Scientific investigation has disclosed the fact that decayed leaves are of greater fertilizing value than even manure. In pear leaves the contents of nitrogen was 1.86 per cent.; in oak leaves, 1.18 per cent.; in poplar, 0.75 per cent.; beech, 0.78 per cent.; elm, 0.73 per cent., and in the vine, 0.35 per cent. A comparison with leaves and manure in respect to their fertilizing properties disclosed the following facts: 44 pounds of pear leaves, 80 pounds of poplar, 51 pounds of peach, 82 pounds of elm and 174 pounds of vine, respectively, are equal in nitrogen to 100 pounds of manure. A valuable table might be compiled showing the fertilizing value of the leaves of all of the various English trees. It is known to some gardeners that the most delicious seakale forced in this country is obtained by the aid of a thick and closely packed mulching of tree leaves.

Took Fish's Temperature.

There appears to be no limit to scientific curiosity, especially in the United States. Recently an official of the Fish Commission at Washington wishing to ascertain whether fish are warmer than the water they live in, stuck a needle connected with the thermo-electric circuit into a living fish in an aquarium. The needle formed one element of the circuit, while the other element was immersed in the same water that contained the fish. The latter was not seriously injured by the needle, and soon became indifferent to it. Then, as the fish swam about, carrying the needle, the ingenious investigator closed the circuit and carefully observed the galvanometer. It showed no deflection whatever, from which fact he drew the conclusion that the fish and the water were precisely equal in temperature, for had either been warmer than the other a current would have been generated in the circuit.

It Was His Job.

One day last winter Representative Cushman, of the State of Washington, was entertaining a constituent at luncheon. A man passed whom Mr. Cushman seized by the arm and presented to his friend.

"This is the man," said Cushman, confidentially, "who has written more stupidities than any other living person."

The man from Washington was so taken back by the remark, which appeared to him to be the height of impoliteness, that he sat in open-mouthed silence. The man introduced, however, took the observation good-naturedly, smiling broadly.

"Perhaps I should add," continued Cushman, "that this gentleman is one of the official stenographers of the House."—Harper's Weekly.

THE PERFECT PEARL.

Said to Have Been Made by a French Chemist.

A French chemist, M. Tecla by name, has recently succeeded after eleven years of research in discovering a process to scientifically produce a pearl that would equal the product of nature. The fact that rubies and pearls have been scientifically produced has stimulated manufacturers of these precious stones to seek a duplicate of the pearl, the popularity of which has been growing steadily in public demand.

To this end perfect specimens of the pearl have been continuously sought after, and in many cases fabulous amounts are frequently paid for a faultless stone. It is said that through a secret known only to himself M. Tecla has succeeded in attaining his ambition to produce what is apparently a genuine pearl at one-sixth the cost of the Orient specimen, a calcareous concretion, indestructible and of the adamant quality and exact weight of the real stone, with a skin of fine and delicate texture and of a clear, almost translucent color, with the subdued irridescent sheen so dear to judges of these fascinating gems. M. Tecla has only recently finished the experimental stage and it will be quite some time before his results will be brought before the public.—London Spectator.

Once a man who had the reputation of never having been beaten for the position of orderly came from another regiment. Private Haarscher and the newcomer, as luck would have it, were detailed for guard the same day. The whole garrison turned out to see which one the adjutant would pick for the coveted place. To all outward appearance there was no difference in the neatness and soldierly appearance of the two men.

The officer spent about twenty minutes examining the rifles, belts, cartridge boxes and brasses of the two soldiers. There was absolutely nothing to choose between them in point of neatness of appearance. Finally, as a last resort, the adjutant unbuttoned the blouse of the new claimant for orderly honors. He found a somewhat faded but absolutely clean undershirt.

The officer passed to Haarscher and undid three buttons of his blouse. Haarscher had on a brand new suit of silk underwear that must have cost him a month's pay. It was the other man on that day who walked past post in the hot sun, while Haarscher did "lolling duty" in the shade in front of the commandant's quarters. He was a Frenchman through and through, and he was more proud of it than of anything else save the American citizenship which he had won by enlisting under the American flag.—Chicago Post.

An Old Friend.

The late Sim Reeves was fond of telling a story that related to an early engagement in Glasgow, which was arranged through a metropolitan agency. One of the items on the program was "Hail, Smiling Morn," and of course Mr. Reeves was put down for the solo portion. The chorus consists of an echo, and the London agent assured the solist that a satisfactory choir had been engaged.

The whole matter was settled hurriedly. Mr. Reeves was at first disinclined to accept, as other engagements prevented him from reaching Glasgow in time for a rehearsal with the choir.

"Don't worry about that, my dear sir," said the agent. "You will find the choir perfect."

The concert was a success and in due course "Hail, Smiling Morn" was called for. When the soloist came to the lines requiring an echo he delivered them in his best manner—"At whose bright presence darkness flees away." Imagine his horror when the echo repeated his words in the broadest Scotch:

"Flees awa', flees awa'!"

Yet Sims Reeves averred that not a person in the audience smiled or appeared to see anything incongruous. When he talked over the matter with a bailie after the concert, the good man assured him.

"That's just nothing at all. You were a little wrong in your pronunciation and the echo was correct. You see, it was a Scottish echo."

BOY'S TERRIBLE ECZEMA.

Mouth and Eyes Covered With Crusts—Hands Pinned Down—Miraculous Cure by Cuticura.

"When my little boy was six months old he had eczema. The sores extended so quickly over the whole body that we at once called in the doctor. We then went to another doctor, but he could not help him, and in our despair we went to a third one. Matters became so bad that he had regular holes in his cheeks, large enough to put a finger into. The food had to be given with a spoon, for his mouth was covered with crusts as thick as a finger, and whenever he opened the mouth they began to bleed and suppurate, as did also his eyes. Hands, arms, chest and back, in short, the whole body, was covered over and over. We had no rest by day or night. Whenever he was laid in his bed we had to pin his hands down, otherwise he would scratch his face, and make an open sore. I think his face must have itched most fearfully.

"We finally thought nothing could help, and I had made up my mind to send my wife with the child to Europe, hoping that the sea air might cure him, otherwise he was to be put under good medical care there. But, Lord be blessed, matters came differently, and we soon saw a miracle. A friend of ours spoke about Cuticura. We made a trial with Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent, and within ten days or two weeks we noticed a decided improvement. Just as quickly as the sickness had appeared it also began to disappear, and within ten weeks the child was absolutely well, and his skin was smooth and white as never before. F. The Faith of the Boy.

The four-year-old son of a certain western senator had a very high opinion of the importance of his father, says the American Spectator. The latter tells how, on one occasion in their western home, the lad came across a magazine in which, by some chance, there were engraved side by side portraits of the president and the senator mentioned.

When the lad caught sight of his father's features he broke into a broad smile. "That's a good picture of you, daddy," he said.

"Very good, my son."

"Who's the man next to you, daddy?" asked the youngster.

"Why, my son!" exclaimed the senator; "don't you know? That is one of the greatest men of the world, a man more powerful than a king. That, my son, is President Roosevelt."

The lad again looked at the picture of the president. Then, after a thoughtful pause, he observed:

"Say, daddy, the people in the east will be awful proud when they see the president's picture next to yours, won't they?"

What is a Backache?
IT IS NATURE'S WARNING TO WOMEN
Diseases of Woman's Organism Cured and Consequent Pain Stopped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.
"It seems as though my back would break." Women utter these words over and over again, but continue to drag along and suffer with aches in the small of the back, pain low down in the side, "bearing-down" pains, nervousness and no ambition for any task.

Miss Maude Morris

They do not realize that the back is the mainspring of woman's organism, and quickly indicates by aching a diseased condition of the female organs or kidneys, and that the aches and pains will continue until the cause is removed.
Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been for many years the one and only effective remedy in such cases. It speedily cures female and kidney disorders and restores the female organs to a healthy condition.
"I have suffered with female troubles for over two years, suffering intense pain each month, my back ached until it seemed as though it would break, and I felt so weak all over that I did not find strength to attend to my work but had to stay in bed a large part of the first two or three days every month. I would have sleepless nights, bad dreams and severe headaches. All this undermined my health.
"We consulted an old family physician, who advised that I try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I began taking it regularly and soon found that I could sleep and eat better than I had done for months. Within two months I became regular and I no longer suffer from backache or pain."—Miss Maude Morris, Sec. Ladies' Aid and Mission Society, 85 E. Hunter St., Atlanta, Ga.

CLEARS UP THE COMPLEXION.

Florence Drug Co. say Laxakola Tonic Tablets Work Wonders for the Skin.

It is hard to tell just why these tablets have become so popular with Clanton ladies, but considering the short time they have been advertised, the demand for them has been cause for wonder. They are no difference in appearance from other laxative tablets, but they really must possess unusual merit, for from our own personal observation we know that they always do just what is expected of them.

Their action upon the skin and complexion is remarkable, for the principal ingredient in them is extracts of dandelion, and your own doctor will tell you that dandelion is one of the greatest skin alteratives known to the profession.

If your bowels are inactive, your skin sallow, your tongue coated, your breath foul, and if you are troubled with pimples, bilious spells and sick headache, a 25 cent package of Laxakola Tonic Tablets will clear up your complexion, tone up your liver, encourage the action of your bowels and make you sweet, clean and healthy, inside and out, or Florence Drug co. will gladly pay back your money.

MAKE MONEY.

Here is an interesting study: Make out a list of all the people you know, and estimate the amount of money each one earns in a year. Total it up. The amount will be surprisingly large. Now, of all those people, only the few who SAVE SOMETHING really MAKE anything at all. Simply earning money isn't making it; what slips through the earner's fingers is finally "made" by somebody else. Don't forget to count yourself in on the list, and if you are not "making" money, begin now to save with us. One dollar will open your bank account.

Clanton, July 25, 1906

Editor Banner: I saw a letter in last week's Banner from Mr. R. E. Roper in regard to rural route No 7, and I wish to say that the establishment of this route is largely due to the untiring efforts of Mr. Roper. He has exerted himself always to assist me when getting the routes establised, and circulated the first petition for a route that was established in this county.

I hope that the patrons on route No. 7 will be prompt in getting their boxes, as I had to guarantee, in my official capacity, that the people would get the boxes before the Department would agree to the establishment of the route.

I have a petition being circulated now for route 8, and if the board of county commissioners will build a bridge across Walnut Creek, near Mr. James Connell's place, I feel confident that it will be established.

Respectfully,
FELIX O. DUDLEY,
Postmaster.

NOTICE.

A CHALLENGE.

To the Republican nominee for Representative of Chilton county in the coming campaign, whoever you may be:

I hereby challenge you to joint discusston of the issues of the day at such times and places as the executive committees of our parties may agree upon. I am not yet the nominee of my party, but I know I am of and for the whole people and I await their verdict.

Respectfully,
F. A. GULLEDGE.

Editor Banner—I don't want to weary your good patience, but let me in for a few words. We are having lots of rain and grass plenty and politics' roar in the distance, but we are waiting and lying on our arms until the time comes when we will give Publicans and sinners a defeat that will surprise the natives. I am not a politician but I can see some things about the administration that looks funny and one is how our present officials are saving our county's money. Some of our last grand jurors were talking about moving to Clanton, as they had such a long job and expected to go there again next court of course. Wishing you a long and happy life, I will close.

Editor Banner—I have been asked to define my position on the stock law question, by both my friends, as well as those who oppose my candidacy.

1st. I have always thought it best for the people that each man take care of his own stock, and hence I have always, and yet favor stock law, provided, a majority of those concerned favor and would vote for same. This is provided by our present State constitution, which each voter should read and know for himself, and thus would see that if I am elected I could not meddle with in the Legislature.

2d. Beats five and ten had a so-called stock law passed by the Legislature four years ago, and which I favored, but I never went to the Legislature nor about it to get the bill passed, as I am charged with by the opposition, and Mr. Pounds knows it. Have not been in the halls of the Legislature in fifteen years.

3d. When we voted out stock law in Beats five and ten, I said to the people there, who had been mad with me for a year, that I would never take any part in stock law there again, but that whenever they got ready and wanted it, if they would get up the law I would live up to its requirements, and this ended all trouble or offense in Beats five and ten so far as I was concerned. Since then many of those who first opposed, now favor stock law and something has been said about these beats, or even the county, voting on a question of a three wire fence, thus allowing all cattle, horses and other large stock to run at large, while hogs are kept up. This I would favor if a majority of the voters concerned should say they favored it by their ballots. If it should be defeated by one vote then I say leave it off, but I feel sure that eventually will have it, as all progressive countries now have.

4th. I want to say to the whole people of Chilton county once more and for all, that if elected I faithfully pledge my sacred honor that I will do all I can for the interest of the whole people without distinction as to their political faith, but that I will do nothing against even my enemies.

5th. I trust that no one will charge me with any ulterior motive and in this connection I wish to say that my purpose in making this race is the upbuilding of my county and State and its people, together with what honor there may be in the little trust reposed in me if elected.

F. A. GULLEDGE.

One reason for the apparent increase of evil in the world, notes the Christian Register, is that we take notice of it in the effort to reduce it.

And now the billiard experts are saying that Sutton is the best "cueist." The "reform" of the English language goes on apace.

It is reported that more than 100 Jewish families move into Jerusalem every week. Though most of them are very poor, yet they find means to make a scanty living. Jerusalem is rapidly becoming once more a Jewish city.

The manufacturer who sells pork under the name of chicken or secretly distributes cocaine and morphine to innocent consumers of his "medicine" is no more deserving of protection than the meat packer who sends out filthy or diseased beef, is the decision of the New York Tribune.

Wall Street does not pay much real attention to ordinary muck-rake developments nowadays, observes Town Topics, but it did sit up and notice when the Beef Trust story came along, and there were manifestitions of regret in some quarters that the Chicago fellows had kept all that profitable business to themselves. The full details of the fabrication of veal scraps and pork fat into "potted chicken" with a fancy label and a fancier price transfixed several of the old stagers in the Street with the possibilities of the business. After all, they thought, if it looked like chicken and tasted like chicken and didn't kill on closer acquaintance, what's all the row about?

The French are ruling themselves, making a success of it. They are rich, prosperous, sane, thoroughly respected and feared by their neighbors. They prove splendidly the logic of the French mind and the power of men to govern themselves when the mass of the people actually concentrate their minds on public questions and upon government, declares the Boston American. In France there is done by the average citizen at least a thousand times as much earnest thinking on national politics as is done in this country. It would be good for the United States if we could have injected into our political methods a little of that intense interest in public affairs that characterizes the French nation.

The appeal to commercialism made by those who are anxious to avoid rigid inspection of meats can not be effective, declares The Commoner. Meat packing is a great industry and stock raising is a great industry; but it would be better that every packing house in the land be closed, and better that the raising of cattle for food purposes be abandoned than that the men, women and children of America be fed upon poisoned food. Those politicians who are temporizing upon this serious matter are playing with fire. Already the meat industry has suffered because thousands of people have ceased for a time to eat meat, driven from that food through the fear of poison. The only way to save the industry is by a system of inspection that will inspect. To establish this system the co-operation of State and municipal governments with the Federal government will be necessary.

A writer in the Revue de Paris declares that Milwaukee is the real capital of German America. It has the privilege and the glory of being the most German of all the cities in the United States. It is a Teutonic Athens, the repository of the Germanic Idea, "the sanctuary where is preserved intact and pure the language elsewhere so corrupted by English." A lady who had recently arrived from Germany was asked by one of her Americanized countrymen whether she was from Milwaukee, as she spoke her native language with such remarkable purity. The writer might have added, however, that while the German far surpasses the Frenchman in the facility with which he learns to speak English, the Franco-American after a few months of residence in this country speaks a more corrupt form of his native tongue than does the German. American idioms and American slang are translated into the speech even of those Frenchmen who cannot express their thoughts in English.

BRITAIN'S RICHEST MAN DEAD

Alfred Beit Controlled the World's Diamond Mines.

He Made an Enormous Fortune in South Africa and Died a Bachelor—Estimated Wealth $150,000,000.

London.—Alfred Beit the richest man in England, "Diamond King" of the world, art connoisseur and philanthropist in many fields, died of an illness from which he had been suffering since he was stricken with paralysis early in 1903. Born in Hamburg in 1853, Mr. Beit, a man in the prime of life when he died, had accumulated a fortune from diamond and gold mines and other South African interests variously estimated at between $120,000,000 and $150,000,000.

In the death of Mr. Beit, the man whose word controlled the price of diamonds, has passed from the world. He was by far the most powerful man in the South African diamond trade, and aside from this hold on the diamond output he had a controlling interest in the gold mines of that country. In the early days of the South African development Mr. Beit became intimately associated in business with Cecil Rhodes. That the friendship then formed lasted until the death of Mr. Rhodes in 1902 was shown by the fact that Mr. Beit was made one of the executors of the enormous Rhodes estate.

Mr. Beit was a life governor of the De Beers Consolidated Mines, a partner in the firm of Wernher, Beit & Co., and a director in the Rand Mines, Rhodesia Railways, Bechuanaland Railway Trust, Consolidated Company, Bullfontein Mine and British South African Company. When the Jamison Commission, appointed to investigate the South African raid, met for the purpose of placing the blame for its inauguration, Mr. Beit testified as a witness. He was afterward accused of complicity in the raid itself, and as a result of the accusation tendered his resignation from the Board of Directors of the British Chartered South Africa Company. His resignation was accepted. A suit was brought against him on the ground that he assisted the raiders by his financial backing, and his prosecution was demanded by Dr. Leyd, the representative of the Transvaal in Europe.

Mr. Beit had only one passion in private life and that was the collection of valuable pictures. Though he spent millions of dollars in its gratification his wide knowledge of the value of pictures made him immune from the many swindles perpetrated upon rich patrons of art. Of a generous disposition on almost every subject, he held to his convictions with an untiring tenacity of purpose. Never having married he was strongly opposed to the marriage of those in his employ. An anecdote in illustration is told of him. In 1894 his private secretary came to him with a request for a holiday in order to get married. He was told by his employer he could choose between his employment and his prospective wife. The young man chose marriage and lost his position, but Mr. Beit presented him a check of $25,000 as a wedding present.

Among the many acts of philanthropy in his life are the establishment of a new building of the new technical school in this city, establishment of a professorship for the promotion of Colonial History in Oxford, and a recent donation of $500,000 to found a university in Hamburg.

The markets were not affected by the death of Mr. Beit, as since his stroke of paralysis in 1903 it had been realized that his death might come suddenly.

NEARLY 500 TO LOSE WORK.

Carnegie Company Employes Affected by Failure to Get Contract.

Pittsburg, Pa.—Nearly five hundred employes of the armor plate department of the Carnegie Steel Company's plant in Homestead will be thrown out of work for two years or more as a result of the company losing the contract for supplying armor plate for the battleships South Carolina and Michigan.

The department is practically at a standstill. All the government work was completed several months ago, and about four hundred and fifty men were thrown out of employment. About fifty men are now engaged in making safe plates and other light work. Contracts for furnishing this material have about been filled, and in a few weeks the department will close down altogether.

PRISONER KILLS HIMSELF.

N. M. Riggs, Arrested For Murder, Takes His Own Life.

Elroy, Wis.—N. M. Riggs, who was arrested here in connection with the murder of Millie Ellison, in Minneapolis, shot himself, dying instantly.

When arrested Riggs asked to be taken to see his wife and daughter, who are visiting in the country. He returned and talked with many friends, being apparently cheerful, but somewhat pale.

Riggs asked permission to go to his room in the hotel, and then shot himself through the temple.

Pig Iron Firm.

Pig iron displays more firmness and considerable business has been booked, while finished lines could hardly be in a better position.

President Makes Hay.

President Roosevelt helped to make hay at Sagamore Hill, after spending a night in camp on Eaton's Neck, where he slept out in the rain.

To Fight Ice Trust.

The Mayors of Mount Vernon and Yonkers, N. Y., devised plans to fight the Ice Trust's exactions.

LADY CURZON DIES SUDDENLY

She Was Mary Leiter, of Chicago, Before Marriage.

Lord Curzon Became Viceroy of India—She Brought Fortune and Fame to Him.

London.—Lady Curzon is dead. She never entirely recovered from the serious crisis she passed through at Walmer Castle, Kent, in 1904, and the hot weather brought on a pronounced attack of general debility. The immediate cause of death was a weak heart.

With the death of Lady Curzon, who was Mary Leiter, of Chicago, before her marriage, there is brought to a premature close the story of a rare and beautiful devotion. Since her marriage in 1895 to George N. Curzon, eldest son of the Rev. Alfred Nathaniel Holden Curzon, fourth Baron of Scarsdale, she has made possible not only through her wealth, but through her own personal qualities of tact and charm, one of the brilliant and useful careers of modern English politics. Her extensive entertainments in England immediately after her marriage won for her husband, who had only slender means at his command, countless friends. He was promoted rapidly until when still a young man he was made Viceroy of India, the most important executive post of the colonial system of the British Empire. She married an Under Secretary of State and she dies leaving a husband who is one of the high noblemen of the realm, full of honors and loaded with decorations and appointments.

Mary Leiter Curzon was the daughter of Levi Z. Leiter, who amassed a fortune as a partner in the dry goods firm of Marshall Field & Co. She was born in Chicago, and the first thirteen years of her life were passed there. The family moved to Washington, and the girl's education was carried on by governesses there and various masters in European capitals. In 1888 she made her debut in Washington society and her social career began in the famous old mansion off Dupont Circle, which was built by James G. Blaine.

In 1904 on a visit to England Lady Curzon had passed through an illness from which it was thought at the time she could never recover, and it was the effects of that awful siege that prompted her husband to bring her home. After their return to India Lady Curzon continued in indifferent health. She was never really well again and her death can be traced to her illness of two years ago.

Three children were born of the marriage—Cynthia Blanche in 1896 and Mary Irene in 1898, and a third child in March, 1904.

200 BLUEJACKETS POISONED.

Tainted Liver Bought in Boston Causes Illness on Evans' Fleet.

Washington, D. C.—Word was received at the Navy Department from Admiral Robley D. Evans, at Rockport, Mass., saying that 200 sailors are in care of physicians, because of poisoning by eating tainted liver procured from a Boston vender of meats. An inquiry is under way to ascertain if the meat was unfit for food when purchased, or if improper refrigeration on shipboard causes it to become unfit.

More than thirty of the sailors are very ill, and prolonged treatment will be required. Fatalities will not surprise the surgeons. It appears that the commissary department, in charge of the purveying for the fleet at Rockport, numbering more than forty vessels, from gigantic battleships to diminutive gunboats, went to the Boston Navy Yard's provisioner for advice.

He was directed to a firm who buys from one of the "Big Four" packers.

An order for two tons of liver was filled, and the regulations require a rigid inspection.

Admiral Evans, who is much perturbed and angry, is endeavoring to find out if orders were obeyed.

So great importance here is attached to the matter that the Acting Secretary has ordered that a careful test be made of all refrigerators in the naval squadron, as well as the food receptacles. The naval authorities decline to give the names of the sick sailors. Advices from Boston say the meat venders insist that the liver was in good condition when delivered.

AFTER ICE COMPANIES.

St. Louis Prosecutor Sues Alleged Trust For $142,800.

St. Louis.—After an investigation of three weeks, Circuit Attorney Sager filed suits in the Circuit Court against the Polar Wave Ice and Fuel Company and the Merchants' Ice and Coal Company, on the allegation that these companies are in an alleged combination to restrain trade and to fix and maintain the price of ice.

The suit asks that judgment for $71,400 be assessed against each company as fines for the 714 days that the alleged agreement has been in effect, and further asks that the charters under which the companies have been doing business be declared null and void.

The Labor World.

The laborites in England are to have a daily paper, to be called the Majority.

Some 150 Yiddish cooks have started a union on the east side of New York City.

The A. F. of L. is working on lines to organize the express messengers of all the railroads.

Sky Pilots' Union No. 1 has been formed in Chicago. Preachers? No; balloonists. There are about sixty in that city and they want to hold up wages.

THE PULPIT.

AN ELOQUENT SUNDAY SERMON BY REV. GEORGE THOMAS DOWLING.

Subject: "The Secret of Peace."

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Dr. Thomas Edward Dowling, minister in charge of St. James's P. E. Church, St. James place and Lafayette avenue, preached Sunday morning on the subject, "The Secret of Peace," a study of the Shepherd Psalm. Dr. Dowling said:

Thirty centuries ago there lived in Palestine a king, who in his boyhood had been a shepherd lad. And in his old age, when he had seen life, with its sorrows and its joys, this king, David, sang a song, which it takes less than two minutes deliberately to repeat.

Three thousand years have gone since then; and to-day everything he owned has turned to dust except his songs. The throne on which he sat—dust; the palace where he dwelt—dust; the harp which his fingers were accustomed to sweep, the banner with which he led the hosts of Israel, his chariots, and his charioteers—all dust! But to-day that song goes singing its way to the universal heart, in the cottage of the poor and the mansion of the rich, in the home of the learned and of the unlearned, because it sings of what all the world is hungering for—peace.

When Edward Irving swept through the gates it was with this song upon his lips. Luther called it the "Little Bible," and so it is, for it contains in miniature the whole book. Henry Ward Beecher, who once made Brooklyn famous, that greatest preacher the world has ever known since Paul stood on Mars Hill, called it "the nightingale's song," because it sings to us in the darkness. Listen while I repeat it to you, that it may once again sing its way into your heart. (Dr. Dowling here repeated deliberately the Twenty-third Psalm.)

Now I yield Him not simply admiration, but adoration. It is the difference between "He leadeth," and "He leadeth me." If you would know what God may be to you, learn to appropriate Him. Learn to think of Him simply not as a God, but your God; not simply as a friend, but your friend; not simply as a shepherd, but your shepherd.

Now, when you receive a gift there are three things which you do with it. You accept it, you examine it, and you use it. And the gift which this royal shepherd poet of three thousand years ago makes to us in this Shepherd Psalm may prove more precious to you than any which you have ever received, if you deal with it in just that way; the way of appropriation, of appreciation and of application.

As you notice how very easy it is to appropriate it, because it abounds with those personal and possessive pronouns, in which, Martin Luther said, the preciousness of the Bible consists: "The Lord is my shepherd." "He leadeth me." "Yea, though I walk through the valley."

What a great difference there is between the mere apprehension of a fact and the appropriation of that fact, between knowing it and claiming it. When you see a child in a runaway, you are moved; but suppose it is your child. There is the same difference that there is between the stately mansion of a stranger and the little cottage in which your mother rocked you in her arms and crooned to you the songs of your babyhod. So, my friends, you never can judge of a religion until it has been transmuted into a personal experience, until it has become your religion. A historical Christ is, at the most, only a Christ. I can look upon Him with admiration. Ah! but when He has become mine, and I have heard His voice, and felt His touch, He is no longer simply a Christ but the Christ.

And then, when you have appropriated this psalm, seek to appreciate it. Notice, to begin with, the perfect spirit of trust which breathes through it all. See how much it has to say about Him and how little about ourselves. Mark how every verse tells us what He is doing.

My dear people, that is the whole secret. The secret of peace is the putting of God between our troubles and ourselves. I know the dark hours which have come into some of your lives; I know your perplexities; for though you are strangers to me as yet, the experience of human hearts is just the same the whole world over, and the joys and the sorrows of the men and women whom I learned so well to know and to love on the Pacific shores are just the joys and the sorrows which you are having today. I knew of the hour when some young mother in this congregation sat sobbing by the side of her little one, whispering blindly, "I do not know why she should be taken from me; I cannot understand it." Well, my dear child, do not try to understand it, for you never can here. Some day I shall preach to you on "Things to be Waited For," and one of the things to be waited for is the understanding of these mysteries of life. And yet we may know that while we are waiting we may be waiting in companionship with Him who understands it all. And there is no other help for us in our dark hours, except in placing Him between our troubles and ourselves.

Wilbur Chapman tells us of a little drummer boy in our civil war who was taken into the hospital mortally wounded, and so they sent for his mother from a distant city. But when she came they said to her, "You cannot go in; he's too sick; he couldn't stand the shock." And so she stood by the door waiting and weeping and listening. And when she heard him sigh, she said to them, "Let me go in: I won't speak to him. I'll just sit by his bedside." And so they permitted her to pass quietly into the darkened room and sit beside him. But as she sat there the mother love was too strong, and, reaching out her hand, she laid it gently upon his aching forehead. He did not open his eyes, but he knew that touch. She saw his lips move, and, stooping down to him, she heard him say: "I knew you'd come to me; I knew you'd come to me." And if you are only willing to welcome Him who loves you more than you ever loved your little one, you may know that He will come to you, and "as one whom his mother comforteth," so will He comfort you.

And notice the blessings which he brings when He comes. As David expresses it in this psalm, "they that belong to Him shall find that their cup 'overfloweth'"; not only abundance, but redundance. It has sometimes seemed as though there were a mixture of figures here, and that as the psalmist neared the end of his song the scene changed from the open fields of the flock to the guarded household of the guest.

But this is not so. One of the most important duties of the shepherd is to find a feeding place for his sheep, where they shall not be injured by poisonous herbs, and where he may defend them against the jackals and the wolves that prowl around. Our Shepherd will protect us and provide for our wants not only in the seclusion of the fold, but while we are still, if need be, out in the world. And so David sings, "Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies."

Then follows the closing scene of the day. The sun is setting, and the flock is being brought home. But some of them have been wounded, and some of them are weary. And so the shepherd stands at the door of the sheepfold, rodding the sheep, as it is termed; holding them back with his rod, permitting them to enter one by one. Here one has been bruised or torn by the briars, and from the horn filled with olive oil he bathes the wounded head. And one is tired and worn, and, dipping into the vessel the large two-handled cup, he gives him a drink. Thus the shepherd cares for his sheep clear on till the very hour of the homecoming. Nothing is forgotten. And so the psalmist sings, still with the picture of the shepherd in his mind, "Thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over." But I am anticipating.

"The Lord is my Shepherd; I shall not want." What? Rest. "He maketh me to lie down in green pastures." But the green pastures have to come first. There is the contemplative life, and the active life. And, my brethren, we need the first; that is the meaning of these services; that is the meaning of Sunday; that is the meaning of Lent. It is a mistake for us to suppose that we can get on in the right life without these green pasture experiences. Somebody says, "I judge of a man by what he does." Yes; but what a man does grows out of what that man is. And here in these contemplative hours we find Christian manhood and womanhood in the making.

And then, there is the leadership: "I shall not want"—guidance; "He leadeth me." That is the other side of the Christian experience; the active side. The purpose of these green pastures is to send us forth to use the strength which here we get.

And in this leadership of His there are two facts which I would have you remember. He goes before us: "He leadeth." He will select no path which his sheep cannot travel. But remember also that the sheep must follow after; we must select no path which He cannot travel.

"He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness," not always by the side of still waters, not always in green pastures—sometimes the sheep track may lie across the wilderness; but if we are following him we may know that they are always "paths of righteousness"—right paths, and that they lead toward home.

And finally, "I shall not want" companionship. "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me." He who is following the Master shall find death itself only a shadow; and who shall be afraid of a shadow? And though the valley may be there and the darkness, He shall lead us out, as He leads us in. Death is not a blind pocket; it is not a place of tarrying, only of transition. I shall walk "through the valley of the shadow of death."

And now, having appropriated this psalm, having sought to appreciate it, let us try to apply it. I mean to-day, here and now, and to-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow, every day. For you observe that until we reach the very last verse it is all in the present tense. He is not speaking of any distant elysium, far away in the future. "The Lord is my shepherd; he maketh me to lie down in green pastures; He leadeth me beside the still waters." All the blessings which I have described may be yours now. Will you take them for yours, and apply them to the problems of your life to-day? Oh, learn to practice the presence of God. Try to think of Him as really at your side. Speak to Him when you are in trouble or perplexity. Suppose you make a test of this Shepherd psalm only for to-day. Suppose you say: "From now until the hour when I fall asleep at night I will seek to live with this thought supreme: that God is mine, and that He loves me, and is leading me." See what it will mean to you in peace and comfort and joy. And then realize that if you can do it for one day, you can do it for every day, and the problem of your life's meaning is solved. And when the last valley shall have been passed, and passed through, and you are drawing near to that fold, which James Lane Allen describes as "the final land where the mystery, the pain, and the yearning of this life will either be infinitely satisfied or infinitely quieted," though you shall have changed your place, you will not change your company: He who was with you here will be with you there, and this song shall still go singing its way on and up into the eternal light: "Goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life, and I dwell in the house of the Lord forever."

All Pervasive.

There is not room enough in all created things for the soul of man—which, like a ship in a narrow river, hath not room to turn, and besides is ever and anon striking ground and foundering in the shallows. Jesus Christ is in every way adequate to the vast desires of the soul; in Him it hath sea room enough, there it may spread all its sails with no fear of touching the bottom.—John Flavel.

THE SUNDAY SCHOO

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMM FOR JULY 29.

Subject: Jesus Dines With a Pha Luke xiv., 1-14—Golden Text, Luke 11—Memory Verses, 13, 14—Topic: Believer's Social Duties—Com

I. The true idea of Sabbath observance (vs. 1-6). 1. "Chief Pharisees" It has been suggested that this man may have been a member of the Sanhedrin with a country home in Perea. "To eat bread." Our Lord had no home, and, when He was invited to dine, it was as proper for Him to go on the Sabbath as on any other day. "They were watching Him." R. V. "were maliciously watching Him."

2. "A certain man." This man may have been brought there by the Pharisee in order to test Christ. "Before Him." Before the company had taken seats at the table. "Dropsy." A disease in which the body or some part of it is filled with water.

3. "Jesus answering spake." Jesus knew they were deceptive and He was ready to meet them. "The lawyers." The teachers of the law who were present. "Is it lawful," etc. They were in a dilemma, as lawyers they ought to know, but if they answered in the affirmative they would endorse Christ and His work, while to answer in the negative would be to show their lack of love and lay themselves liable to a charge similar to that given in chapter 13:15. It was seriously argued that to walk upon the grass with nailed shoes was a violation of the Sabbath. 4. "Held their peace." Unable to condemn, unwilling to concede. But our silence was our Lord's complete public justification. If the contemplated miracle was unlawful why did not these great religious authorities forbid it? "Took him." Took hold of him (Luke 20:20; 1 Tim. 6:12). "Healed him." Showing the opinion of Jesus as to healing on the Sabbath day. "Let him go." Dismissed him and turned back to the Pharisees, whose acrimonious hatred was worse than the poor man's disease.

5. "Fallen into a pit." Jesus silenced them completely by calling attention to the fact that they on the Sabbath day would have mercy on a beast in distress. Read Matt. 12:9-13, Luke 13:14-17. 6. "Could not answer Him." Silent, but not convinced. The question was unanswerable. If they would deliver an ox or an ass from a pit on the Sabbath, by what reason or common sense could they say it was wicked to save a man from his affliction?

II. A parable of humility (vs. 7-11). 7. "A parable." The selfish struggle for precedence as they were taking their places at the table gave Jesus an opportunity to teach a lesson in humility. "When He marked." Nothing escapes the eye of the Lord. "How they chose out." To take the highest place when it is not our due is public vanity; to obstinately refuse it when offered is another instance of the same sin, though private and concealed. "The chief rooms." The chief seats. R. V. The guests reclined on couches around the table which formed three sides of a hollow square. On each side there were three places. The middle place was the most honorable.

8. "Bidden—to a wedding." He speaks of a "marriage feast" (R. V.) because the rules of procedure would be more carefully insisted upon. "Sit not down." The pride that apes humility violates the spirit of this teaching. 9. "He that bade." The host who has authority to decide the matter. "With shame." Sooner or later pride will have a fall.

10. "In the lowest room." The highest place was occupied very briefly; the lowest place was permanent. "Go up higher." The way to rise is to begin low. What Christ commanded He himself did. "Then shalt thou have worship." "Have glory." R. V. reverence, respect and honor in the presence of the company. 11. "Whosoever exalteth," etc. Now follows the great principle illustrated by this parable. Humility is the passport to promotion in the kingdom of God. The one who is proud and seeks to be honored above others, shall be abased, humbled, both by God and man.

III. A lesson on our duty to the poor (vs. 12-14). 12. "Call not thy friends." The second parable is to the host. It is a sharp rebuke on account of a fault which is almost always committed in the choice of guests. "Nor thy rich neighbors." "He that giveth to the rich shall surely come to want" (Prov. 22:16).

13. "Call the poor." Feasts to the poor are not forbidden. He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord. What the Saviour here commends to others He has Himself fulfilled in the most illustrious manner.

14. "Shalt be blessed." The poor who have been fed will bless thee, and so will the Lord. "Resurrection of the just." There is to be a future state; we are all hastening on toward the resurrection. At that time God will reward those who have done good for His sake, without the hope of an earthly recompense.

At last a modern invention has begun to grapple with the task of bringing the primitive method of launching a boat from a ship's side at sea to a condition more worthy of the twentieth century. The present system, clumsy in fine weather and one of deadly peril in storm, alone the launching of the ship's boat reaches its highest has been described as "a disgrace to marine engineering." M. Swedish engineer, has made an to remove the reproach. His apparatus, which has been subjected to many practical tests, has a rangement in the "chocks" drawing of a bolt sets them free permits the boat to glide while there are horizontal keep the boat from crashing the ship's side. As passengers crew can be got into it leaves the davits, the boat clear immediately upon water, which removes another of the great dangers of shipwreck.

AMERICANS LEAVE

Fifty-two Persons on Way to Homes in Ohio. Fear of Poison.

HIS PARTY IN NEW ORLEANS

Anti-Foreign Sentiment Is So Strong That Grave Fears Are Entertained.

New Orleans, La.—E. J. Marber, one of the party of fifty-two American men, women and children who left Mexico because of anti-foreign threats and passed through New Orleans, said that one of the most alarming features of the situation is the fact that Mexican servants have joined in the anti-foreign movement, and the wives of the foreigners are in mortal terror of their families being poisoned by the servants.

"I was reluctant to leave the country, but I simply could not resist the pleadings of the members of my family. I am now taking them to our former home in Ohio.

"The anti-foreign movement is strongest in the northern and central portions of Mexico, where the natives have been wrought up to a high pitch of excitement by agitators and agents of revolutionary societies. Along the Rio Grande border the movement is not so strong because the Mexicans fear the Texans, who know how to shoot.

"The educated class of Mexicans is not in sympathy with the anti-foreign movement, but is in a hopeless minority. The army is recruited from the lower classes and cannot be relied upon. The uprising is scheduled to take place in September, and if it starts it will be necessary for the United States to throw an army across the border in order to protect American citizens.

"The anti-foreign sentiment has grown to such an extent that I do not believe the Mexican government can cope with its successfully."

Other members of the party include men with their families bound for Kentucky, Tennessee and states farther east. In all there are seven men, seven women and thirty-eight children.

L. & N. Official Under Arrest.

Louisville, Ky.—J. M. Scott, chief train dispatcher of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, with headquarters in this city, was arrested by a deputy United States marshal charged with violating section 10 of the act of June 1898, entitled "an act regarding carriers in interstate commerce and their employes."

The affidavit upon which the warrant for the arrest was based was made by H. B. Pelham, president of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers. He states that Edwin L. Rowe, a telegrapher, was dismissed by Scott in April, 1904, because of his relations with the Order of Railway Telegraphers.

He makes further affidavit to the effect that in April, 1904, Scott discharged another telegraph operator named V. Poynter, of Princeton, Ky., because the latter was a member of the telegraphers' union.

Scott was released on bond of $200 to appear before United States Commissioner Cassin next Saturday for a preliminary hearing.

Electric Railroad Seventy Miles Long.

New York.—Announcement has been made in this city that surveys and estimates have been completed in Illinois and Indiana for an electric railroad seventy miles in length, to be known as the Chicago, Lake Shore and South Bend railway. The terminals of the road will be South Bend and Hammond, and it is planned that the line shall be continued from Hammond into Kensington by the Illinois Central railroad, then connecting with its main line for through service into Chicago. A steamer service on Lake Michigan is planned in connection with the new road.

Coal Miner Is Acquitted.

Fulton, Mo.—The jury in the case of Almund Bailey, a coal miner charged with murdering Jay Lawder, his employer, a wealthy coal operator, returned a verdict of not guilty and Bailey was discharged. Bailey shot Lawder because of the latter's relations with Mrs. Bailey.

French Lose Fifteen.

Paris.—Unofficial advices from Senegambia, West Africa, announce that a severe fight has taken place between natives and French troops. The latter lost fifteen men killed and two officers wounded.

Will Not Be a Candidate.

Tuscumbia, Ala.—Joseph H. Nathan, of Sheffield, appointed last January by Gov. William D. Jelks to succeed E. B. Almon as judge of the Eleventh judicial circuit, composed of the counties of Lauderdale, Colbert, Franklin and Winston, announces that he will not be a candidate for election at the approaching August primary, thus leaving the race to Paul Hodges, of Lauderdale; Isaac Orme, of Colbert, and Charles P. Almon, of Franklin.

THE SUNDAY SCHOO

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMM FOR JULY 29.

Subject: Jesus Dines With a Pharise Luke xiv., 1-14—Golden Text, Luke xiv. 11—Memory Verses, 13, 14—Topic: The Believer's Social Duties—Comm

I. The true idea of Sabbath observ ance (vs. 1-6). 1. "Chief Pharisees." It has been suggested that this man may have been a member of the Sanhedri with a country home in Perea. "To eat bread." Our Lord had no home and, when He was invited to dine, it was as proper for Him to go on the Sabbath as on any other day. "They were watching Him." R. V. "were maliciously watching Him.

2. "A certain man." This man may have been brought there by the Pharisee in order to test Christ. "Before Him." Before the company had taken seats at the table. "Dropsy." A disease in which the body or some part of it is filled with water.

3. "Jesus answering spake." Jesus knew they were deceptive, and He was ready to meet them. "The lawyers." The teachers of the law who were present. "Is it lawful," etc. They are in a dilemma, as lawyers they ought to know, but if they answered in the affirmative they would endorse Christ and His work, while to answer in the negative would be to show their lack of love and lay themselves liable to a charge similar to that given in chapter 13:15. It was seriously argued that to walk upon the grass with nailed shoes was a violation of the Sabbath. 4. "Held their peace." Unable to condemn, unwilling to concede. But such silence was our Lord's complete public justification. If the contemplated miracle was unlawful why did not these great religious authorities forbid it? "Took him." Took hold of him (Luke 20:20; 1 Tim. 6:12). "Healed him." Showing the opinion of Jesus as to healing on the Sabbath day. "Let him go." Dismissed him and turned back to the Pharisees, whose sanctimonious hatred was worse than this poor man's disease.

5. "Fallen into a pit." Jesus silenced them completely by calling attention to the fact that they on the Sabbath day would have mercy on a beast in distress. Read Matt. 12:10-13; Luke 13:14-17. 6. "Could not answer Him." Silent, but not convinced. The question was unanswerable. If they would deliver an ox or an ass from a pit on the Sabbath, by what reason or common sense could they say it was wicked to save a man from his affliction

II. A parable of humility (vs. 7-11). 7. "A parable." The selfish struggle for precedence as they were taking their places at the table gave Jesus an opportunity to teach a lesson in humility. "When He marked." Nothing escapes the eye of the Lord. "How they chose out." To take the highest place when it is not our due is public vanity; to obstinately refuse it when offered is another instance of the same vice though private and concealed. "The chief rooms." The chief seats. R. V. The guests reclined on couches around the table which formed three sides of a hollow square. On each side there were three places. The middle place was the most honorable.

8. "Bidden—to a wedding." He speaks of a "marriage feast" (R. V.) because the rules of procedure would be more carefully insisted upon. "Sit not down." The pride that apes humility violates the spirit of this teaching. 9. "He that bade." The host who has authority to decide the matter. "With shame." Sooner or later pride will have a fall.

10. "In the lowest room." The highest place was occupied very briefly; the lowest place was permanent. "Go up higher." The way to rise is to begin low. What Christ commanded He Himself did. "Then shalt thou have worship." "Have glory." R. V. Have reverence, respect and honor in the presence of the company. 11. "Whosoever exalteth," etc. Now follows the great principle illustrated by this parable. Humility is the passport to promotion in the kingdom of God. The one who is proud and seeks to be honored above others, shall be abased, or humbled, both by God and man.

III. A lesson on our duty to the poor (vs. 12-14). 12. "Call not thy friends." The second parable is to the host. It is a sharp rebuke on account of a fault which is almost always committed in the choice of guests. "Nor thy rich neighbors." "He that giveth to the rich shall surely come to want" (Prov. 22:16).

13. "Call the poor." Feasts to the poor are not forbidden. He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord. What the Saviour here commends to others He has Himself fulfilled in the most illustrious manner.

14. "Shalt be blessed." The poor who have been fed will bless thee, and so will the Lord. "Resurrection of the just." There is to be a future state, we are all hastening on toward the resurrection. At that time God will reward those who have done good for His sake, without the hope of an earthly recompense.

At last a modern invention has begun to grapple with the task of bringing the primitive method of launching a boat from a ship's side at sea to a condition more worthy of the twentieth century. The present system, clumsy in fine weather, and one of deadly peril in storm, when alone the launching of the ship's boat reaches its highest necessity, has been described as "a disgrace to marine engineering." M. Welin, a Swedish engineer, has made an effort to remove the reproach. His apparatus, which has been subjected to many practical tests, has a hinge arrangement in the "chocks;" the drawing of a bolt sets them free and permits the boat to glide outward, while there are horizontal arms to keep the boat from crashing against the ship's side. As passengers and crew can be got into it before it leaves the davits, the boat can be clear immediately upon touching water, which removes another of the great dangers of shipwreck.

AMERICANS LEAVE

Fifty-two Persons on Way to Homes in Ohio. Fear of Poison.

PARTY IN NEW ORLEANS.

Anti-Foreign Sentiment Is So Strong That Grave Fears Are Entertained.

New Orleans, La.—E. J. Mather, one of the party of fifty-two American men, women and children who left Mexico because of anti-foreign threats and passed through New Orleans, said that one of the most alarming features of the situation is the fact that Mexican servants have joined in the anti-foreign movement, and the wives of the foreigners are in mortal terror of their families being poisoned by the servants.

"I was reluctant to leave the country, but I simply could not resist the pleadings of the members of my family. I am now taking them to our former home in Ohio.

"The anti-foreign movement is strongest in the northern and central portions of Mexico, where the natives have been wrought up to a high pitch of excitement by agitators and agents of revolutionary societes. Along the Rio Grande border the movement is not so strong because the Mexicans fear the Texans, who know how to shoot.

"The educated class of Mexicans is not in sympathy with the anti-foreign movement, but is in a hopeless minority. The army is recruited from the lower classes and cannot be relied upon. The uprising is scheduled to take place in September, and if it starts it will be necessary for the United States to throw an army across the border in order to protect American citizens.

"The anti-foreign sentiment has grown to such an extent that I do not believe the Mexican government can cope with its successfully."

Other members of the party include men with their families bound for Kentucky, Tennessee and states farther east. In all there are seven men, seven women and thirty-eight children.

L & N. Official Under Arrest.

Louisville, Ky.—J. M. Scott, chief train dispatcher of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, with headquarters in this city, was arrested by a deputy United States marshal charged with violating section 10 of the act of June, 1898, entitled "an act regarding carriers in interstate commerce and their employes."

The affidavit upon which the warrant for the arrest was based was made by H. B. Pelham, president of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers. He states that Edwin L. Rowe, a telegrapher, was dismissed by Scott in April, 1904, because of his relations with the Order of Railway Telegraphers.

He makes further affidavit to the effect that in April, 1904, Scott discharged another telegraph operator named V. Poynter, of Princeton, Ky., because the latter was a member of the telegraphers' union.

Scott was released on bond of $200 to appear before United States Commissioner Cassin next Saturday for a preliminary hearing.

Electric Railroad Seventy Miles Long.

New York.—Announcement has been made in this city that surveys and estimates have been completed in Illinois and Indiana for an electric railroad seventy miles in length, to be known as the Chicago, Lake Shore and South Bend railway. The terminals of the road will be South Bend and Hammond, and it is planned that the line shall be continued from Hammond into Kensington by the Illinois Central railroad, then connecting with its main line for through service into Chicago. A steamer service on Lake Michigan is planned in connection with the new road.

Coal Miner Is Acquitted.

Fulton, Mo.—The jury in the case of Armand Bailey, a coal miner charged with murdering Jay Lawder, his employer, a wealthy coal operator, returned a verdict of not guilty and Bailey was discharged. Bailey shot Lawder because of the latter's relations with Mrs. Bailey.

French Loss Fifteen.

Paris.—Unofficial advices from Senegambia, West Africa, announce that a severe fight has taken place between natives and French troops. The latter lost fifteen men killed and two officers wounded.

Will Not Be a Candidate.

Tuscumbia, Ala.—Joseph H. Nathan, of Sheffield, appointed last January by Gov. William D. Jelks to succeed E. B. Almon as judge of the Eleventh judicial circuit, composed of the counties of Lauderdale, Colbert, Franklin and Marion, announces that he will not be a candidate for election at the approaching August primary, thus leaving the race to Paul Hodges, of Lauderdale; Isaac Orme, of Colbert, and Charles P. Almon, of Franklin.

FIVE SHOT IN ROW.

The Town in a Frenzy Over the Firing of Thirty Shots From Vessel Into Crowds.

Ironton, O.—In a desperate encounter between persons on the wharf and parties on the steamer Bonanza five persons were shot, one dying instantly. Carl Mayenochim was killed. Albert Slaughter was shot in the right leg, and William Buck and two other men whose names have not been ascertained were also wounded.

A large crowd was at the wharf when the boat was ready to leave with an excursion, and it is claimed that several local boys who boarded the steamer refused to get off. They were put off by the police of the boat. Just after the steamer cleared the dock a shower of stones, thrown presumably by the boys and their friends, fell among the crowds that lined the rails of the steamer.

A moment later a volley was fired from different places on the deck. About thirty shots were fired. The police authorities telephoned to towns along the river to hold the boat so that the miscreants could be arrested.

The people are worked up into a frenzy of madness over the act, and should the guilty parties be brought here it is very likely that they may be lynched.

Rams Small Boat.

Vancouver, B. C.—Nine persons lost their lives by an accident which occurred on Murrad Inlet, the harbor of Vancouver. The Chelhalis was run down and cut in two by the steel steamer Princess Victoria, leaving this port for Victoria and Seattle. The Chelhalis had on board a party of fifteen bound for the oyster beds at Blunden harbor, on the northern coast of British Columbia.

The party included the owners of the beds and representatives of the English syndicate which contemplates purchasing the oyster beds.

The missing: Mrs. R. H. Bryce, Hilda Mason, a little girl; Barnett Benwell, aged 9; Dr. Hutton, of Rock Bay hospital; P. J. Chick, secretary-treasurer of the British Columbia Native Oyster Company; W. H. Crawford, deck hand of the Chelhalis; two Japanese firemen, Chinese cook.

Lay Rails During Night.

Opelousas, La.—A court decision is awaited here to settle the first step in a sharp race for railroad right of way between the Southern Pacific and Colorado Southern. Immediately after the La., Thursday night the Southern Pacific began laying rails, apparently with the intention of cutting in ahead of a railroad being laid by the Colorado Southern. Immediately after, the Southern Pacific workmen began this night labor a gang of men employed by the rival road went to laying rails, and it is said headed off the Southern Pacific. At any rate the men employed by the latter road moved their operations to a place on the opposite side of the Colorado Southern tracks, going to work on the property of Dr. Haas. The latter secured warrants for the arrest of the foremen directing operations on his property and had their work torn up. It was then decided to fight the matter out in court here in an expropriation suit, which is in progress.

Feudists Still Alive.

Lexington, Ky.—Reports received here from Sargent, Fletcher county, state that members of the Hall and Thornberry feud factions are camped in the mountains in that county, and a battel between them is hourly feared. It is said that the Whitesburg militia company has been ordered to be in readiness to go to the scene of trouble. Each side has about forty, and all are armed.

Clate Jones, of the Jones faction, says he will go to the relief of the Thornberrys if they need him. The reopening of the feud was caused by the killing of Richard F. Hall and John Thornberry from ambush a few days ago. Thornberry had married into the Hall family and his clansmen had sworn revenge.

Beam Falls on Men.

Chicago, Ill.—Five men were injured, two of them fatally, when a steel beam which they were hoisting to the second floor of a ew building in Indiana avenue fell upon them.

Wireless Message From Arctic Circle.

Dane's Island, Spitzbergen, by wireless telegraph to Hammerfest, Norway.—Wireless communication has been opened within 600 miles of the pole via Hemmerset. Everything is progressing favorably at Camp Wellman. The balloon house is under construction. Walter Wellman, leader of the Wellman-Chicago Record-Herald expedition, hopes to start on his aerial voyage toward the pole by the middle of August.

Thirty Killed by Tartars.

Tiflis.—Tartars have destroyed the village of Kaladjak, thirty persons being killed.

St. Petersburg.—Four men of the Second battalion of the Preobrejensky remiment, including tow non-commissioned officers, have been arrested for agitating and conveyed to the fortreas of St. Peter and St. Paul. Two squadrons of dragoons and hussars have been sent to Cronstadt, where there is a recurrence of the ferment among the soldiers ad sailors.

A man is always vain enough to believe he isn't.

Graft in Panama.

Washington, D. C.—A telegram from Baltimore includes an interview with H. Lee Russell, a master mechanic for the Panama railroad. He says conditions in the canal zone are deplorable. The government, he declares, is paying out more money for less results than the French ever did and that progress of the canal is not at all what it should be.

"There is great complaint," he says, "at the commissary department. The prices are just twice what they should be. As I understand it, the department when it was established intended to make simply a profit of 10 per cent to cover the expense of bringing the goods to the isthmus.

"But I honestly believe that on some articles a profit of 200 per cent is made. Why here the other day, just after I had reached Baltimore, I saw in a store window on Baltimore street a steamer trunk marked $3. The one I bought at the canal commissary cost me $7.50, and the one I saw here was a better one. I can't understand who gets the money. As for graft, there's plenty of it there. Why, those conductors on the Panama railroad are wearing diamonds as big as pigeon eggs. One of them drifted in not long ago from Costa Rica almost without a pair of breeches, and now he's wearing diamonds and building a row of houses in Colon. There's no system in the railroad management."

Edward Sends Cup.

New York.—The king's cup, the blue ribbon of the year's yachting trophies, presented by King Edward VII to the New York Yacht Club, to be raced for annually by American yachts, open to the enrolled fleets of all American clubs, has arrived at the New York Yacht Club from England. The cup, which is of solid gold, and valued at over a thousand guineas, is the handsomest trophy that has ever been offered for international competition. It is finely chased with symbolic figures, emblazoned with a shield bearing its inscription and purpose. It stands fully forty inches high, exclusive of its base, and measures about twenty inches in diameter.

The cup was received on behalf of the club by Secretary George McCormack. Its ownership will be determined in a race off Newport on August 8 in conjunction with the New York Club cruise.

There promises to be an entry of fully twenty-five yachts in the race. The largest of these will be the old cup defender Vigilant, now converted into a yawl and owned by William Eislin.

Lands Go Begging.

Butte, Mont.—A dispatch to the Miner from Billings, Mont., says it is estimated from the present number of persons filing claims upon the lands in the Crow Indian reservation that only about 17 per cent of the total number of those who drew winning numbers will take advantage of their rights and select land. Only twenty-five of the group of 125 persons appeared and selected lands. The land officials are puzzled over the state of affairs and the growing indifference to the Indian lands, only 17 per cent of the selections being wholly disproportioate compared with other openings of Indian reservations. The reluctance to accept lands is believed to be due to the high price to be asked by the government for the use of the irrigating water.

The new town of Custer, founded upon the reservation, is flourishing at present, its population being 300.

Fire in New Orleans.

New Orleans.—The large box factory of S. T. Alcuh & Co., on the river front at the foot of Napoleon avenue, was practically destroyed by fire, involving a loss estimated at $100,000. The factory was situated just beyond the upper end of the Illinois Central's new docks and elevators, and the enormous volumes of smoke visible from all parts of the city gave rise to early reports that these terminals were being destroyed for the second time within two years. The Illinois Central property, however was undamaged.

Wossen, Miss.—Lightning killed Al- Matthews' bridge, near here. The same bert Walker and Jefferson Case and seriously injured William Chandler at bolt also killed a mule.

Mississippi Water Used.

London.—King Edward was one of the god fathers of the Duke of Manchester's second son, who was christened in the Chapel Royal, St. James palace. The king was represented by Earl Granville, a lord in waiting. The other sponsors were Eugene Zimmerman, of Cincinnati, father-in-law of the Duke and Consuelo Duchess of Manchester, widow of the eighth duke. Water from the Mississippi river was used at the christening. The mother was indisposed and unable to be present, but fashionable gathering attended the ceremony.

Orders Eight-Hour Law Enforced.

Washington, D. C.—Acting Secretary of the Navy Newberry, in accordance with the directions of the president, has issued an order all bureau chiefs, the commandant of the marine corps, commandants of navy yards, the superintendent of the naval academy and all officers having supervision of work done for the government, directing that the eight-hour labor law be strictly enforced.

ALABAMA GLEANINGS.

Items of Interest Gathered as They Transpire Over the Entire State.

MR. BOWRON SLATED.

Republicans Considering Birmingham Man for Governor of State.

Birmingham, Ala.—Interest in the meeting of the state executive committee of the republican party of Alabama is running high among the Birmingham Republicans. There are thirty-four members of the committee and it is stated that unless some providential hindrance occurs that every member will be present at the meeting. The Charles H. Scott boom for the gubernatorial nomination, which was launched here informally on July 4, seems to be quiescent. His supporters may be organizing some deep laid plot which will land the nomination for him ,but if such is the case the plot is so very deep laid that it is making absolutely no fuss.

Considerable interest is displayed in the suggestion that certain friends of Mr. James Bowron will put him forward for " nomination. Mr. Bowron has for a . umber of years been prominent in the party in Alabama. In this connection an argument arose among several who were discussing the matter in the government building. The statement was offered by one member of the party that Mr. Bowron would be ineligible, as he was not an American by birth. Another stated that this was not a requisite. The dispute was settled by a reference to the constitution of Alabama, wherein the requirement is given as ten years' residence in the state. Mr. Bowron is entirely eligible, as he has been a resident of the state for a much longer time than that.

FRISCO FREIGHT DERAILED.

Negro Brakeman Was Scalded and He Died While Being Brought to Birmingham.

Birmingham, Ala.—Local freight train No. 250 of the 'Frisco system, becoming derailed about three miles north of Guin, tore up the track for several hundred yards. Head Brakeman Walter Wright, a negro, was scalded and died while being brought to Birmingham. The fireman, also a negro, badly scalded, was taken to St. Vincent's hospital. The engineer was not hurt, nor were any others of the crew injured.

The exact particulars as to the damage are not known at the dispatcher's office, but it is said the engine was practically wrecked, and it is reported that about ten eighty-pound rails and 250 ties would be necessary to put the track in such shape that trains can pass. Traffic in consequence has been somewhat delayed temporarily.

Preparing for Farmers' Convention.

Bessemer, Ala.—Chairman Gardiner Goodwin, of the entertainment committee for the farmers' convention, called a meeting of his committee in the Trotter building for Monday afternoon. Since the committee was appointed considerable work has been done and more than a hundred delegates have been arranged for. The work of the committee formally began after the meeting on Monday afternoon, when the city was divided into sections and a thorough canvass made until homes were secured for the 450 visitors who will attend the convention. The hotels were approached to make special rates and everything possible done to make the visit of the farmers a pleasant one to both visitors and hosts.

Gallows Is Being Prepared.

Cullman, Ala.—The gallows upon which John Williams, who murdered Senator Hipp last spring, is to be hanged is in course of erection and will be in readiness by July 27, the date fixed for the hanging. The governor named Monday, July 23, as the date he will hear the application for commutation of sentence to life imprisonment. A number of lawyers from Cullman and Decatur, representing the prosecution and the defense, will appear before the governor.

Found Dead in Cell.

Selma, Ala.—In his cell in the city prison Friday morning there was found dead Martin O'Mara, a white man, who in the police court Thursday morning had been convicted of having been drunk and who was fined $5. The man came to this city several days ago from Lamison, where he was employed as a lumberman in a saw mill. He had been drunk for some days before he came to Selma, and after reaching here kept up the spree.

Hit's er mouty close congregation what'll begrudge de prehcher de corntents uv de collection plate.

Guests Driven Into Streets.

Chicago, Ill.—Thirty-two guests of the St. Elmo, 3321 Ewing avenue, were driven into the street by a fire which fo the time threatened to destroy the hotel. Several of the guests were overcome by smoke and slightly burned. The property loss was small.

Another fire destroyed the plant of John Fitzpatrick & Co., soap and tallow manufacturers at West Twenty-eighth street and Western avenue. The loss is estimated at $73,000.

Crops Damaged by Rains.

Gadsden, Ala.—Farmers coming into the city from different parts of the county say that several thousand acres of corn have been ruined by the recent overflows and back water. The worst damage seems to have been done on the Coosa river south of this city, where the banks of the river are lower and the overflow quicker. Great damage has also been done throughout the Wills Creek valley, which is one of the richest and largest corn producing sections of the county. The corn is in the roasting ear state and spoils very easily. It is impossible to even save the fodder, as it is scalded by the hot sun and is covered with mud. The Coosa river is now falling slowly.

Will Build Foundry Plant.

Gadsden, Ala.—The Gadsden Foundry Company have let the contract for a modern brass and iron foundry. The plant will be situated on Sixth street and the Southern railway. This company has been leasing the foundry department of the Proctor Foundry and Machine Company, but so great has been the increase in business during the past six months the company has been compelled to build its own plant. The main building will be 35x100 feet, and in addition there will be boiler, pattern and finishing rooms.

Change in Officials of Armour Plant.

Anniston, Ala.—A change of officials at the local branch of the Armour Packing Company has taken place, G. E. Uffner taking charge as manager, while E. G. McLin became cashier. Mr. McLin is a former newspaper man, having been connected with the reportorial force of the Nashville-American for several years. The enterprise has been operated for some time under the name of Anniston Produce Company, but from now on it will be run directly by the Armour Packing Company. The Anniston Produce Company, Mr. C. C. O'Bryant manager, will continue to transact business from the same old stand for thirty days, when it is said they will move into a building of their own.

Negro Boy Is Drowned.

Gadsden, Ala.—Andrew Gamble, a 14-year-old negro boy, was drowned in the back waters of the Coosa river. Gamble and two other little negroes were caught in the act of stealing watermelons belonging to the watchman of the Louisville and Nashville bridge, who started to chase them out. Gamble ran into a ravine filled with back water and it proved too deep for him, and he drowned before assistance could reach him.

Big Barbecue at Gurley.

Huntsville, Ala.—The largest political barbecue yet held in Madison county took place at Gurley, where speeches were made by Dr. R. M. Cunningham, candidate for governor; H. C. Compton, candidate for associate railroad commissioner; N. M. Rowe, A. D. Kirby, Capt. John W. Grayson and Earl Smith, candidates for the legislature. Railroad rate reform, state politics and the local dispensary question were thoroughly threshed over.

Three Thousand Want Jobs.

Washington, D. C.—Applicants for positions as meat inspectors were examined Saturday in 198 cities of the country. The examination was conducted by the civil service commission, and approximately 3,000 men struggled with problems of good meat and bad. Of the whole number of men who took the examination perhaps only 500 will be needed immediately. It is expected by Secretary Wilson that he will have no serious difficulty in securing from among those who were examined Saturday the requisite number of competent inspectors. A considerable proportion of those who took the examination probably will pass, but the selection for immediate service will be made from among those having the highest average. Those who pass will be placed on the eligible list and may be called into service later.

Secretary Wilson expects to have his force of inspectors ready to begin work by August 1.

Montgomery, Ala.—The grand jury has indicted the Beauvoir Club and the Standard Club, the leading social organizations of the city, on charges of violating the Sunday law by selling intoxicants on Sunday.

"Human Fly" Is Dead.

Madison, Wis.—Charles Bliss, known a generation ago as the "human fly," died here. He was 80 years old. Bliss originated the trick of walking on the "ceiling." He traveled for years with the Dan Rice shows.

Paragould, Ark.—Word has been received here of the death of Mrs. Azalia Tompkins, 70 years of age, near Lorado, twenty miles distant, from having driven two ten-penny nails into her head with suicidal intent. She was blind and partially deaf, and had once before attempted suicide by cutting her throat.

Four Are Drowned.

Saratoga, N. Y.—Four persons were claimed as victims in the surf late Saturday afternoon. All met death in a sensational manner. A father lost his life in a vain effort to save his drowning daughter. A young man drowned after a friend nearly lost his life in a heroic endeavor to rescue him, and a middle-aged visitor was fatally stricken with hemorrhage while bathing.

DOUMA DISSOLVED

Bloodshed Is Feared. Sets Russia Back Two Years. Ukases.

THE TROOPS ARE NOW MASSED.

With Stroke of Pen Czar Tears Down the Work of the Past Two Years.

St. Petersburg.—Russia's first experiment in parliamentary government came to an ignominious end with the promulgation of two imperial ukases, the first dissolving the present parliament and providing for the convocation of its successor on March 5, 1907, and the second proclaiming the capital of Russia and the surrounding provinces to be in a state of extraordinary security, which is infinitesimally different from all martial law. This measure is safety is to provide for the outbursts which undoubtedly will be provoked by this daring measure. It is but a step to dictatorship.

The text of the two ukases, both of which are addressed in the stereotyped form to the ruling senate, are as follows:

Text of Ukases.

"According to paragraph 105 of the fundamental law, we order the imperial parliament dissolved, and fix the time for the convocation of the newly elected parliament for March 5, 1905.

"Regarding the time for the new elections to the imperial parliament we will later issue special indications.

"The ruling senate will not fail to take proper measures to place this into effect. NICHOLAS."

The text of the second ukase follows:

"In consideration of a report of the council of ministers presented to us regarding the necessity in the future for the preservation of order and public safety in the city and province of St. Petersburg, we consider it necessary to declare in the above city and provinces, instead of the state of reinforced security which now prevails there, a state of extraordinary security. The prefect of the city and the governor of the province are entrusted with the rights thereto appertaining.

"The ruling senate will not fail to take proper measures to place this into effect. NICHOLAS."

"Peterhof."

Sets Russia Back Two Years.

With these pithy, but momentous, orders Emperor Nicholas by a stroke of the pen set Russia back to where she stood two years ago, and in the full grip of autocracy and irresponsible government, wiping out for six months at least the whole structure of parliament, elected at such cost.

There is little doubt that the order for the convocation of the new assembly will still further postpone the time unless the new parliament promises to be more amenable than the present.

The delay in fixing the time for the new election seems to indicate a decision to change the present basis of suffrage, with which the advisers of the emperor hope to swamp the educated liberals, the socialists and the workmen with the vast mass of the peasantry.

When Will It Break?

The only uncertainty is the coming storm—when and where it will break. The advocates of the "mailed fist" believe that by dissolving parliament and provoking a collision now they will find the revolutionary leaders not prepared for an uprising as at Moscow, whereas further delay would nearly give the revolutionists the time needed to organize and to continue corruption of the army.

The constitutional democratic caucus adjourned before the news of the dissolution of parliament was received, but the information had already reached the leaders of the party. The Associated Press is informed that a meeting was summoned to discuss procedue and whether they shall attempt to take the French third estate, to continue existence as a revolting body in defiance of the sovereign's will.

Favored the Revolutionists.

St. Petersburg.—The arrests made in the office of the Mislauj were not connected with press offenses, but because of the sitting of the central committee of the revolutionary party, which was being held there.

Sailors Threaten Revolt.

Sebastopol.—A meeting of 2,500 sailors from the warships here drew up economic demands for presentation to Admiral Shrydloff. Unless these demands are fulfilled the men say the whole of the Black Sea fleet will revolt.

President Sends Congratulations.

Oyster Bay.—Messages of congratulations have been sent by President Roosevelt through the state department at Washington to the presidents of Salvador and Guatemala upon the fact that peace has been arranged between those two countries. The president expressed the hope that all future disputes between them must be settled by arbitration without recourse to arms.

At a meeting of the Senatorial Democratic Executive Committee of the Fifteenth Senatorial District, held at Clanton on the 21st day of July, 1906, J. C. Dennis of Clanton, Chilton county, was elected chairman and R. E. Bowden of Shelby, was elected secretary.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That a primary election be held on August 27, 1906, for the nomination of a candidate for State Senator from the Fifteenth Senatorial District under the rules and regulations adopted for the holding of State and County primaries on said day; and that names to be voted for be placed on the County ballot in the respective counties.

Resolved; That a plurality of the votes cast shall nominate.

Resolved, That each candidate for said office be assessed fifteen dollars for the expense of said call and election.

Resolved, That the Chairman shall certify to the County Chairman the names of candidates entitled to be voted for at said primary.

The meeting adjourned subject to the call of the Chairman.

J. C. DENNIS, Chairman.
R. E. BOWDEN, Secretary.

Verbena, Ala., July 23, 1906

Editor Banner—Since Mr. J. O. Middleton has seen fit to go into print on the question, in the issue of The Union, of July 16, I desire to say with all the emphasis that is in me, that Capt. J. J. Hawthorn, on July 11th did have a conversation with me, concerning a previous talk which he had with Mr. Middleton on July 4th. I attach below a letter of July 16, from Capt. Hawthorn:

"Thorsby, Ala., July 16, 1906

Mr. F. A. Gulledge, Verbena, Ala.

Dear Sir: I desire to say to you that on July 4th, in his conversation with me at Thorsby, J. Osmond Middleton stated that in his heart he was as good Democrat as breathed the breath of life; that he had assurance from Democrats in other counties, whose election was a certainty, that he (Middleton) would be admitted to the Democratic caucus, if he should be elected to the Legislature; that he had college friends who would support his desire and efforts to get in the Democratic caucus.

From my conversation with Mr. Middleton, he led me to believe that his candidacy was promoted by some ulterior, hidden source, for the purpose of throttling the local Populist-Republican organization in Chilton county.

The above and foregoing is, in substance, what I stated to you in my talk with you on July 11, concerning my previous conversation with Mr. Middleton. I attach a copy of statement given to Mr. Middleton on July 12, 1906.

Yours truly, J. J. HAWTHORN."

The statement above referred to, of July 12, was published in the Union of July 19.

Capt. Hawthorn's letter to me, of July 16 speaks for itself as to what occurred in his talk with Mr. Middleton, on July 4th. The common sense of the people will direct them to a correct conclusion on this question.

Yours truly,
F A GULLEDGE.

Death of Mr. A. C. Oates.

Sunday morning passed away Mr. A. C. Oates, for over twenty five years a resident of this county, aged 72 years. He was buried with Masonic honors, Monday, in the Clanton cemetery, Judge Adams officiating. Mr. Oates was a good and kindly man, well liked by all who knew him. A widow and five grown children survive him, to whom we offer our sympathy in their bereavement.

DEMOCRATIC MASS MEETING.

A right enthusiastic meeting was that at the court house Saturday when it was decided to hold a primary election, August 27. Congressman S. J. Bowie, Hon. W. B. Craig, Hon H. S. Doster, F. A. Gulledge, J. M. Morgan, W. L. Campbelle and T. J. Traywick were all present.

Chairman John C. Dennis called the meeting to order and stated the meeting had sovereign powers.

E. B. Deason was elected chairman, and Frank Crichton Secretary, and the meeting proceded to business.

G. L. Speer moved that nomination for county officers be made in the primary election to be held August 27, 1906.

F. A. Gulledge said he had been over the county lately as much as any man, and he found the people, and especially those who expected to return to the party, all favored a primary August 27. The door should be open and every man who wants to come in should be entitled to vote.

J. D. Sims and Squire Arledge favored a primary and on a vote being taken it was so decided.

J. C. Dennis moved that the Executive Committee be instructed to call a primary on Aug. 27, and that all white citizens be invited to participate, and that such participation be taken as the honesty of their intention.

J. C. Dennis offered the following resolution:

We, the Democrats of Chilton county, in mass meeting assembled, hereby endorse the candidacy of Hon. W. B. Craig for Congressman from the Fourth District and recommend him to the voters of Chilton county.

C. R. Mullins offered the next resolution, and it was unanimously adopted.

The Democrats of Chilton county in mass-meeting assembled, hereby endorse Howard S. Doster for the nomination as Senator from the 15th Senatorial District and urge the voters of our County to give him their hearty support.

J. W. Stanfield offered the third resolution which was unanimously adopted.

Whereas, the people of Chilton county have never had a State officer, and whereas we now have a candidate for a State office, which is in direct touch with the people's interest; and whereas, we believe that the nomination of Judge S. M. Adams for Commissioner of Agriculture and Industries would give the State a competent officer, and at the same time would do much in bringing harmony to the Democratic party, especially in the immediate surroundings:

Therefore, be it resolved by the Democratic and Conservative party of Chilton county in mass meeting assembled, that we earnestly urge the Democrats of Alabama to give to Judge Adams their hearty support.

Be it further resolved, that we believe that the nomination of Judge Adams will be of untold benefit to the party in the State, and in this county.

Chairman Deason introduced Hon. W. B. Craig, candidate for Congress, who made an excellent speech.

He said I can't tell you how deeply grateful I am for your endorsement of my candidature. I believe that a congressman should be acquainted with his constituents Thank God I never find it difficult to raise my voice in behalf of Democracy. (applause). He then discussed the tariff question in a plain and simple manner. In conclusion he said "This is a Democratic State. Let us have a home coming in November. We are all one people and I ask those of you outside the party to come back and take a hand in the government of the grandest State in the Union."

H. S. Doster, candidate for State Senator, said "If any two counties in the State should be closely allied it is those of Chilton and Autauga. What affects the one, affects the other." I am in favor of giving all that is possible to the common schools. I am in favor of better regulating freight rates, giving to all shippers greater justice. I favor giving every dollar possible to those who wore the gray in 1860 to 65. There is no better land than ours, and no better section than this. I thank you for the honor you have done me in endorsing me for State Senator from this district.

Congressman Bowie made an eloquent appeal to all white men to return to the Democratic party and come out to the primary. We don't need but one party in Alabama, and the Constitution leaves the choice of candidates so wide open that one party is all sufficient.

The meeting adjourned at 1:40 p.m.

DALLAS BAR'S ENDORSEMENT

The candidacy of Senator Wm. B. Craig for congress from the Fourth District of Alabama seems to be undisputed. The Democrats of Dallas county elected him to the State Senate and the Democrats of this district are backing him for congress. He stands on his own record, and has nothing to do with anybody else. He is a good, safe and square man and as evidence of it below is given what the Democratic Bar and people of Dallas county say about him, headed by Hon. H. S. D. Mallory, the President of the Bar and Chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee. The endorsement is as follows:

Selma, Ala., June 28th, 1906

To the Democratic voters of the 4th Congressional District of Alabama:

We, the undersigned members of the bar of Dallas county, do endorse the candidacy of Hon. Wm. B. Craig for the Democratic nomination for member of the sixtieth congress from said district; and we do take pleasure in commending him to you as a Democrat in every respect worthy of your confidence and support and posessing in the highest degree the ability, integrity and capacity to fill said office with honor and benefit to the people.

Well, Mr. Editor, we will come again asking for a small space in your paper, as we have been absent so long. The farmers have had one week's rest on account of so much rain. I guess we will hustle around to finish our work when the rain quits, if the grass and candidates don't take us. Yes, I hear a buggy and he is a candidate. Halloa, Mr! I am running for such and such an office, I want you to vote for me and help me out all you can. Yes, Mr. Hayes, I will do so (he is about the last one that made us a call). Now, I think by the talk of the people, Mr. Morgan will get all the Democratic votes around here for sheriff, but Mr. Hayes will get the majority of the Republican and Populist votes. It seems that Mr. Morgan will be nominated for sheriff on one side and Mr. Hayes on the other. Whoop up, boys, for Morgan and Hayes, and let us see who will get the sheriff's place. Now you see Mr. Editor, we have no respect of parties, we are for the right man.

Our school is progressing nicely under the skillful management of Messrs. Crumpton and Nix.

Crops are looking fine, if nothing happens we will make plenty of corn, and we will have hog and hominy this fall.

Messrs. W. D. Nix and John Gibbons are erecting a new saw mill at this place and are moving along nicely.

The health of this community is very good, but everybody seems to be quiet. Our Sunday school is still on foot, a good flourishing one all the time. Preaching every Sunday. They say there is going to be a wedding down the road soon. THE WONDERING BOY.

Letter to Marshal Gore.

Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sir: The Trustees of Fair Ground, Cobleskill, N. Y., were glad to pay 15 cents a gallon more for Devoe; and no wonder. Two other paint agents said it would take 150 gallons of their paint to cover the buildings.

Our agent put it at 125 or less. It took 115.

We saved them 35 gallons of paint and painting (worth $4 to $5 a gallon, as the painting costs two or three times as much as paint) less 15 cents a gallon on 115 gallons. Say $140.

That's how to count the cost of paint. The cost of putting it on is $3 or $4 a gallon. You see what that means. Go by Devoe.

Yours truly,
F. W. DEVOE & Co.

IN MEMORIAM.

Mr. Jeff Scarbrough departed this life July 13. He was violently seized with appendicitis, which is so fatal, so often setting the best efforts of the best physician at naught. The grim and relentless monster death claimed him after a painful struggle for life Physicians were called, using their best efforts to save, while loving friends gave careful watch, but all was to no avail. He was taken on Wednesday morning and on Friday at one o'clock he passed away. He was carried to the infirmery at Selma, but all was unavailing. All that was mortal of him was consigned to the sunless land beneath the sod, his gentle spirit having taken its flight to realms of immortality, where pain and death are unknown and no tears are shed. He possessed many excellent characteristics and left many fond relatives and friends. He was yet in the bloom of manhood, only 27 years of age. He has gone to join his loving wife, who passed away only sixteen months ago. May the Lord in His tender mercy bring up his little children to be Christian men and women and meet their father and mother in heaven where there is no more tears shed. May peace and consolation abide with the bereaved family. The sympathies of all go out to them. A FRIEND.

AN INTERESTING STATEMENT.

Florence Drug Co. Say They Have at Last Discovered a Positive Cure for Indigestion.

"For years," said a member of the above drug firm, "we have been waiting for some one to discover a remedy that really will cure dyspepsia.

"We recently learned that a new remedy, Pepsikola Tablets, had been placed on the market, an on investigation we found that at last there is a remedy that surely will cure.

"We laid in a big supply because we knew that as soon as the people began to know about this remarkable remedy there would be a big demand for it, and it is selling beyond our expectations."

It is not often a druggist sells a new remedy on a positive guarantee, but unless cured of nervousness, dizzy spells, sour stomach, coated tongue, palpitation and other symptoms of dyspepsia, Florence Drug co. will hand back your money cheerfully and without argument.

No one should hesitate on trying a 25 cent box of Pepsikola Tablets, as they will not cost you a penny should they fail to relieve and cure the very worst case of indigestion and dyspepsia.

FIRE.

Some time ago, I said in an article published in the Banner, regarding the San Francisco fire, that I would give detailed estimate of the losses there by my companies as soon as final settlement could be made, and while as yet the adjustment is not entirely over, yet we are able to approximately estimate our losses. The Liverpool & London & Globe will lose $4,248,000, all of which will be paid from the home office in England, without using any of their United States assets. This will make over $100,000,000 paid to policy-holders in the United States by this company. My other three companies' losses, towit: The London & Lancashire, the Phenix of Brooklyn and the Atlanta-Birmingham are in proportion; all has, and will be paid without shocking their assets in the least.

The Wind is in the Maples.

The wind is in the maples
And there's music in the pines,
The hemlock scent has burdened all the air;
For I hear the mountains calling
Where the sun forever shines
And my feet would even wander with you there.
Oh, to wade among the daisies
To the thickets dusk and dim,
When the birds and bees are slumbrous at the noon
Where we plucked the dogwood blossoms
And the berries from the stem
To return by scented meadows at the moon.

Through that fair, old fashioned garden,
Thick, with eglantine and rose,
To the steps alive with memories of the night
When the first kiss merged our spirits;
Where the Oleander blows
His passion in the summer's waning light.
Oh, the nights so cool and soothing,
Oh, the jasper tinted day
And the sapphire, golden skies, forever new,
Where I waited on the turnpike
By the field of new mown hay
As you drove the cows to pasture in the dew.

So I hear the mountains calling
In the glad notes of the pines
While the silver gleams among the maple leaves,
For I hate the murky city
With its mills and trolley lines
And the mad chase for the dollar,
dear, that grieves;
I would wander through the wildwood,
Down the old path by the mill
And list the distant taps for hands at noon,
While we lunch beneath the hemlocks
At the spring that bubbles still,
To return by scented meadows at the moon.

Treasure Trove

Mr. Jehu Pontifex stood in his gorgeous drawing room at Wimbledon and chuckled freely over an evening paper he held in his hand, while his wife, who was a lady of weight so far as adipose tissue was concerned, joined in his mirth.

"It is a 'nevingly idea," the great man said; "sooperb! People's gardens dug up, the fences broke down, the roots of the trees cut through and the trees themselves ruined, and—what is it I see here?—the blessed watchdog throttled to death in one case. Oh, a 'nevingly idea. I think I'll follow it:"

"The newspaper man makes something by it. What can you do, Jehu, and what can you want? You're worth half a million. Isn't that enough?"

"It's business, my dear, business; and I ain't going to be beat by any newspaper man. What does he sell his paper at? A penny, ain't it, or a 'na'penny? Well, I sell my cakes of blacking at a penny. Why shouldn't I have a treasure hunt, too? I am as rich as he is, I'll bet a bob."

"But, Jehu"——

"Don't argue with me, Anne Maria. Now, listen to this I drawed up at the office this afternoon. Listen"—and he took out a paper from the pocket of his dinner jacket, and read as follows: "Pontifex's blacking is the blacking of the world! For years it has been almost given away for nothing. Now something is going to be given away with it. Purchasers of the cakes of this blacking will find in every skin a paper, on which is the information as to the neighborhood where on a given day £10,000 have been hidden in two hundred different penny pencil cases, each containing sovereigns to the amount of £50. Find it and you've got it. No questions asked. Pontifex's money is good enough. You can find the lot if you're sharp."

"Isn't it wonderful!" Mrs. Pontifex gasped. "Oh, what a gift yours is, Jehu!"

"I'm not a fool," her husband replied. "There's other geniuses in this world except them literary gents, who never seem to do much except abuse each other. Now, Anne Maria, in three days' time as ever was a hundred morning papers in London and the country will have that advert. in a prominent place; a thousand sandwich men will parade all the great cities and towns of this country; a lot of balloons will go up all over the country just to chuck the leaflets down on the people's 'eds; the factory on the river side will be a blaze of gas, and—where was I"

"Oh, Jehu, you are a wonder! What can't you do? But the expense."

"Blow the expense, as the girl said when she told the waiter to bring another sardine on toast. But listen again, Maria. Baggs, our most trusted employee, as we call him, with several helps, will be all over the country a-dropping them penny pencil cases about. London and the environs will get the most, and between ourselves, here in Wimbledon where I'm so known and respected in the parish, we're going to dash 'em about freely. Two thousand pounds at least is for the good of the Wimbledonians. If that don't make me more popular than ever, I don't know what will. Look after your own, I say."

Five days later than Mr. Pontifex had propounded this great scheme a very handsome, well-set-up young man was walking down a—in the summer time—leafy lane, and this young man was engaged on a treasure hunt. But, since he had not bought any of Mr. Pontifex's cakes of blacking with the directions inside as to where his sovereigns might be found inside their penny pencil cases, it was not for them that he was hunting. Yet, all the same, it was a treasure belonging to Mr. Pontifex which he was looking for, viz., his daughter. For he and Mirabel Pontifex loved each other, and Pontifex was a stern parent of the good old Surrey side style of melodrama, and he laughed to scorn the pretensions of Herbert Gay to annex his daughter and his ducats. But Mirabel loved the young man, and, consequently, they were reduced to clandestine meetings, so that they might have the opportunity of frequently repeating to each other the state of their feelings, and bewailing their unhappy fate and the hardness of Mr. Pontifex's obdurate and business-like heart.

"But," Mirabel often said to her lover, "if you could only show father that you had some way of making a living, of making money, I do believe he would give in. He likes you for yourself, and it's nothing against you in his eyes that you have got such fashionable relations; only he says I shall never marry a man who isn't sharp enough to make money. If you could make five hundred pounds, or even one, and show him that you made it cleverly, shrewdly, I believe he would arrange things all right for us. But you can't do that by writing poetry, can you, dear?"

"No," Herbert Gay would reply gloomily, "I can't. I suppose I must get a job somewhere."

But now, as he walked down the lane in question, he was not bent so much on meeting Mirabel as on going to an old oak tree, which had, as such things very often conveniently possess—to oblige lovers in novels and tales—a great hole in its decayed trunk. He went toward it because in this tree in the lane, which was outside Mr. Pontifex's domain, it was the habit for Mirabel to place a letter for Herbert whenever anything happened to prevent her getting out to him.

He went toward it, therefore, and was just about to insert his hand in the big hole, and grub about amidst the rotten touchwood inside, when, to his astonishment, he saw a man some two or three hundred yards down the lane, who was upon his knees, thrusting something under a small heap of fallen leaves. Watching him further, he noticed the man trust this "something," which looked like a small truncheon, further into the leaves, and then go on further, until at the turn of the lane he was out of sight. And he now saw that in his hand he carried another similar object.

"I'll just see," murmured Herbert Gay, "whether Mirabel has left a letter or not, and then I'll go and find out what the gentle joker has shoved under the leaves. I expect it's a dead bird or something. Perhaps he has a kindly heart."

Upon which Gay put his hand in the hollow tree, and when he had done so he found a letter from the girl of his heart, saying she could not meet him today. But he also found something else.

His hand came into contact first with one of those truncheon looking things the other man had been pushing under the leaves, then with a second, a third, and so on, until he had felt eight of them, after which he pulled out one and inspected it.

"A schoolboy's pencil case," he exclaimed to himself. "Let's see what is in it. I suppose that chap's an idiot, or playing a game with some children. Good lord!" he went on, as he opened the pencil case, "what's this?" For as he did so out came fifty sovereigns, while further inspection showed that the other seven cases contained a similar amount.

"I understand," he said. "That man's employed by the newspaper to hide these things all over the place, and he has left these here till he has buried the other two. Well, Mirabel can't see me today, so I'll take them off and put them away safely; but first I'll go down and get the other one he put under the leaves. Fifty sovereigns are fifty sovereigns, anyhow."

"Your young man's a genius," Mr. Pontifex said to Mirabel a few days afterward. Then, turning to Herbert Gay, whom he had invited to dinner, he continued: "However did you manage to do it? Baggs said he hid them all carefully way, and swore no treasure hunter would ever find them."

"My powers of divination," Herbert replied. "It's a gift, you know. Nobody, but me had a chance of finding them."

"I should think it was a gift! I can understand your finding one, or even two, but—all the blessed lot! And with you, Baggs," turning to that gentleman, who was also present, "to hide them away so cleverly."

"Yes, it's wonderful," Baggs said. "I could have staked anything no ordinary treasure hunter could have found out where I put them"—and the humbug gave Herbert a wink. For he understood that so long as he allowed Gay to have credit of finding eight pencil cases in eight different places, and of keeping the money, Herbert would never give him away or betray his carelessness.

"I always told you Mr. Gay was a clever man," Mirabel said to her father, "and"——

"Now I know it," that gentleman replied. "My boy," he said effusively, "you must go into business."

"I should like to," Herbert replied. "Poetry doesn't pay."

"Well, then, you shall. I do believe your powers of—what do you call 'em?—would double my business. Lor' bless me! with a son-in-law like you I wouldn't mind starting a paper myself. We could teach them something they never dreamt of."—The King.

LA FOLLETTE CORRECTED.

Better Prices Under the Present Methods of Buying Grain.

Senator Le Follette contrasts the present methods with "the old days when the farmers brought their grain to market and the buyers gathered around and bid for the product. Now the farmer has to hunt up the buyers in their offices—there is no competition, for the profits of the buyers are pooled."

The first part of this statement is true; the second is not. Methods have changed, but it is all to the advantage of the farmer. He gets more under the present condition than would be possible if former practices were in vogue. It is true that in most of the primary markets throughout the West his buying is limited to two or three parties. At the smaller stations sometimes only one buyer is present. This is not because of any destruction of competion by unlawful methods; it is simply because the parties operating the handling plants, which they themselves own, can afford to and do pay higher prices for grain than any one not possessed of such facilities. Wagon buyers are just as free to operate as ever they were, but the expense of handling grain by the primitive method is prohibitory. The farmer of the West, instead of being limited to the competition of the local buyers of his particular railroad station, has now the advantage of the competition of the world markets.

There are a number of large grain concerns which put into the hands of every regular buyer at every local station on every railroad each morning of the year a postal or telegraph offer based on the close of the previous day's markets in Chicago, New York and Liverpool, whichever may be the highest. These men are expected to telegraph how much they will sell at these prices and there is the sharpest kind of competition between the buyers at the local stations to get as much grain as possible. So keen is this strife that the prices paid for grain frequently allow less than one-half cent a bushel margin for the buyer—all of which inures to the direct advantage of the farmer. Under the old method a margin of three to six cents, and frequently more, was exacted by the buyer in order to insure himself against loss.

This great benefit to the producer has been made possible through the concentration of the business into a comparatively few hands and the cooperation of the railroads in equalizing rates to the various ports.—From the Railway and Engineering Review.

NEWS ABOUT DOGS.

They Really Do Everything But Talk, It Seems.

Under certain conditions, a tiny ferret can do the work of four men. The animal is being used to draw telephone cables through long conduits. The ferret ran through, dragging a string to which is attached copper wire, a cord and finally the cable itself. Formerly the work was done by a laborious system of "rodding." The ferrets are employed extensively in Indiana.

While Harold Goodwin, the son of a builder, was walking through a quiet part of his father's works near London last December a man flung a heavy piece of jagged iron at him and stunned him. Shot, the young man's retriever, flew at the ruffian's throat and kept him prisoner until aid arrived. The dog became the hero of the place, Mr. Goodwin's workmen subscribing for a silver collar for him, while the young man's family made him guest of honor at a dinner.

Pennies, a tiny New York dog, is a companion of Shot in the dog-hero medal fund. When his master, Walter Brown, employed in a livery stable, was attacked by Robert Reid, a colored man, whose discharge from the place he had caused, Pennies went to the rescue. Reid drew a revolver and aimed it at Brown, but the dog quickly impressed his teeth in the leg of the assailant and spoiled his aim. The shot went wild and the man was overpowered and suppressed.

John Hancock, a Cleveland genius, has trained his fox terrier, Prince, to fetch the kindling wood from the cellar. The dog acts at command and is skillful and industrious.—Philadelphia Record.

Does spontaneous generation occur in the world today? This is one of the burning questions now before men of science, and in all directions experiments are being made with a view to its solution. Dr. Saleeby, F.R.S.E., considers the problem in Harper's, in relation to the recent views of scientists and the remarkable assistance of radium in their latest experiments. The chief difficulty, he thinks, is the impossibility of satisfactorily defining life. Dr. Saleeby is an earnest disciple of Herbert Spencer, as his latest book, Evolution; the Master-key, attests, but possesses an essentially open mind.

PRINCE CUTHBERT OF THE PURPLE LOCKS.

In the land of Nowhere, in the palace of the City of Ayr, situated on the River of Sleep, lived a well beloved King. He had three sons, Wilfred, Cedric and Cuthbert. Cuthbert, the youngest, had purple hair.

When Wilfred was six he disappeared very suddenly, and the next year Cedric shared the same fate. All feared for little Cuthbert but he lived and became handsomer each year.

When Cuthbert was eighteen, his father had a vision showing him that Cuthbert must find a wife with hair like his in color before his twenty-fifth year.

The King issued a degree that all the young ladies of the kingdom should assemble at the court. For three successive days the court was filled with girls all the way from sixteen to sixty, but none had purple hair.

When Cuthbert was twenty-one he decided to seek in all countries for a purple haired princess. So the day after his birthday he set forth in state in a four-horse coach, followed by four hundred mounted guards and one hundred mounted lackeys.

The bridge spanning the River of Sleep having been crossed, the Prince entered a vast enchanted forest. Before nightfall the four hundred guards turned back, and the Prince feared that the lackeys would be no less treacherous. Many were the pitfalls and caverns in the way through the forest, and they were finally forced to leave the splendid coach, sunken in mire, while the Prince continued on horseback. When nightime came a huge owl swooped down and bore away the lackeys to the palace at Ayr. The Prince, realizing his peril after all his men had left him, tied his mare and leaving the other horses to wander at liberty, he climbed a tree for the night.

In the middle of the night he was rudely shaken up and found himself being carried through the air with great swiftness. He was suddenly dropped into a great cavern and left to perish. Finding no way out, he lay in misery on the floor for some time until at daybreak he saw an opening in the cave and, crawling out, escaped.

This was but the beginning of his trouble. He was totally lost and many were the wild beasts thereabouts. What was more, he had nothing to eat. Exhausted before the day was over, he stumbled into a cave to rest, but was horrified to see coming toward him a huge black beast! He turned to fight, but found it was his mare! Very gratefully he pulled from the saddle-bags some of the provisions placed there, and then, tired and worn with his hard day, mounted his horse.

Night came on, but still the Prince rode forward, almost asleep in the saddle. Suddenly the horse seemed to be falling away from under him and the ground seemed to fly in his face. His horse had stumbled into a woodchuck hole. Dazed and sleepy he arose and again mounted his mare, which had scrambled to her feet unhurt.

"Prince!" cried the horse suddenly. "Prince! There is a nice tree. I will guard you if you wish to sleep there."

The Prince was astonished at hearing the mare speak, but merely said:

"Very good; I thank you. I think I will sleep there tonight."

Presently he found a spring of water and would have drank had not the mare warned him that it was enchanted. After feeding the mare with grass and the few oats which remained in the saddle-bags, he threw himself down on the pile of leaves in the hollow tree. During the night he though he heard a soft voice sighing and sobbing, but concluded it was only a dream, seeing no one but the mare, which was standing clearly outlined in the moonlight which filtered through the branches.

The next day he resumed his journey until he came to a great cliff. The mare told him to strike it with his sword. The Prince obeyed and a rumbling and quaking of the earth was the result. Suddenly a fissue appeared in the cliff, and widened into a portal through which the mare trotted, bearing the Prince to a splendid palace of gold. At its entrance the mare commanded the Prince to dismount. He obeyed and instantly a beautiful girl, with purple hair, stood by his side. The Prince, charmed with her beauty, saluted her, and begged her to give him shelter over night at least.

Then the girl took his hand and led him into the palace, where thousands of servants and courtiers bowed low before her. Leading the Prince to a dazzling throne she presented him to her father, the King. The Prince was informed that he must stay in the Kingdom for three years and work in the vast mines for which the kingdom was noted. At the end of that time the Princess Gwendolyn (for so she was called) would decide whether or no she would marry. Then calling a servant, the King ordered that the two young men who were working to gain as their brides Gwendolyn's two older sisters should be brought before him. When they appeared it was made known to Cuthbert that there were his long lost brothers.

At the end of three years of hard work the three princes departed in state with the three beautiful princesses. When the Kingdom of Nowhere was reached, each was married to his chosen bride, and lived forever and a day.

After the marriage of Cuthbert and Gwendolyn, their purple locks became golden, and their children have golden hair to this day.—New York Tribune.

PERSONAL AND LITERARY

Gertrude Smith, the popular writer for children, owes her introduction to literature to Mrs Freeman, then Miss Mary E. Wilkins. Her first story was read by Miss Wilkins in manuscript.

"As sure as two and two make four, you can write," was the verdict of that author.

"But I don't want to," objected Miss Smith.

"You've got to," retorted Miss Wilkins, and the story was forthwith sent to the Cosmopolitan, and the young author received a check of $50 for her initial effort. Since then Miss Smith has had a new juvenile nearly every year for her publishers, the Harpers, all of which have been very successful.

ONE BOAR POWER.

A French tradesman living at Montlucon boasts probably the most singular equipage that was ever designed, particularly for purposes of pleasure. This gentleman, whose name is M. Tronget, takes his daily drives abroad in a little gig drawn by a domesticated boar.

The animal is a true wild boar, and was captured by his owner and trainer in the Troncals Forest. The beast is two years old, and taming him to harness was a trying process. But by dint of much patience and some whipcord M. Tronget has at last brought his strange "gee-gee" to be as docile to voice and rein as a lady's pony. The boar draws a specially constructed gig, and trots as fast as some horses.—London Globe.

MOST REMARKABLE BOOKS.

The world's most remarkable book, at least so far as its appearance is concerned, is in the National library of Paris. The letters are cut out of tissue paper with a pair of scissors. Each sheet of blue tissue, out of which the letters are cut, is placed between two pages of white, and so the matter is easily read. It is said that this book has been an obect of curiosity to more people than any other in the world.—Detroit News-Tribune.

America's Unofficial Independence Day.

An important link in the chain of evidence by which historians are establishing the facts in the case of America's unofficial Independence Day, May 20, 1775—the day of the signing of the Mecklenburg Declaration— is published in Harper's Weekly. It is a fac-simile reproduction of a passage from the Raleigh Minerva of August 10, 1809, containing a verbatim report of a valedictory address delivered by a Sugar Creek Academy pupil on June 1 of that year. In the course of his oration the youthful patriot referred to the Charlotte convention in these words: "On the 19th of May, 1776 (obviously a misprint for 1775), a day sacredly exulting to every Mecklenburg bosom, two delegates duly authorized from every militia company in this county met in Charlotte. After a cool and deliberate investigation of the causes and extent of our differences with G. Britain, and taking a view of the probable result; pledging their all in support of their rights and liberties they solemnly entered into and published a full and determined declaration of Independence, renouncing forever all allegiance, dependence on or connection with Great Britain. . . . May we ever act worthy of such predecessors."

Up Or Down.

On Mount Tom, in Massachusetts, there is a traction system operating two cars on a cable. As one car goes up the other comes down. The grade is an extraordinarily steep one, a fact that frequently calls forth anxious inquiries relative to the safety of the system from nervous tourists.

One afternoon a lady from Boston seated herself in the rear of the car that was about to make its ascent of the mountain, and it was at once observed by several that she was extremely anxious as to the outcome of her temerity.

"Is this car perfectly safe?" asked she of the conductor.

"It is considered to be, madam," was the reply.

"Have there never been any accidents?"

"None to speak of, madam—that is, no serious ones."

The lady sighed uneasily. "I was wondering," observed she, "what would become of me if the cable should break when we were just reaching the top of the mountain."

"That would depend upon how you had spent your past life, madam," quietly replied the conductor.—Ma-

SANDWICH FILLING.

An enthusiastic member of the New York Mycological Club is authority for the statement that the fat, white puff ball, sliced, makes a delicious sandwich filling.

ASPARAGUS FRITTERS AND SALAD.

Asparagus fritters are recommended for luncheon. Make a batter of two eggs, a cup of flour, a little baking powder, one tablespoonful of melted butter, salt, and enough milk to make the batter thin. Cut up cold asparagus in inch pieces and add to the batter. Fry in deep fat. Cold asparagus with French dressing is a most acceptable salad. Serve on lettuce leaves, with slices of hard boiled egg, and add a few capers for piquancy.

SPANISH CREAM.

To one pint of milk add one-half box of gelatine; let it heat slowly until the gelatine is dissolved. When at a boiling point stir in quickly the yolks of three eggs and a cup of sugar, and when the mixture thickens stir in the whites of the eggs, beaten to a stiff froth. Remove from the stove, flavor and pour into a mould to cool.

SALMON COOKED IN COURT BOUILLION.

Lay a two pound slice fresh, firm salmon in the grate of a fish kettle, pour over enough cold water to cover, add two tablespoonfuls vinegar, three sprigs parsley, a sliced onion, three whole cloves, six whole peppers and two tablespoonfuls salt. Let the fish come quickly to the boiling point, then push back where it will simmer gently until the fish flakes. Serve with a garnish of mushrooms and a rich sauce.

ROLLED OATS BREAD.

This recipe for rolled oats bread is contributed by a housewife. Scald one cup Quaker rolled oats with one pint boiling water. Let stand one hour. Add one teaspoon salt, one-half scant cup molasses, one tablespoon lard, one-half yeast cake dissolved in one-third cup water, four or more cups flour or enough to make a dough rather softer than ordinary bread. Stir with spoon. Raise until it doubles its bulk, then shape into loaves or biscuit.

THREE DAINTY SALADS.

Cucumber Salad—Peel and slice the cucumbers and set away on the ice until thoroughly chilled. Drain and mix with chopped onion or small pieces of the large white onion. Serve with a French dressing.

Cherry Salad—Maraschino cherries, stuffed with hazel nuts. Serve very cold on lettuce leaves, with mayonnaise dressing.

Cottage Cheese Salad—Mold soft cottage cheese into balls the size of a bird's egg. Arrange them carefully with cucumber dice and a little chopped onion. Serve with French dressing.

TOMATO SAUSE FOR SPAGHETTI.

Boil and strain one can tomatoes. Chop one small onion fine and brown in pan with two slices of fat salt pork or two tablespoonfuls olive oil or butter. Five minutes before the browning is accomplished throw in a handful of dried mushrooms that have been scalded, strained and chopped. These add greatly to the flavor. Add to the tomatoes four whole cloves, a lump of sugar, salt and paprika or cayenne to flavor, mix together, strain, then thicken lightly with browned flour and cook two minutes. Pour over the spaghetti and add grated Parmesan cheese.

RYE FRITTERS.

Rye fritters make a delicious breakfast dish. Make a batter of an egg, two cupfuls of sour milk, a pint and a half of rye flour, a cupful of Indian meal, half a cupful of molasses, a scant level teaspoonful of soda and a saltspoonful of salt. Beat the mixture thoroughly, dip it with a tablespoon from the bowl and drop into smoking hot fat. Dip the spoon into the hot fat before dipping it into the batter and the batter will slide from it easily. Take up less than half a tablespoonful each time, in order to have small cakes. Be sure the cakes are cooked through. Drain them on brown paper, roll them in sugar and serve with maple syrup.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

When burning vegetable refuse in stove or furnace, put a handful of salt into the fire with it and there will be no unpleasant odor.

The pulverized washing powders last much longer if used from a talcum powder shaker. A baking powder can with holes punched through the lid may be utilized for the purpose.

Closely woven wool goods, like silk, should be loosely rolled around a pasteboard tube and covered with thin paper when laid away for a time. This will avoid the deep creases sure to accumulate from the weight of the folds. Silk will crack if left long in folds.

There will be less need of dusting if the broom is dampened in hot soapsuds where it is considered better to use it uncovered. It also helps to occasionally dampen the brush of the carpet-sweeper—but it should be immediately taken out after using and thoroughly dried.

RADIUM IN MEDICINE.

Useful in Therapeutics, But Not as Much as Asserted.

Wild claims have been made regarding the efficacy of radium emanations as a cure-all in therapeutics, and on the other hand the reaction against its use has been from time to time equally violent. The contribution of Dr. Myron Metzenbaum to the Medical Record regarding the known medical value of radium is therefore timely and of importance to those interested in its use. The writer bases his conclusions upon an exhaustive survey of medical literature on the subject and two years' clinical experience wihh the substance, and offers the following conclusions:

"That lupus responds promptly to the action of radium, and that this result is obtained as readily as with the Finsen light or the X-rays, and that these results seem permanent. That small affectations of the epithelium, without glandular involvement, heal rapidly under the action of the radium rays, provided the tubes of radium can be brought into intimate contact or close proximity to the diseased area. Large epitheliomatous areas of the mucous membranes may not be influenced to any marked degree, probably because in large areas the disease is not only superficial, but the deeper tissues are involved as well. Epitheliomata on the skin respond far more rapidly than those of the mucous membranes; this is probably because the skin is kept dry and is not irritated by moisture or friction of the parts. The healing of epitheliomata under the action of the radium rays seems to be permanent. The rodent ulcers about the face and head respond better to the action of radium than to any known agent excepting the X-rays, and the results are better than those usually obtained by surgical interference. Deep-seated, malignant growths seem beyond the influence of the radium rays, and even when an incision is made into the growth and the tube of radium is inserted into its interior (as in the case of the late President Harper, there is then only a histological change in that part of the growth surrounding the tube of radium, as is demonstrated by a microscopical study of the tissue. Even if the radium rays exerted any beneficial influence on truly malignant, deep-seated growths, the fact could not be used to any great advantage in these cases, for the local action would be so pronounced as to cause an ulceration of the skin before it could influence the growth beneath.

"In certain cases of total blindness, possibly where some of the fibres of the optic nerve still remain intact, a sensation of light may be noted when a tube of radium of high activity is placed in front of the eye or against the temporal region. But thus far radium has given no beneficial results in the treatment of blindness. When tubes of radium are applied to old scars resulting from healed lupoid ulcers, it causes them to lose their rough and fibrous appearance and renders the area quite smooth and pliable."

CARE OF THE EYES.

A Few Rules Which Each and All Should Observe.

While trying to beautify the eyes in many ways is altogether harmful, there are a number of rules which, if perseveringly regarded, will be of the greatest benefit.

The enormous increase in cases of imperfect sight can be noted on every hand. Two out of every three women nowadays are obliged to wear glasses. Yet the women who rejoice in perfect vision go on their way disregarding the first principles of sight culture. There are a few simple rules which, if taught in the nursery, would strengthen eyes which in later years cause their owners acute suffering. Even the girl who is obliged to wear pince-nez will notice a great improvement in her sight by learning and taking to heart the following simple rules:

1. When you are reading hold the book some distance from your eyes, and gradually bring it nearer until you discover at what angle the print appears the largest.
2. Always read with your back to the light.
3. Hold your book in a sloping position, and when writing arrange your paper also on the slope.
4. Avoid reading in a moving vehicle.
5. Directly your eyes begin to smart and burn, if you are undertaking some fine needlework, put it away. Lie back in a chair. Close your eyes. Lay a kandkerchief soaked in cold water on the eyes. Remain in this position for ten minutes.
6. Tired eyes may be bathed in hot water with good effect. It may contain a little salt or foracic acid. Any ailment requiring stronger treatment should be attended to by a physician.

Snyder, the biggest horse in the world, is owned in Cleveland, O. The horse is a Percheron gelding, foaled in 1900. He is the tallest horse in the world, standing twenty-one hands (seven feet) and weighs 2700 pounds—probably the heaviest horse in the world.

TERRIBLE TO RECALL.

Five Weeks in Bed With Intensely Painful Kidney Trouble.

Mrs. Mary Wagner, of 1367 Kossuth Ave., Bridgeport, Conn., says:

"I was so weakened and generally run down with kindey disease that for a long time I could not do my work and was five weeks in bed. There was continual bearing down pain, terrible backaches, headaches and at times dizzy spells when everything was a blur before me. The passages of the kidney secretions were irregular and painful, and there was considerable sediment and odor. I don't know what I would have done but for Doan's Kidney Pills. I could see an improvement from the first box, and five boxes brought a final cure."

Hogs or Hippopotami.

They tell a story of a real estate man escorting a prospective buyer through some southeastern Texas swamp-land.

"What are those dark marks on the trees," asked the prospective buyer.

"Oh, that's where the hogs rub their backs against the trees," said the agent. "Now you see this land will raise——"

"But what made these marks here?"—the train was moving rapidly.

"Oh the hogs—Now, as I was saying——"

"Look here," said the revolting victim, "either the hogs down here are seven feet high, or else you keep hippopotamuses, and this is a lake on a vacation."—The World's Work.

School "Hygiene."

The humanizing of the elementary school has in Neufchatel reached a point which may safely be said to be in advance of anything yet attempted in any other country. A list of districts is mentioned in the Cantonal newspapers in which, in the public schools, there is included in the "curriculum" the gratuitous and compulsory administration of cod liver oil to all children for whom the school doctors prescribe it. Contrary to the usual experience of private families in such a case, the public administration of the oil in school is stated to be attended by no refractory symptoms. They are disciplinarians in Switzerland.

Flew Hawk on a Kite Line.

Last fall some boys who live in Caribou, Me., caught a large hawk in a trap, after he had killed a hen and failed to carry it away. A short time after there was a local fair over in New Brunswick. The managers offered five dollar prizes for the kite-flying machine, or any other old thing that would go the highest. The boys took the hawk and succeeded in making him go up the 1,600 feet of kite line. They got the prize and sold him for $5.—Maine Woods.

UNABLE TO WALK.

Terrible Sore on Ankle Caused Awful Suffering—Could Not Sleep—Cured by Cuticura in Six Weeks.

"I had a terrible sore on my ankle, and had not walked any for eleven months. I tried nearly everything without any benefit and had a doctor, but he didn't seem to do any good. He said I would have to have my limb taken off, and that I would never walk again. I suffered awful, and at night I could not sleep at all. I thought there was no rest for me, but as soon as I began to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment it commenced healing nicely. I bathed the ankle with warm water and Cuticura Soap, and then applied Cuticura Ointment to the affected part, and laid a cloth over the sore to hold it in place. After two weeks I could walk around in my room real good, and in six weeks' time my ankle was entirely cured, and I was walking around out of doors. Mrs. Mary Dickerson, Louisa C. H., Va., April 22, 1905."

The Sea Disgorging Its Spoil.

The great work of resuscitating San Francisco has obscured another remarkable American exploit, which is rapidly approaching completion. This is the salvage of Galveston, which flourishing port was swamped by the sea in 1900. Since that time a great sea wall over four and a third miles in length has been built completely round the front of the town, facing the Gulf of Mexico. It is seventeen feet high and sixteen feet thick at the base and five feet across at the top, being substantially protected from undermining by an "apron" of stone and sheet piling. But perhaps the most interesting part of the work of reconstructing the town is the raising of the protected district. This huge enterprise, reports the British Consul in April, is about a quarter completed, and the details afford every evidence of American ingenuity. A feature of the scheme is to bring sand from the gulf itself, and to pump it through pipes on to the land. This is making the sea disgorge its spoils "with a vengeance."—London Chronicle.

THE SLEEP OF HIBERNATION.

How It Differs from Repose—The Shock That Causes Death.

The sleep of hibernation is a very different matter from the sleep of repose. If it be complete, respiration can no longer be detected. A torpid bat when disturbed will heave a sigh or two, and, being left alone, again to all appearances ceases to breathe.

Submerged in water of a temperature slightly higher than his own, the hedgehog not only continues to live, but appears to suffer neither inconvenience nor harm. Enclosed in an airtight receptacle, his atmosphere undergoes a change so slight that it cannot be imputed to breathing. But circulation does not cease. As respiration diminishes the irritability of the muscles of the heart increases, and thus, without the stimulus of oxygen, although much more slowly, the heart continues to beat. In the absence of the fresh air drawn into the lungs in times of activity, uncleansed and unrevigorated and venous blood passes on to fill the whole system of circulation.

A profound lethargy ensues, only distinguishable from death by the slight beating of the heart. The waste is very small. The fat accumulated during the plenty of summer and autumn supplies all expenditure until the coming of spring, when earlier or later the hibernating animal, having no capital in reserve, begins to suffer the pangs of hunger. In response to the demand respiration very slowly increases. His oxidized blood flows more quickly and his energy returns.

Then the bat flies forth once more from the hollow tree in the wood, to find the warm dusk teeming with insect life, and the hedgehog comes, it may be from the cavity under the gnarled roots below, to find beetles, worms and slugs once more among the spring grass. Hibernation has saved him from starvation; but if his nook had not been snug and wisely chosen, it could not have preserved him from death from frost.

The hiding-place also must be secret and free from intrusion, for the hibernating animal cannot bear to be suddenly aroused. Even the little dormouse, which comes out at intervals to feed, when in deep sleep does not survive too hasty an awakening. The heat of the hand gradually passing through the nest or to be carried indoors to the warmer temperature of a room is well enough.

He awakes, refreshed, full of activity, and with a disposition speedily to become tame and make friends. But if you warm him suddenly back to life before he had gradually breathed the torpor out of his blood and established an equilibrium between his respiration and muscular irritability, his heart will beat at a tremendous rate, and in a few minutes he is dead.—London Spectator.

MISS ANNIE HENDREN.

MISS ANNIE HENDREN, Rockport, Wash., writes:

"I feel better than I have for over four years. I have taken several bottles of Peruna and one bottle of Manalin.

"I can now do all of my work in the house, milk the cows, take care of the milk, and so forth. I think Peruna is a most wonderful medicine.

"I believe I would be in bed to-day if I had not written to you for advice. I had taken all kinds of medicine, but none did me any good.

"Peruna has made me a well and happy girl. I can never say too much for Peruna."

Not only women of rank and leisure praise Peruna, but the wholesome, useful women engaged in honest toil would not be without Dr. Hartman's world renowned remedy.

The Doctor has prescribed it for many thousand women every year and he never fails to receive a multitude of letters like the above, thanking him for his advice, and especially for the wonderful benefits received from Peruna.

CLEARS UP THE COMPLEXION.

Florence Drug Co. say Laxakola Tonic Tablets Work Wonders for the Skin.

It is hard to tell just why these little tablets have become so popular with Clanton ladies, but considering the short time they have been advertised, the demand for them has been cause for wonder. They are no difference in appearance from other laxative tablets, but they really must possess unusual merit, for from own personal observation we know that they always do just what is expected of them.

Their action upon the skin and complexion is remarkable, for the principal ingredient in them is extracts of dandelion, and your own doctor will tell you that dandelion is one of the greatest skin alteratives known to the profession.

If your bowels are inactive, your skin sallow, your tongue coated, your breath foul, and if you are troubled with pimples, billious spells and sick headache, a 25 cent package of Laxakola Tonic Tablets will clear up your complexion, tone up your liver, encourage the action of your bowels and make you sweet, clean and healthy, inside and out, or Florence Drug co. will gladly pay back your money. •

Rockymount.

The people of this place invite you to attend, on Aug. 10, 1906, an all day "Educational Union and Rally," at their new school house, four miles east of Jemison. We also aim to have a big barbecue, and I am sure the people of Chilton county know how well our Bro. J. Skaggs of Jemison can barbecue meat. So come and help us eat some five, six or seven hundred pounds on that day; besides that, there will be dinner on the ground for all that will accept invitation.

The following speaker have gladly consented to speak for us on that day: Friday, 10 a.m., Supt. of Education of Jefferson county, I. W. McVtory; Supt. of Chilton county, J. W. Moore, and Judge Reynolds. Others are expected to take part with us. I am sure that you would enjoy hearing each and everyone of them. So, come.

Bro. B. E. Collum gladly volunteered to furnish plenty of ice cream, lemonade, etc, for us and give profits of same to the cause of education in this community. So we all can eat and drink with a clear conscience. The surrounding districts are especiall invited to take part with us. Now, as I am their teacher at present, I will say that I am sure that the day with us will be made pleasant for you as well as profitable. Come!

MAKE MONEY.

Here is an interesting study: Make out a list of all the people you know, and estimate the amount of money each one earns in a year. Total it up. The amount will be surprisingly large. Now, of all those people, only the few who SAVE SOMETHING really MAKE anything at all. Simply earning money isn't making it; what slips through the earner's fingers is finally "made" by somebody else. Don't forget to count yourself in on the list, and if you are not "making" money, begin now to save with us. One dollar will open your bank account.

SAMUEL D. WEAKLEY.

When, a few short months ago' death removed the lamented Chief Justice McClellan from the field of his earthly labors, at the solicitation of a large number of citizens, Gov. Jelks appointed Samuel D. Weakley to fill out the unexpired term, the appointment was generally considered a good one, and subsequent events have demonstrated the wisdom of the appointment.

Chief Justice Weakley is a man not only learned in the law, but is a man of sound judgment and rare legal ability, whose honesty of purpose is conspicuously displayed in his official acts. He has for many years been a prominent member of the Jefferson bar and his elevation to the supreme court bench completes the triumph of his professional career.

Judge Weakley in seeking th endorsement by the people of his appointment, is actuated by the feeling that to a large extent he is entitled to it, the good old plan of continuing a man in office who has deserved well of the people being especially applicable to him whose first term has been so short, and of whom it may be said: "Well done thou good and faithful servant."

Patton Will Have Dispensary.

Jasper, Ala.—Arrangements are being made to open a dispensary at Patton, and it is expected that business will begin about the 1st of August. This will give Walker county six dispensaries, and will in all probability increase the sales of the dispensary in the county, because it is learned that the region round about this new point, which includes Corona, West Corona, Lockhart and some other mining camps, is now consuming whisky and beer which is brought from points outside of the county. The dispensary will be opened at Patton Junction, and the dispenser will be Watkins George. The reports from the dispensaries now running in the county for the first six months of the present year show heavy gains in sales over last year. The profits have greatly increased, and the proportion which goes to the county school funds will be much larger than heretofore. The Horse Creek dispensary shows the largest sales, its total being over $30,000 for the half year from January 1.

Attendance Growing.

Auburn, Ala.—The fifth day of the farmers' summer school was marked by unflagging interest, a timely program and a jump in the attendance to 256 farmers.

The contest for prizes is waxing hot and interesting. Ten entries have been made for the best colt, prize $10; nine entries for the dairy calves, prize $10; five entries for best calves, prize $5; six coops of chickens, prize $10.

Fifteen dollars is offered for each contest in corn judging and in live stock judging. The veterinary hospital grounds present an animated scene, like a western stock show, while the lusty chanticleers are heard on all sides vaunting their supremacy. Among the prominent visitors are Mr. Cathcart and Mr. D. Cook, of Wilcox county; Mr. J. C. Emmons and son, Monroe county; Mr. Estes, Birmingham; Mr. Avant, Georgia.

A barbecue was served.

Sheriff Armstrong Dead.

Montgomery, Ala.—A special to the Advertiser says: Sheriff Armstrong died Thursday night at 11:55 o'clock. The burial was at Bay Minette Friday at 5 p. m.

Sheriff Armstrong a few months ago underwent a dental operation for a bad tooth. The operation proved ineffective, and later he went to New York, where after a thorough diagnosis the attending physician decided a portion of the upper jaw would necessarily have to be removed.

The operation, being most delicate and decidedly serious, was successfully performed, and Mr. Armstrong returned to Bay Minette, his home. He improved slowly for a time, but six weeks ago he began to fail, and from time to time his life was reported in the balance.

Judge Kyle Out.

Decatur, Ala.—Judge O. Kyle, of Decatur, has announced for the legislature from Morgan county, making seven candidates now in the race for that office, with two to be elected.

Judge Kyle was formerly associate railroad commissioner of Alabama. He is an ex-judge of this judicial circuit, and was one of the United States judges to the Panama canal zone, but resigned that office some months ago, and has been practicing law in Decatur ever since.

Leg Broken by Lurch of Train.

Selma, Ala.—Will Harris, an express messenger running between Birmingham and Mobile on the Southern railway, had the misfortune to have his right leg broken between the ankle and knee at Fulton. Just beyond Fulton there is a curve, and as the train was going around this curve a heavy piece of casting fell on his leg and broke it.

Etowah Primary Quiet Affair.

Gadsden, Ala.—Twenty out of thirty-one precincts heard from show that B. M. Pike is leading for sheriff in the primary election, with J. R. Cambron a close second. It will require the official count to determine the result. Alto V. Lee, Jr., is leading the legislative ticket, with over over 350 majority and shows gains all the time. H. P. Smith is next on the legislative ticket, and is leading his opponent by 200 votes.

Judge J. H. Disque, who has no opposition for judge of the city court, is receiving a handsome and complimentary vote.

Paying Damages.

Gadsden, Ala.—Agents of the Armour Refrigerator Car lines have sent men to this district, who are paying the peach growers damages sustained on account of that company's failure to supply refrigerator cars as contracted for to handle the peach shipments. Several hundred cars were contracted for, and the losses have been heavy. One grower on the Chattanooga Southern railroad presented a claim for $5,000.

The ancient who gave the palm for politeness to the dancing master must of a truth never have been approached by a candidate.

WILLIAMS SAVED.

Jefferson County Judge Holds in Effect That He Has Jurisdiction to Inquire Into the Sanity of John Williams.

Birmingham, Ala.—Saved from being hanged last Friday by a writ of habeas corpus, John Williams will now have a hearing on August 6 to determine his sanity. The decision was rendered Saturday morning by Judge S. L. Weaver. It is absolutely novel in the judicial records of Alabama. Never before after a sentence had been confirmed by the supreme court and board of pardons and the governor of the state has an execution been stayed.

At exactly 9:30 o'clock Judge Weaver took his chair. The criminal court room was crowded with more than there were seats to accommodate. Men stood on the backs of chairs in their eagerness to see and hear.

The prisoner was nervous. His son sat a few feet behind. There was an expectant hush while Judge Weaver delivered the following decision:

"After careful consideration of the case I have decided to overrule the motion and to give the defendant a hearing on August 6."

Then was witnessed a scene seldom enacted in a court room. There was a veritable explosion of yells of approval. Spontaneously, as if they themselves had been granted a new lease on life the crowd cheered and applauded. Many rushed forward to shake hands with the prisoner and his counsel. While the sheriff was attempting to restore order the court was dismissed and Williams handcuffed and led back to his cell.

So enthusiastic were some of those who had heard the judge's decision that, going out of the court room, they jumped upon the benches in the hall and took up collections in their hats for Williams as the crowd passed out. Something like $50 was donated.

Those close to Mrs. Sage, to whom practically the entire estate was bequeathed, declared with seeming authority that millions will be distributed in aid of worthy objects and in accordance with an understanding reached by the financier and his wife long ago.

As Mr. Sage's life was given up to the accumulation of riches, so the years of Mrs. Sage have been devoted to a study of philanthropy, and what he gathered she is expected to scatter with a lavish hand. Unless the estate should be tied up by a contest, which now appears improbable, Mrs. Sage will, it is said, begin at once to make the long contemplated gifts.

Lively firing ensued, during which two gendarmes, four soldiers and two civil employes were killed and others of the guards were wounded. The attacking party carried off $80,000 and the arms of the defenders of the train. It probably was the same band which captured a train on Thursday, announcing that the revolution had begun.

The countryside is said to be in a ferment and sympathizing with the guerrilla bands. The small force of troops operating in the district will be reinforced.

Agitators are making capital over the recent incidents. They affirm that it will be difficult for the provincial administration to detach enough troops from the cities and towns to make the net large enough to catch the marauders.

Two Bombs Thrown.

New York.—While peace negotiations between local unions Nos. 2 and 480 of the plumbers and gas fitters' organizations were in progress two bombs or large torpedoes filled with bits of stone and metal were thrown from the elevated railway structure into a group of members of the latter union, waiting outside the hall. Eight of the group suffered cuts and abrasions from the flying fragments.

Local No. 2 recently lost a strike against the master plumbers, the latter refusing to employ any but members of No. 480, which is affiliated with the national organization, while No. 2 is not, and required the members of No. 2 to join No. 480. Many members were willing to do so and applied for membership.

There was a section of No. 2 which opposed the merger, and it is said that some of that party were responsible for the bomb throwing. Several were knocked down by the force of the explosion, but none were dangerously injured.

A SUMMER LEAF.

Once on a time a little leaf was heard to sigh and cry, as leaves often do, when a gentle wind is about. And the twig said, "What is the matter, little leaf?"

"The wind," said the leaf, "just told me that one day it would pull me off, and throw me to the ground to die." The twig told it to the branch, and the branch told it to the tree.

And, when the tree heard it, it rustled all over, and sent word back to the leaf, "Do not be afraid, hold on tightly, and you shall not go off till you want to."

And so the leaf stopped sighing, and went on singing and rustling. And so it grew all summer till October. And, when the bright days of autumn came, the leaf saw all the leaves around becoming very beautiful. Some were yellow, and some were scarlet, and some were striped with colors. Then it asked the tree what it meant. And the tree said, 'All these leaves are getting ready to fly away, and they have put on these colors because of their joy."

Then the little leaf began to want to go, and grew very beautiful in thinking of it. And, when it was very gay in colors, it saw that the branches of the tree had no colors in them; and so the leaf said, "O branch, why are you lead-colored, and we golden?"

"We must keep on our work-clothes," said the tree, "for our work is not yet done; but your clothes are for a holiday, because your task is over."

Just then a little puff of wind came, and the leaf let go without thinking of it, and the wind took it up and turned it over, and then let it fall gently down under the edge of a fence, among hundreds of leaves; and it never waked up to tell what it dreamed about.

SILVER TIP.

While we were traveling overland to one of the mining-camps of Colorado, one of the party captured a young bear. When brought to camp he fought deserately, until we gave him some sugar. In a few minutes he was eating it from our hands. He then cuddled down in my lap and went to sleep.

After that, if he was cross or behaved badly, all we had to do was to give him a little cuff on the ears, and he would become as obedient as a dog. We let him run loose, having only a small chain around his neck, with a small piece of iron on the other end.

There were many large boulders around camp. I would run and hide behind one until he came on the top of it, then I would jump at him and away he would scamper, and I would hide behind another. One day I did not appear to notice him, and he reached over and boxed my ears.

Once we found him sitting erect, holding the syrup can up and letting the contents dribble into his mouth. Another time he was found with the condensed milk held tightly in one arm, while he used the other paw to put in the can. When it was well covered with milk, he would lick it off.

In the fall we moved, and had to leave him. He was now so large that his new owner kept him chained. One day he saw a girl about my size passing. He pulled frantically at the chain, broke it, and started after her. He thought he had found his old playmate. A man, thinking he meant to harm her, fired, and our pet fell dead.

WOODCHUCK AS A FAMILY PET.

An odd pet is owned by a Brunswick family. It is a two-year-old woodchuck, which has become very tame.

He lives in a hole near the cellar of the house, and always comes out when the skimming of the milk is going on, in which he appears to be very much interested. Sept. 25, 1905, he seemed to be very sleepy and disappeared and nothing further was seen of him until Fast Day, when he reappeared.

He had been in a state of hibernation for seven months and one day. He was very glad to see the family and was in very good flesh despite his long winter's sleep.—Kenebec Journal.

The largest insect in the world is probably a grasshopper found in the Karoo desert in South Africa. It has a ten-inch spread of wing.

America's Unofficial Independence Day

By H. Addington Bruce.

NESTLING in the Piedmont region of North Carolina stands the little town of Charlotte. Today it looks sleepy, and peaceful, and quiet, but in colonial times it was perhaps the liveliest place in the Old North State. Indeed, at least one of His Most Gracious Majesty's officers referrred to it as the "hornet's nest" of America. This epithet, born of baffled wrath, was not misapplied.

Almost from its first settlement by the sturdy Scotch who emigrated thither early in the eighteenth century, from their native land or from a temporary abiding-place in the north of Ireland, Mecklenburg County, of which Charlotte is the centre, was famed as the habitat of irreconcilables. The early annals of North Carolina bear abundant testimony to the temper and spirit of the men of Mecklenburg, and as the years passed and the British yoke became more and more unbearable nowhere was disloyalty more openly voiced than among the glades and hills of this charming region. If it be true of the rest of the country that the prevailing sentiment in the period immediately preceding the Revolution was for an amicable settlement of the difficulties with Great Britain, it would seem certain that in Mecklenburg, at least, there was a well-defined opinion in favor of repudiating allegiance, cutting loose entirely from the motherland, and entering upon a career of independent nationality. This opinion, if the claims of the Mecklenburgians and their descendants are to be accepted, culminated in May, 1775, in the adoption, by regularly elected delegates to a county convention, of a bold and warlike declaration of independence, setting forth the wrongs under which the colonies were laboring, and in no uncertain terms asserting that "we do hereby declare ourselves a free and independent people; that we are, and of right ought to be, a soverign and self-governing people under the power of God and the General Congress; to the maintenance of which independence we solemnly pledge to each other our mutual co-operation, our lives, our fortunes, and our most sacred honor."

As the story goes, the convention was the outcome of several earlier meetings of the leading spirits of the county, held for the purpose of ascertaining the attitude of the inhabitants with respect to the claim of Parliament to tax colonies and otherwise regulate their internal affairs. So soon as it was learned that open opposition to the home authorities would receive popular support, Thomas Polk, the colonel commandant of the county, issued an order to each militia captain directing him to call a company meeting for the election of two delegates to a county convention. This was done and on May 19, 1775, the convention assembled in the Court-house at Charlotte.—Harper's Weekly.

The English Ha-Ha.

By Mrs. F. H. Burnet in Country Life in America

LITERALLY it is an extremely clever arrangement of the landscape gardener of long ago (or one may suppose he was of long ago, as the ha-ha is found oftenest in old places), and it is the device of one who dealt with English gardens attached to broad English private parks. Its raison d'etre is the following:

In most private parks deer, cattle or sheep are usually pastured, partly for the utilitarian purpose of fertilization and close cropping of the turf and partly because of their forming a picturesque detail. Deer are obviously ornamental, so are fine cattle, especially small herds of the shaggy black Highland bulls or stag eyed Jerseys, and nothing produces a more softly completing effect than a scattered flock of snow white sheep, straying and nibbling or resting in groups under spreading boughs of oaks and beeches. From these, of course, the garden must be protected by some sufficient barrier, and for this purpose the ha-ha was invented.

A feature of most park surrounded pleasure grounds is that it has been part of the designer's plan that they shall not appear to be limited by any stretch of fence or hedge which would break the line of sight, but that the garden shall produce the effect of melting into the sward of the park and seem to be part of its broad sweeps and spaces. A hedge or fence would form an obvious boundary, and the ha-ha was the ingenious alternative.

A dry moat is dug where lawns join park lands. One side, that toward the lawns, is perpendicular; the other gently slopes; the tops are carefully levelled with each other, and the whole neatly turfed. The perpendicular side it usually fitted with a short horizontal fence of wire netting to prevent the incursions of rabbits. No animal can cross this, and when it is carefully levelled the result achieved is that, even when one stands at a distance of only a few yards from it, the eye notes no break in the sweep of the turf and sees nothing of the barrier, either depression or fencing, the moat being below the line of view instead of forming a limiting obstruction to it.

An Appeal for the Old Standard of Honesty

By Theodore P. Shonts. Chairman of the Panama Canal Commission

THE highest function of a university is to supply well-disciplined and well-informed minds, which are capable of accurate thinking. There has never been any lack of the opposite kind of mind, which is the very fountain-head of misinformation and error. This crop, like those of weeds and mosquitoes, takes care of itself.

Calm reasoning is necessary to meet and direct into safe channels this spirit of discontent and revolt that is abroad today. That there are grave causes for it cannot be denied. The demands for reform, hysterical and unreasoning as many of them are, are well grounded and must be heeded. The evils complained of have come about because, as a people, we have drifted from the old standard of honesty and patient accumulation into a mad rush for wealth, for the piling up of enormous fortunes in the shortest possible period of time. We must be brought back to the old moorings, not by violence and unlawful methods, but by calm and inflexible application of law.

That the country will right itself, that it will pass safely through this crisis as it has passed through all those that have preceded it, no one familiar with its history can doubt. At heart the people are sound, and at heart they are also just and rational. They have always been more wise, more patient and more fair-minded than many of their would-be leaders, for they have always insisted upon becoming possessed of the truth before taking action.

Nothing breeds a spirit of anarchy so quickly as disregard of law, or successful violation of law, by those who should be its stanchest supporters. Nothing so stimulates the growth of Socialistic ideas as the belief that rich and powerful men have been violating the law and escaping the consequences of their offenses. By far the larger part of the Socialistic feeling that exists in this country today is due to a conviction of this kind in the minds of thousands of people. The evil consequences of this state of mind can only be avoided by a convincing demonstration that there is the same law for the rich as for the poor, the same justice for the Trust magnate as for the penniless man.

Some Things Glasgow Does for the People

By Frederick C. Howe.

BUT Glasgow has its benevolences. It provides generously for public concerts in the parks; it has acquired some fine halls for public use; it has a splendid municipal art collection housed in a fine gallery. Its parks and playgrounds are extensive. They are beautifully maintained, and are open to the widest use. Its public library is comparable to those of many cities in America.

The city has its little extravagances, too. They are part of the show. For the British city delights in the spectacular. That is one of the things the lord mayor is for—to be the city's host, and foot its entertainment bills. It seems like an anticlimax to a long and distinguished aldermanic career to be offered the privilege of expending from ten to twenty thousand dollars a year for the maintenance of the city's dignity and the entertainment of its guests. Yet this is a privilege to which the best of Britain's business men aspire. And Glasgow has many little flings at the expense of the treasury. The aldermen go on trips to England and the Continent in the study of other cities. Every fortnight or so one of the departments has an inspection which is its annual show. This is followed by a luncheon at the Town Hall. A hundred or more of the city's official, with their guests, sit down to a dinner in the Council Chamber and hear about the committee's achievements.

I attended one of these inspections. We drove over the city and returned to the Town Hall to luncheon. There was all the orderliness of a state dinner; the rank and station of each man was assigned. There were speeches, vastly more interesting than those of an ordinary dinner, for they all talked Glasgow. Not as an American city might talk to a river and harbor committee from Congress from whom it hoped for a generous appropriation; it was not business, tonnage, bank clearances. These men were too big with Glasgow to talk about private business. It was rather the sort of thing that college men do at a fraternity banquet.

A boy of twelve in the custody of the Paris police told them that it is their business to find out his name and address.

SCIENCE FOR SMOKERS.

All About Meerschaum and Its Manufacture Into Pipes.

Despite our familiarity with meerschaum, as used in pipes, it is safe to say that few of us have more than a vague idea of the peculiar properties of this substance, or the condition in which it occurs in nature. Nor may its chemical designation as a hydrous silicate of magnesia of the formula Mg2Si3O8+2H2O prove very enlightening. The ancients believed the substance to be petrified sea foam, hence the German name Meerschaum, meaning sea foam; and a very apt name it is, for the mineral is very white and so light that it will float when dry. Pieces of meerschaum have been found floating in the Black Sea which were evidently washed out of their matrix by the waves. This may also have had its influence on the sea foam theory of its formation.

Meerschaum is found in best quality and most abundant quantity in Asia Minor, though it also occurs in Greece, Spain, Moravia and Morocco, and even in this country in South Carolina. The riches mines are on the plains of Eskishehr, 250 miles southeast of Constantinople. One of these mines is said to be a thousand years old, and consists of about two thousand pits within an area of six miles, all but about 150 of which have been exhausted. The miner occurs in nodules or lumps of various and irregular sizes, buried in the alluvial deposit of the plain. Another mine comprises three thousand pits, only one hundred of which are being worked. The material is mined by the inhabitants of surrounding villages, and transported in the rough to Eskishehr.

The meerschaum pipe factory of this city illustrates the process of forming the material into pipes. The largest pieces are cut with a band saw to a convenient size, after which the meerschaum is soaked in water until it becomes quite soft. Meerschaum when wet becomes very soapy, and will produce quite a lather if rubbed. In fact, the material serves as a very good substitute for soap, and is thus used in Morocco. Meerschaum dust makes an excellent cleaning powder for removing spots from fabrics.

After being thoroughly soaked the meerschaum can be cut like cheese, and it is then shaped with a knife to the form of a pipe. When dry the bowl and stem shanks are drilled.

In the selection of a meerschaum pipe one should be careful not to pick a dead white specimen. That which is of a slight creamy color will soonest take on that beautiful rich yellow brown shade which so delights the smoker. Nor should the meerschaum be too light, as that is an indication that it is too porous to color properly, while on the other hand, a very heavy meerschaum may be almost too dense to absorb the coloring nicotine. A great many so-called meerschaum pipes are made from artificial meerschaum, a material composed of chips and dust of meerschaum bonded with some solution and moulded into blocks. The artificial product is somewhat heavier than the genuine. There are still other ways of imitating meerschaum, and a novice will find difficulty in successfully selecting a genuine meeschaum pipe of good qaulity.—Scientific American.

Fish Hawk's Nest on a Buoy.

Of all places that a bird would select to make a nest the top of a day beacon, a channel mark, bobbing up and down on the waves of the river, seems to be the most remarkable, but this is what a fish hawk has done in one of the buoys down river. The steamboat men have noticed for several days past a mass of twigs, straw, rags and other odds and ends in the top of the beacon marking the Metompking shoal, off Riverside wharf, and a day or two ago they saw a fish-hawk light on the buoy. Closer observation disclosed that his mate was sitting on the nest.

The buoy has a conical-shaped top, with a depression in it, and surrounded by wirework forming a sort of open cage. In the depression the nest has been placed, and here the birds will raise their family, free from molestation, for they are two or three miles from the nearest land. The bird home is near the base of food supplies.

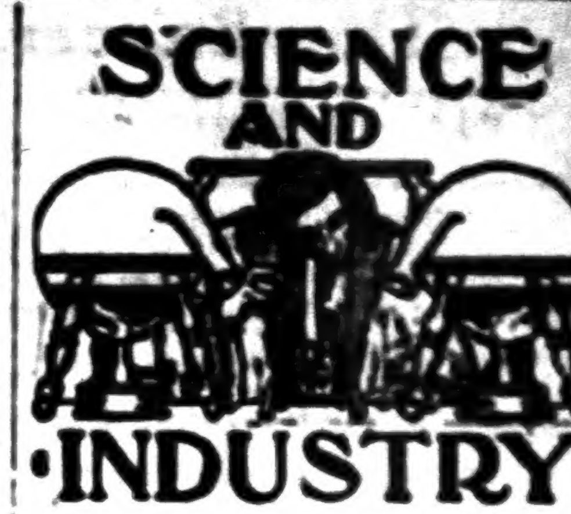
The father bird has but to step out to the door of his house, either front or back, and, watching the water lawn for a moment or two, make a dive and come up with a supply of food for his family. It looks as if it were a pair of wise birds which selected a nesting place.—Washington Star.

How Senator Tillman Lost an Eye.

Although his brothers were old enough to serve in the Confederate army, Benjamin R. Tillman was a schoolboy of 15 when the great struggle began. He knew that at 16 he must join the Confederate forces, and his brothers wrote back from the field entreating him to get as much education as possible, because the war might last so long that he would never again be able to go to school.

Even at night young Tillman would continue his studies, frequently carrying a lighted pine knot into the woods and lying down with his books beside it. He was a lank, tall, silent boy, dictatorial and brusque, but a natural student. The heat of the pine torch injured his left eye and a plunge in cold water brought on a tumor that destroyed it. It was the almost two years' illness following this mishap that prevented the youth from serving in arms against the Union.—Pearson's Magazine.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY



In the Journal fur Infektionskrankheiten Dr. Ford describes his method of vaccinating as a remedy for mushroom poisoning. He found, by experimenting, that animals into which he had injected an antitoxine could stand a dose of poison ten times stronger than others.

It is asserted by high authorities that neither great heat nor long maintenance of the requisite temperature is required to sterilise milk suspected of containing the germs of diseases, such as tuberculosis. The bacilli of that terrible disease are destroyed by a temperature of 105 degrees in five minutes.

The Prince of Monaco, acknowledged to the the greatest living authority on oceanography, has decided to establish in Paris an institution for seabed research and will endow it with something like $1,000,000. He has spent a great deal of money in searching out the secrets of the sea. His splendid yacht Princess Alice is fitted up with fine laboratories and photographic rooms.

A Berlin paper tells of a new device that makes herring fishing easy. A microphone, which magnifies sounds, is plunged into the sea to ascertain if fish are pasing that way. A wire connects the submerged microphone with an ordinary receiver, with which one listens to what is going on in the depths of the sea. Excellent results have been obtained in the North Sea by the invention for signaling the passing of the herring shoals.

It is said by some students of the origin of the great iron and steel industry that the Japanese many generations ago used to make steel in a curious manner which is not wholly understood. They forged iron into the shapes desired and then buried it eight or ten years in marshy ground. Through some process of nature, which may have been due to the presence of peculiar chemicals in the soil, it came out steel.

The manufacture of cement in the United States continues to make remarkable progress. Whereas in 1890 there were sixteen factories, producing annually 335,000 barrels of Portland cement, there were, in 1905, eighty-two plants, with an estimated output of 31,000,000 barrels. The manufacture has increased about a hundredfold in sixteen years, for in 1889 the total production was 300,000 barrels. Since the great extension of the use of this material, the amount of natural cement produced in America has rapidly declined.

The enormous salt deposits in Kansas, beginning in Ellsworth and Saline counties, extends south through the counties of Rice, McPherson, Stafford, Reno, Harvey, Kingman, Sedgwick, Harper and Sumner. Salt wells are found outside of this district, but it is believed that their water is made salt by coming in contact with the salt bed within the counties named. A few years ago it was estimated that Kansas had twenty trillion barrels of salt and could alone supply the demand of the United States for more than a million years.

Canning Plants Go West.

A most wonderful industrial evolution in the canning industry is taking place, and the East, which for years has been the very centre of this great industry, is rapidly losing its largest canning plants, which are being transplanted to the West.

New York and Boston, and other Eastern men interested in the industry, have made searching inquiry into the conditions which are sending to the West what promises to develop in a few years into one of its richest assets.

They have found, among other things, that the richest Western soil, especially in Indiana and Wisconsin, is more suited to the production of tomatoes than worn lands of the Eastern States.

Several hundred new plants have grown up in the West in the last few years. Last year many Eastern factories closed their doors, and when the packing season begins in August or September, it is thought several more Eastern plants will have located in the West.—New England Grocer.

Dragged Ten Wolves From a Den.

By going into a hole head first and pulling out ten ferocious wolves with bare hands and handing them one at a time to his companions, Uncle Sol Strong, past sixty years of age, has Abernathy skinned a mile. This all happened Sunday. Uncle Sol, Fred Strong and Walt Davis went out for a little wolf chase. We have already told the result. The wolves were tied and brought to Geary.

Just before locating this bunch of wolves Uncle Sol was riding over the ground at a pretty fast gait. All at once his horse came to a stop, but the rider kept on going and landed at the bottom of a deep canon forty feet from his horse. A bruised shoulder was the only bad effect.—Geary Bulletin.

Democratic Primary Election

Acting under instructions of a mass meeting of the people of Chilton county, held at the Court House, Clanton, Saturday, July 21, 1906, we, the Democratic Executive Committee of Chilton county, hereby order a Primary Election of the white voters of Chilton county to be held at the several voting places in the county, on for the purpose of nominating a Representative in the Legislature, a Sheriff, one Commissioner for the First District of Chilton county, and one Commissioner for the Second District of said county, one Executive Committeeman from each Beat, and six Delegates to the State Democratic Convention, Sept. 19, 1906.

All qualified white voters, irrespective of any and all previous political affiliations, are cordially invited to participate in said primary election.

J. C. DENNIS, Chairman.

Fifteenth Senatorial Primary

A primary election is hereby called for the purpose of nominating a Democratic candidate for Senator from the Fifteenth Senatorial District of Alabama, to be held on the 27th day of August, 1906, under the rules and regulations already adopted for the holding of State and County primaries.

Candidates for said office will be voted for on the county tickets and the candidate receiving a plurality of the votes cast will be declared the nominee.

J. C. DENNIS, Chairman.
L. N. BOWDEN, Secretary.

J. C. DENNIS, Chairman.
R. E. BOWDEN, Secretary.

PERCY CLARK.

The unexpected has happened and Mr. W. B. Craig is not to have a walk over for the Democratic nomination for Congress in this district. The announcement of Mr. Percy Clark, of Dallas, which appears in this issue, brings before the constituency a man well known to them. Born in Calhoun county, the greater part of his life has been spent in Dallas, and his proud boast is that every vote he has cast has been in Dallas, although of late years business has called him to other sections.

Mr Clark is a sound Democrat, and is very strong in his views. He purposes making an active canvass of the district, and will present his claims to the nomination in a forceful manner.

H A. SKEGGS, JR.

This gentleman, whose announcement appears elsewhere, is the popular Mayor of Decutur, and is a candidate for Associate Railroad Commissioner. He favors the regulation of railroad rates in a fair, just and equitable manner to all interests concerned, impartially enforced without fear or favor, to any individual, firm or corporation. He is opposed to the present method of settling claims by the railroads, and to the car service rule as now enforced.

HENRY B. GRAY.

As the campaign is drawing near to a close, it is well to get acquainted with the candidates, and with this purpose we herewith give a brief sketch of Henry B. Gray, candidate for Lieutenant-Governor.

Mr. Gray has for many years been a resident of Birmingham, where he stands high in the regard of the people. As a newspaper man he was very popular, and subsequently as president of a popular banking institution he has made many friends.

In the belief that a successful man of business would be acceptable to the voters of the State he announced his candidacy for the Lieutenant-Governorship and has met with strong support all over the State. Mr. Gray is a firm believer in the Democratic doctrine of the greatest good to the greatest number and if elected, as there is much probability he will be, intends to live up to that motto in the fullest degree.

CRAIG ENDORSED BY HIS HOME PEOPLE.

Whereas, this committee has been mindful of the valued and esteemed service heretofore tendered the Democratic party, in an unselfish and unstinted manner, free from influences other than those prompted by loyalty of purpose and a desire of furthering the ends of the Democratic party, and for the entire people; and,

Whereas, the people have heretofore, and now, appreciate to the fullest extent his valuable services as Senator in the Legislature of Alabama from this county, the thirtieth Senatorial district; and,

Whereas, it is the desire of this committee to express in some way its hearty endorsement of his candidacy as representative from the Fourth Congressional District of Alabama in the Congress of the United States, and urge all Democrats of the District, especially of Dallas county, to use their utmost endeavor in advancing such a worthy, able and efficient cause.

Therefore be it resolved by the City Democratic Executive Committee that it is largely to the interest of the Democratic party of the State, and especially to the Democrats of the Fourth Congressional District of Alabama, that a just recognition of the services heretofore rendered the party by the Hon. William B. Craig, who is now a candidate, and worthy to fill the vacancy caused by the declination of Hon. S. J. Bowie to make the race again, that each loyal Democrat espouse the cause of Democracy in according to Mr. Craig the large vote he is justly entitled to.

Resolved second, that in urging the party to actively interest itself in this sterling Democrat's behalf it is the sense of this committee to give this endorsement and urge an active interest purely because of the deserved merits Mr. Craig is entitled to, and because his election will reflect credit and honor on the Democracy of the State, and bulwark and safety of the country.

R. D. Walker, Chairman; Theo. Lacy, Aaron R. Leonard, Hooper Adams, F. B. Miller, John F. Buhler, T. W. Barker, W. L. Quinn, H. Franelich.

WHAT WE NEED.

Communicated.

This statement of facts is presented that we all may at once recognize the political wolves (railroad henchmen), who in this campaign, have carefully shut their mouths, hidden their teeth and in borrowed lambskins are smirking up and down the State. We will not be deceived by this concealment of their teeth and exchange of clothes, but in every county in the State those of us who worked or voted for these policies in 1902 and again in 1904 will join in winning a greater victory in this final battle of 1906. Our work must be active for B. B. Comer and men for the Legislature and other state offices whom we know by their works will properly represent us.

Our legislators and state officers should work especially for four things: First, Local freight rates in Alabama as low as those provided by the railroads in Georgia. Second, To adjust car service rules, so that not only the shipper who unnecessarily delays railroad equipment shall pay demurrage but that likewise the railroads who unnecessarily delay the furnishing of equipment or the movement of the shippers' goods shall also pay demurrage. Third, That there shall be prompt settlement, within a specified time, for the loss or damage to goods in tranit. Fourth, For clearly defined laws that will secure these needed changes and that will fully and equitably protect the citizen in the transportation of his person or goods. The failure to furnish cars for the movement of shipments from local stations now works a terrible hardship on small manufactures and merchants located at these points. The failure of the railroads to settle, within a reasonable time, small claims for over-charge, lost and damaged freight causes a great loss and annoyance and is an inexcusable injustice to those small shippers whose claims are not sufficiently large to justify the employment of lawyers

We suggest as the best and surest means of accomplishing these four changes. First:—That the legislature, whose right is unquestioned, shall, by law, make it impossible to raise present rates in Alabama. Second:—Having done this, that they take a number of articles of common production and consumption and make the legal maximum rates on these articles the same as the rates in Georgia. Third:—To carefully amend the present laws giving power to the Railroad Commission so that this Commission will have unquestionable authority to pass regulations regarding demurrage, movement and handling of goods and the fixing of additional freight and express rates from time to time, as in its judgement are equitable.

Make your candidates state clearly if they stand and will work for these things and be sure your candidate for the Senate is right on these questions.

Don't forget that those fighting us have a strong organization and will work at the polls. We must have at least three men in every beat who will look after getting out our vote and seeing that tickets are properly crossed. See your neighbors and get this done in your beat and write me the names of those who will work.

The fight is again up to the people, let each of us defend his line, feeling that throughout the State our comrades of this four years struggle are each standing to his guns. There were only eight counties against us before; let's win these and make it this time unanimous for reasonable local freight and express rates, B. B. Comer and a government by the people, and not by "the railroads."

Pleasant Grove.

The members composing the Chilton County Singing Convention met with Pleasant Grove church, Saturday, July 28, 1906, in the second annual session.

10:30 a.m. Welcome address by J. H. Thomas, to which J. W. Billingsley responded in his pleasant way.

Next on the program was the methods of teaching primary pupils in the singing school, which was discussed by James Franklin and J. B. Northcutt. Ways to improve music in the Sunday school was ably discussed by Prof. M. C. Crumpton and N. J. Calloway.

Music—it's influence for good, was ably spoke to by J. H. Thomas. No. 47, in "Songs of Triumph," was sung, led by James Franklin.

Then adjourned for dinner, which was bountifully spread and enjoyed by all present, about 500 in number.

1:30 p.m. The convention was called to order by the president, then a song service of 45 minutes, led by J. L. Gore, J. C. Veazey, James Franklin, J. B. Northcutt and J. W. Billingsley.

2:15. Election of officers, etc.

Will say that the day was well spent and enjoyed by all present.

Sunday morning the convention met promptly at 10 a.m. Devotional exercise conducted by N. J. Calloway. The remainder of the day was spent in singing, except from 12 until 1, during which time the good ladies of this place spread as nice and as bountiful dinner as the eyes of the writer have ever beheld. We can't help thanking the young people for their good behaviour during the day, especially at the table and in the house. But an intelligent people will observe good order at any and all times. I never witnessed as good singing in all my life. We thank and praise Almighty God for sparing our life to attend this meeting, for when such music as was made there is heard our whole being is moved, the physical world disappears, the eyes of the soul open, we bow the head and bend the knee and our thoughts disengaged from atter soar to the eternal regions of the good, the true, the beautiful; music is love, it came from God, it will be the language of the great beyond when He shall have called us home.

The music of the day was led by J. L. Gore, J. W. Billingsley, C. L. Glasscock, J. C. Veazey, James Franklin and M. C. Crumpton; Misses Mattie Patton, Gena Collins, Ellen Thomas, and Prof. J. D. C. Scott, organists.

The following resolution was offered and adopted: Resolved, That the thanks of this convention be tendered the good people of Pleasant Grove and community for the cordial way in which we have been entertained during our stay with them. We will ever remember them in our prayers.

The next annual session will be held with Macedonia church, five miles east of Randolph, some time in July, 1907. To the members of the convention: Let us strive to make this meeting better than the one just closed, if possible.

Hump Back

SCOTT'S EMULSION won't make a hump back straight, neither will it make a short leg long, but it feeds soft bone and heals diseased bone and is among the few genuine means of recovery in rickets and bone consumption.

Letter to P. T. Hinkle.

Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sir: There are several ways of cheating in milk. An old-fashioned way is to water it. Nobody waters it now. A better way is to take out the cream—rich milk with the cream takes out is as good as poor milk with its cream all in.

But we needn't go into particulars.

You don't rob your milk and your customers.

Paint is as easy as milk to cheat with. Good paint is as rare as good milk; for human nature is much the same in milkmen and paint men.

You are just and true with your milk; so are we with our paint. Devoe lead-and-zinc is twice as good as mixed paints: There is twice as much butter in it.

Mr. J. T. Ladd, Cheraw, writes:

"When Mr. Evans painted his house with Devoe, he figured on how other paints covered and had enough left to paint three large rooms. He was so pleased that he has used Devoe on two other houses."

Yours truly,
36 F. W. DEVOE & CO.

PLAYING HOOKEY.

I remember when in boyhood,
Just a step advanced from toyhood,
When in through the schoolroom windows floated sweet the wild birds' call,
I would close my desk at dinner,
Like a hardened little sinner,
And the after-nooning found me playing hookey from it all.

What to us the far-off sorrow
Of the whipping on the morrow,
For the day seemed all the future—'twas a hundred hours long.
And each hour we were enjoying
By the wood and pool—just boying,
While the wild birds caught our laughing tones and wove them into song.

And to-day a robin twittered
Through the window, and my littered
Desk became the ink-bespattered one my schooldays used to know,
When the voice of spring was crying
And some voice in me replying
To its every note and echo—and some yearning bade me go.

But a stern duty fetters
Me to these unanswered letters
While through half-opened shutters sweet the wild birds cry and call.
And I'm wishing, wishing, wishing,
I might steal off somewhere, fishing,
Lock up every care and worry—just play hookey from it all.

J. W. Foley, in the New York Times.

THE MAN AND THE SNAKE

MIRRIELES.

All round the circle of the hills, the dazzling sky pressed down unclouded to the touch of the parched rim-rock. Between the hills the shallow basin lay baked and breathless. Over it the tense air quivered with heat. Within, no bird fluttered nor water purled nor green plant raised its head. Only the desert children, sage-brush and grease-wood and long-spined cactus, gray but never dying, lived on there in the drought, sterile and forbidding as the land which gave them birth.

Everywhere was silence upon the place, everywhere was immobility, save where the man lay and where beside him the bound snake whirred and writhed and rattled in the impotent fury of fear.

The man lay stretched on the hot earth, stark naked, his face turned to the sky. A buckskin thong passed across his throat and was drawn taut between two roots of sage-brush. The noose which held his ankles was secured about a clump of greasewood and both arms thonged at the wrists, stretched wide as in crucifixion. Heavy bands of buckskin spanned his body so that to the prisoner there was left but two possible movements. He could turn his head from side to side, facing on the one hand the snake, on the other the miniature forest of sage-brush; and he could clench and unclench his pinioned hands.

In this last freedom the final ingenuity of savage captors had found expression. With the left hand tight clenched, the snake's wild stroke fell just short of its aim. Should sleep or insensibility relax the fingers, the reptile's head might overlap him.

Since early morning, through the increasing heat of the day, the man had lain there, grim and silent as the gray hills around him, save when now and then he raised his hoarse voice in defiant shouts. The snake, on the other hand, struggled and fought unceasingly against the cord which held him, striking impartially at it, at the just removed fingers or at the wooden stake to which the cord was tied, grovelling his body in the sandy earth, writhing and tugging with protruding tongue, and all the while translating in whirr and hiss the blind fear of his captivity.

Sometimes the man turned his head to watch; once or twice when the snake's movements flagged he slightly stirred his fingers in the sand, the ruse each time rewarded by the swift spring and fruitless stroke. But mostly he lay still, all his mind bent on endurance.

The man had been placed there to die. He knew it and the knowledge tinged his thoughts with a strange curiosity. There were three ways in which death might reach him; through the snake, through sunstroke or by the weary route of thirst and hunger. The second and quickest of these ways the light mountain air, vibrantly hot though it might be, rendered improbable. For the snake, it was part of the man's torment that at any minute he might stretch forth his hand and by the movement invite an end, brief indeed but horrible to the mind, doubly horrible to the strained imagination.

There was one other chance. An unexpected rain-storm, a heavy night dew in that barren place, would so stretch the slender buckskin thong which held the rattler that unaided he might reach and strike his victim. This was the element of uncertainty in the grim problem. This it was that sent the man's eyes searching the bare horizon with a look half dread, half longing.

On one of these weary journeys of sight a tiny speck of black above the western hills attracted him—a steady pin-point in the dazzling blue. He shut his eyes a moment in order to look again the more intently, and when he opened them, lo! the dark points were two. He watched them uncomprehendingly, as slowly and steadily high in air they moved from west to east. When at last in mid-heaven the sun's sheer strength beat down his gaze, he was the lonelier for loss of this one sign of movement.

The sense of heat had by now grown into anguish. The man's exposed body drew and quivered beneath the sun's rays as though each inch of it were endowed with a separate life. Unseen insects brushed and fluttered upon it, leaving beneath their light pressure a trail like fire on the blistered surface. The snake lay prone, exhausted almost beyond striking. The man, noting it, smiled grimly and scraped his fingers noisily in the loose earth. As the snake whirled to front the challenge, he curled his hand close with a taunt for its futile effort.

He was thus engrossed when suddenly across his face swept a sense of delicious coolness. He turned his head; close above him almost within touch of his free hand, a great black bird, carrion in every movement, hovered on steady, outspread wings. Its shadow fell across his face; its eyes, beadlike and listening and greedy, looked straight into his own.

For an instant they stared thus, man and bird. Then with a cry the man flung himself against his bonds, struggling and straining at them for escape from this new horror. On his body, dry till now, the sweat poured forth in streams. Blood gushed from his nostrils. With shrieks, with oaths, with stumbling words of prayer, he fought against the fate which held him.

Not once but many times the struggle was repeated. When at last, exhausted, his convulsed body fell back to quiet, the bird was gone. Shudderingly the man raised his eyes. Far up, half lost in blue, but ready, tireless, it hung above him.

"God!" breathed the prisoner. "God!" and turning his blanched cheek to the sand, he fell into a sort of sleep.

All through the waning day he slept, through the approach of night and the swift desert change from heat to cold. When he awoke the first pale amethyst of dawn was in the sky. The snake was sleeping, not as snakes are wont to sleep in freedom, head tucked to tail and sinuous fold lapping on fold, but with his swollen body back-thrown and stiffened against the stake which held him, caught mid-struggle by insensibility.

The man turned his head to face him.

"Hey, rattler!" he called cheerily, and scraped some grains of sand toward the recumbent body.

But when he saw the start and shudder with which the creature woke, the anguish of returning consciousness, suddenly he was sorry for his act. When the snake, writhing round, struck at its cord quivering from head to tail, he would have given an hour of his own rest to have restored the sleep which he had broken.

The sun rose presently. Again the weary panorama of the day unrolled before the eyes of the two victims. The snake was quiet, weakened by his long struggle. The man, strengthened by sleep, restored by the night's cold, held himself strongly in hand.

Sometimes, indeed, the growing heat drew from his lips a broken sigh. Sometimes birds, many now, swooped low around him with hoarse cries and flapping of heavy wings; at such times his whole body grew tense beneath the stress of almost uncontrollable disgust and terror. But he lay still. Not for his reason's sake dared he again give way to the expression of fear. It was a comfort to him in these moments that the snake showed no apprehension of their gruesome neighbors or eyed them only with the avid eyes of hunger. Watching the indifference of the reptile, the man feared less. Fixing his eyes upon it, he could hold hard to sanity and to endurance, though around him perched and hovered the vulture ministers of death.

But as the morning passed a new anxiety should die first? It seemed to weaken with every hour and the man trembled. He spoke to it soothingly at times and had, or believed he had, the power of quieting its paroxyms. In his fevered mind he searched haltingly for some knowledge of its needs. Would it live longer for the taking of life? And if by stretching out his hand he could delay its end, what then of the lengthening of its pain? Before his dimming eyes, the snake loomed, now a refuge, now a menace. A dozen times, he half relaxed his hand only to draw it quickly close again. Once when the snake fell in its spring, seemingly dead, he thrust the fingers wide with a cry of utter deprivation. When it moved again he drew them in, the instinctive love of life still strong upon him.

A buzzard had risen at his cry and perched on the sage-brush at his head. He studied it quietly for a while, its coarse, draggled feathers, its filmed, eyes and cruel beak. When the scrutiny had grown intolerable, he strove to shout to scare it from its place. His voice came dry and breathless, scarcely a whisper, and the bird swayed back and forth unmoved.

He closed his eyes after this and for a long time lay still, only rolling his head from side to side that the vultures might not light upon his body.

At last, when the sun lay low on the horizon, he ceased the movement and again looked about him. Overhead a cloud of birds, scared by the sudden quiet, hung high in air; swarms of ants and lesser insects crawled and fed upon his arms and body; the sage-brush all around rustled with pungent dryness and to the west the sky burn-dryness and to the west the sky burned hard and bright as burnished copper.

For a long time he waited. Then, with a sobbing breath, he flung round, straining his body against the cords which held him.

The snake too had moved. The throng that bound it was drawn taut and painfully it had thrust its swollen head across its fingers. It lay thus, outstretched, not striking, its glazing eyes on the man's face.

And while they lay so suddenly there came to pass the impossible, the one uncounted chance. From far across the desolate sage-brush desert sounded to them the barking of a dog.

It came nearer and with it the creak and grinding of heavy wheels. The man strove to cry out and, failing, gnawed desperately at his baked lips and tongue. When the feeble trickle of blood which paid his efforts had moistened his dry throat, he raised his voice in shrill and terrible cries. Above him at the sound the startled birds swirled to the west. The snake, too weak to spring, had yet dragged himself to a coil, his flat head raised in air.

Between the cries the man could hear the abrupt stopping of the wagon, the confused exclamation of men's voices. Next instant the dog's moist breath whiffed on his forehead and a man's face bent to his own. There was a sudden tightening of the buckskin thongs as a knife passed beneath them, its cool blade searing like fire on the blistered flesh. Hands dragged him from his place. A man on either side he was held erect. Through a maze of pain and weakness, he could hear the comment of his rescuers.

"Alive, all right!"

"God! He'll die on our hands."

"Carry him to the wagon!"

"Look out! Step wide of the rattler!"

Hands beneath his shoulders, they bent to the task of lifting him.

The sufferer sent out a groping hand in protest. He swallowed hard, struggling to speak. His naked foot thrust close—perilously close—to the fanged head of the snake.

"Turn him loose, too," he commanded.—San Francisco Argonaut.

MAKING OVER A MOUNTAIN.

Helena Objects to Great Big Bald Hill—Will Make a Park on It.

The strangest and most interesting park project ever undertaken in this country is to be found at Helena, Mon., writes John H. Raftery in the Technical World Magazine for July, where the citizens are engaged in transforming the bald slopes of a conical mountain which towers nearly 1400 feet above the city into a forest park.

There is no spring, well, brook or pond upon the bare sides or rocky summits of this singular park; nor will it be possible to raise water from the valley for the irrigation of the trees, shrubs and flowers, yet the expert foresters of the Federal bureau who spent last summer planning for the planting of the park are agreed that several varieties of evergreen will flourish there without water or attendance.

A spiral footpath has been graded from the city to the summit of Mount Helena, and there an ornate pavilion has been erected upon the highest point of rock, 1400 feet above the main street. In the cliffs of the peak there are two spacious natural caves, which will be tenanted by specimens of the native bears, lions and other carnivora of these mountains.

Parks enclosing herds of deer, antelope, moose, elk and buffalo will be added as the present limits of the tract are extended upon the desert lands which lie back of the mountain.

A Century Ago.

Few persons to-day stop to realize how different things were in this country century ago. Here are a few things to think of:

Merchants wrote their letters with quill pens. Sand was used to dry the ink, as there was no blotting paper. There were no street letter boxes; letters had to be carried to the postoffice. It cost eighteen and one-half cents to send a letter from Boston to New York, and twenty-five cents from Boston to Philadelphia.

Every gentleman—Washington, for example, wore a queue; many powdered their hair.

Imprisonment for debt was common.

Virginia contained a fifth of the whole population of the country.

The Missisippi Valley was not so well known as the heart of Africa now is.

Two stage coaches carried all the travelers between New York and Boston, and six days were required for the journey.

There was not a public library in the United States. A day laborer received two shillings a day.

Stoves were unknown. All cooking was done at an open fireplace.

Many of the streets were unnamed, and houses were not numbered.

Government Had No Objection.

The late Nat Head, once Goovernor of New Hamshire, sometimes surprised those who approached him to gain his political influences by his witty parrying of their requests.

Colonel Barrett, an estimable official upon the Governor's staff, died, and with unseemly haste his would-be successors began to push their claims, even while his body was awaiting burial with military honors.

One candidate, somewhat bolder than the rest, ventured to call upon Governor Head, thinking to ascertain the bent of the Governor's mind upon the important question.

"Governor," he asked, not to speak in a manner too positive, "do you think you would have any objections if I was to get into Colonel Barrett's place?"

The answer came promptly, "No, I don't think I should have any objections, if the undertaker is willing."

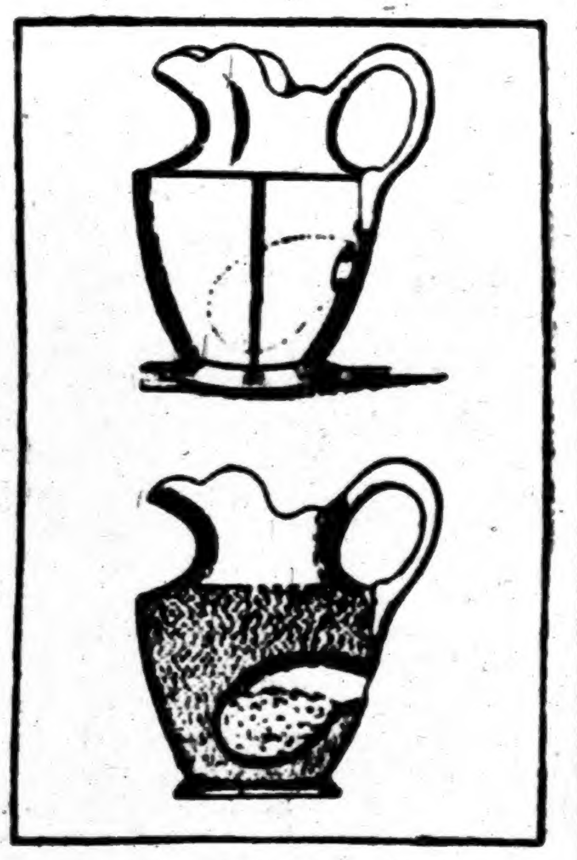
NOVEL PITCHER.

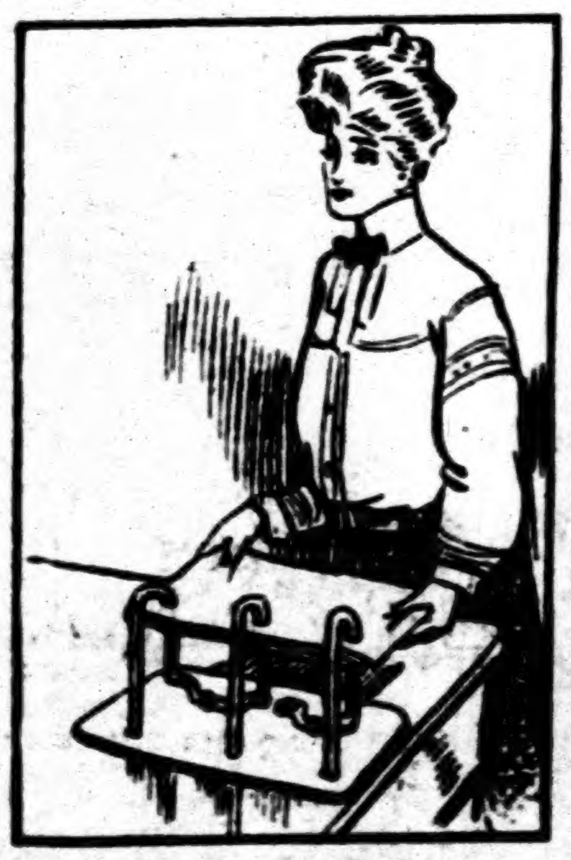
Novelties in inventions are always interesting, but of the many devices patented very few contain as unique an idea as the one shown here, a New York man being responsible for the scheme. Its purpose will be at once apparent and its usefulness and practicability unquestioned. The idea is shown here in connection with a pitcher which has a compartment distinct from that for holding the fluid contents. The purpose of this compartment is to hold ice out of contact with the ordinary contents. The liquid in the pitcher is shown by the shaded portion of the illustration, the pocket in which the ice is placed being slightly below the lower end of the handle. This pocket projects forward and downward and is otherwise so positioned that when the pitcher is tilted in the usual manner for the purpose of pouring out the contents the ice, together with any water, is careened forward and thus prevented from leaving the pocket. Any water from the melted ice in this way cannot dilute the contents, and the liquid maintains its proper degree of strength.



Ice Cannot Dilute Contents.

NEWSPAPER BINDER.

A New Zealand inventor thinks so highly of a combined file and binder ed States. The novelty of the device that he has had it patented in the United States. The novelty of the devise is in the fact that a batch of papers or letters can be threaded with a view to binding them. This is accomplished when they are removed from the file, it being only necessary to tie the string after the papers are removed. Spikes having sharpened ends are fastened upon a frame, the upper ends of the spikes co-operating with the fasteners, which are nominally held in place by the springs. Through the top of each spike is an eye, through which is threaded a piece of cord or twine. When sufficient papers have accumulated they are passed over the end of the spike, which naturally draws the cord with them. The cord is then cut into sections, and the corresponding ends tied. This would make an effective binder, saving much time and labor.



Binds the Papers.

Poisonous Eggs.

Certain eggs are poisonous, and among them are too kinds which are commonly eaten by human beings, namely, the hen's egg and the duck's egg.

Recent investigations made by a French chemist have demonstrated the fact that the yolk of many eggs contain poison enough to kill small creatures if administered in the form of injections under the skin. The ordinary hen's egg of the breakfast table is capable of causing this result. The duck's egg is still more poisonous, while the turtle's egg takes first place. Even the white of the turtle's egg is poisonous.

Be it noted that the toxic action occurs only when the egg is used for what medical men call subcutaneous injections; there is no need to be alarmed concerning the eating of these natural products, says Home Notes. The process of digestion nullifies any noxious effects which these useful dietary accessories may have when taken into the system in any other way.

FOLDING IRON BED.

The popularity and usefulness of folding beds have long been established. Until recently this novelty was applied to wooden beds only, but the universal demand for iron and brass beds has led a Detroit inventor to devise the folding iron bed shown here. The head and foot posts are connected together by side rails in the usual way, but otherwise the construction is entirely different. The head and foot of the bed are made by lazy tongs, which move toward and away from each other in folding and unfolding the bed. A swinging support for the mattress and spring is employed. The construction of this support is unique, the parts being pivoted in such a manner that they readily close up, occupying but little space when in that position. Attachments are provided for locking and unlocking the bed when it is in either position.

Only Survivor of Custer Massacre.

The Custer battlefield is close to the Crow Agency. In a desire to know all that I could, at close range, of the tragedy of the Little Big Horn, I spent many days in going over the battlefield foot by foot, from where the troops left the Rosebud to the ridge where the men had made their last stubborn fight. White marble slabs mark the spots where they fell. In most cases the slabs are in twos, side by side. Strange how it is when it comes to the final end, we reach out for human companionship. There they made their last earthly stand, bunkie by bunkie.

Among the dozens of Indians I questioned of the fight was Curly, who is so often called the sole survivor of the Custer fight. He has been so bullied, badgered, questioned, cross-questioned, leading-questioned, and called, by mouth and in type, a coward and a liar by an endless horde of the curious and knowledge seeking, that I doubt to-day, if his life depended upon it, he could tell whether he was ever at or near the Custer fight.—From "The Tribes of the Northwest Plains," by E. S. Curtis, in Scribner's.

PLAYING HOOKEY.

I remember when in boyhood,
Just a step advanced from toyhood,
When in through the schoolroom windows floated sweet the wild birds' call,
I would close my desk at dinner,
Like a hardened little sinner,
And the after-noon found me playing hookey from it all.

What to us the far-off sorrow
Of the whipping on the morrow,
For the day seemed all the future—'twas a hundred hours long.
And each hour we were enjoying
By the wood and pool—just boying,
While the wild birds caught our laughing tones and wove them into song.

And to-day a robin twittered
Through the window, and my littered
Desk became the ink-bespattered one my schooldays used to know,
When the voice of spring was crying
And some voice in me replying
To its every note and echo—and some yearning bade me go.

But a stern duty fetters
Me to these unanswered letters
While through half-opened shutters sweet the wild birds cry and call,
And I'm wishing, wishing, wishing,
I might steal off somewhere, fishing,
Lock up every care and worry—just play hookey from it all.

THE MAN AND THE SNAKE

. MIRRIELES.

All round the circle of the hills, the dazzling sky pressed down unclouded to the touch of the parched rim-rock. Between the hills the shallow basin lay baked and breathless. Over it the tense air quivered with heat. Within, no bird fluttered nor water purled nor green plant raised its head. Only the desert children, sage-brush and greasewood and long-spined cactus, gray but never dying, lived on there in the drought, sterile and forbidding as the land which gave them birth.

Everywhere was silence upon the place, everywhere was immobility, save where the man lay and where beside him the bound snake whirred and writhed and rattled in the impotent fury of fear.

The man lay stretched on the hot earth, stark naked, his face turned to the sky. A buckskin thong passed across his throat and was drawn taut between two roots of sage-brush. The noose which held his ankles was secured about a clump of greasewood and both arms thonged at the wrists, stretched wide as in crucifixion. Heavy bands of buckskin spanned his body so that to the prisoner there was left but two possible movements. He could turn his head from side to side, facing on the one hand the snake, on the other the miniature forest of sage-brush; and he could clench and unclench his pinioned hands.

In this last freedom the final ingenuity of savage captors had found expression. With the left hand tight clenched, the snake's wild stroke fell just short of its aim. Should sleep or insensibility relax the fingers, the reptile's head might overlap him.

Since early morning, through the increasing heat of the day, the man had lain there, grim and silent as the gray hills around him, save when now and then he raised his hoarse voice in defiant shouts. The snake, on the other hand, struggled and fought unceasingly against the cord which held him, striking impartially at it, at the just removed fingers or at the wooden stake to which the cord was tied, grovelling his body in the sandy earth, writhing and tugging with protruding tongue, and all the while translating in whirr and hiss the blind fear of his captivity.

Sometimes the man turned his head to watch; once or twice when the snake's movements flagged he slightly stirred his fingers in the sand, the ruse each time rewarded by the swift spring and fruitless stroke. But mostly he lay still, all his mind bent on endurance.

The man had been placed there to die. He knew it and the knowledge tinged his thoughts with a strange curiosity. There were three ways in which death might reach him; through the snake, through sunstroke or by the weary route of thirst and hunger. The second and quickest of these ways the light mountain air, vibrantly hot though it might be, rendered improbable. For the snake, it was part of the man's torment that at any minute he might stretch forth his hand and by the movement invite an end, brief indeed but horrible to the mind, doubly horrible to the strained imagination.

There was one other chance. An unexpected rain-storm, a heavy night dew in that barren place, would so stretch the slender buckskin thong which held the rattler that unaided he might reach and strike his victim. This was the element of uncertainty in the grim problem. This it was that sent the man's eyes searching the bare horizon with a look half dread, half longing.

On one of these weary journeys of sight a tiny speck of black above the western hills attracted him—a steady pin-point in the dazzling blue. He shut his eyes a moment in order to look again the more intently, and when he opened them, lo! the dark points were two. He watched them uncomprehendingly, as slowly and steadily high in air they moved from west to east. When at last in mid-heaven the sun's sheer strength beat down his gaze, he was the lonelier for loss of this one sign of movement.

The sense of heat had by now grown into anguish. The man's exposed body drew and quivered beneath the sun's rays as though each inch of it were endowed with a separate life. Unseen insects brushed and fluttered upon it, leaving beneath their light pressure a trail like fire on the blistered surface. The snake lay prone, exhausted almost beyond striking. The man, noting it, smiled grimly and scraped his fingers noisily in the loose earth. As the snake whirled to front the challenge, he curled his hand close with a taunt for its futile effort.

He was thus engrossed when suddenly across his face swept a sense of delicious coolness. He turned his head; close above him almost within reach of his free hand, a great black bird, carrion in every movement, hovered on steady, outspread wings. Its shadow fell across his face; its eyes, beadlike and listening and greedy, looked straight into his own.

For an instant they stared thus, man and bird. Then with a cry the man flung himself against his bonds, struggling and straining at them for escape from this new horror. On his body, dry till now, the sweat poured forth in streams. Blood gushed from his nostrils. With shrieks, with oaths, with stumbling words of prayer, he fought against the fate which held him.

Not once but many times the struggle was repeated. When at last, exhausted, his convulsed body fell back to quiet, the bird was gone. Shudderingly the man raised his eyes. Far up, half lost in blue, but ready, tireless, it hung above him.

"God!" breathed the prisoner. "God!" and turning his blanched cheek to the sand, he fell into a sort of sleep.

All through the waning day he slept, through the approach of night and the swift desert change from heat to cold. When he awoke the first pale amethyst of dawn was in the sky. The snake was sleeping, not as snakes are wont to sleep in freedom, head tucked to tail and sinuous fold lapping on fold, but with his swollen body back-thrown and stiffened against the stake which held him, caught mid-struggle by insensibility.

The man turned his head to face him.

"Hey, rattler!" he called cheerily, and scraped some grains of sand toward the recumbent body.

But when he saw the start and shudder with which the creature woke, the anguish of returning consciousness, suddenly he was sorry for his act. When the snake, writhing round, struck at its cord quivering from head to tail, he would have given an hour of his own rest to have restored the sleep which he had broken.

The sun rose presently. Again the weary panorama of the day unrolled before the eyes of the two victims. The snake was quiet, weakened by his long struggle. The man, strengthened by sleep, restored by the night's cold, held himself strongly in hand.

Sometimes, indeed, the growing heat drew from his lips a broken sigh. Sometimes birds, many now, swooped low around him with hoarse cries and flapping of heavy wings; at such times his whole body grew tense beneath the stress of almost uncontrollable disgust and terror. But he lay still. Not for his reason's sake dared he again give way to the expression of fear. It was a comfort to him in these moments that the snake showed no apprehension of their gruesome neighbors or eyed them only with the avid eyes of hunger. Watching the indifference of the reptile, the man feared less. Fixing his eyes upon it, he could hold hard to sanity and to endurance, though around him perched and hovered the vulture ministers of death.

But as the morning passed a new anxiety should die first? It seemed to weaken with every hour and the man trembled. He spoke to it soothingly at times and had, or believed he had, the power of quieting its paroxysms. In his fevered mind he searched haltingly for some knowledge of its needs. Would it live longer for the taking of life? And if by stretching out his hand he could delay its end, what then of the lengthening of its pain? Before his dimming eyes, the snake loomed, now a refuge, now a menace. A dozen times, he half relaxed his hand only to draw it quickly close again. Once when the snake fell in its spring, seemingly dead, he thrust the fingers wide with a cry of utter deprivation. When it moved again he drew them in, the instinctive love of life still strong upon him.

A buzzard had risen at his cry and perched on the sage-brush at his head. He studied it quietly for a while, its coarse, draggled feathers, its filmed, eyes and cruel beak. When the scrutiny had grown intolerable, he strove to shout to scare it from its place. His voice came dry and breathless, scarcely a whisper, and the bird swayed back and forth unmoved.

He closed his eyes after this and for a long time lay still, only rolling his head from side to side that the vultures might not light upon his body.

At last, when the sun lay low on the horizon, he ceased the movement and again looked about him. Overhead a cloud of birds, scared by the sudden quiet, hung high in air; swarms of ants and lesser insects crawled and fed upon his arms and body; the sage-brush all around rustled with pungent dryness and to the west the sky burndryness and to the west the sky burned hard and bright as burnished copper.

For a long time he waited. Then, with a sobbing breath, he flung round, straining his body against the cords which held him.

The snake too had moved. The thong that bound it was drawn taut and painfully it had thrust its swollen head across its fingers. It lay thus, outstretched, not striking, its glazing eyes on the man's face.

And while they lay so suddenly there came to pass the impossible, the one uncounted chance. From far across the desolate sage-brush desert sounded to them the barking of a dog.

It came nearer and with it the creak and grinding of heavy wheels. The man strove to cry out and, failing, gnawed desperately at his baked lips and tongue. Colonel Barrett, an estimable official upon the Governor's staff, died, and with unseemly haste his would-be successors began to push their claims, even while his body was awaiting burial with military honors.

One candidate, somewhat bolder than the rest, ventured to call upon Governor Head, thinking to ascertain the bent of the Governor's mind upon the important question.

"Governor," he asked, not to speak in a manner too postitve, "do you think you would have any objections if I was to get into Colonel Barrett's place?"

The answer came promptly, "No, I don't think I should have any objections, if the undertaker is willing."

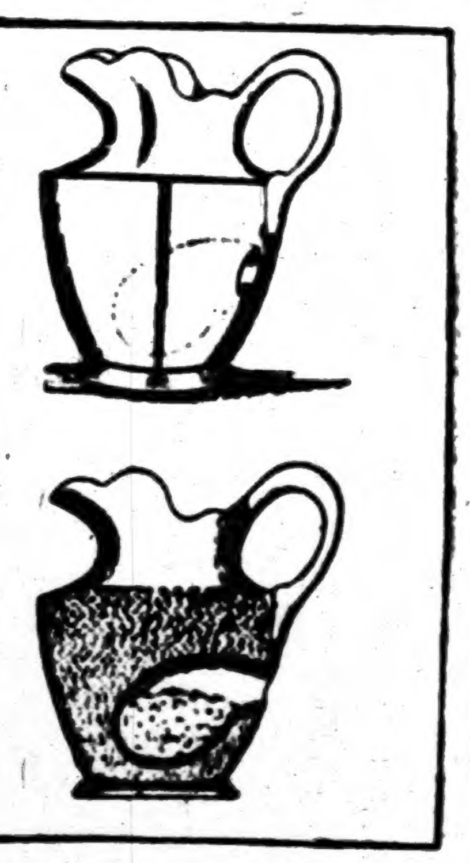
NOVEL PITCHER.

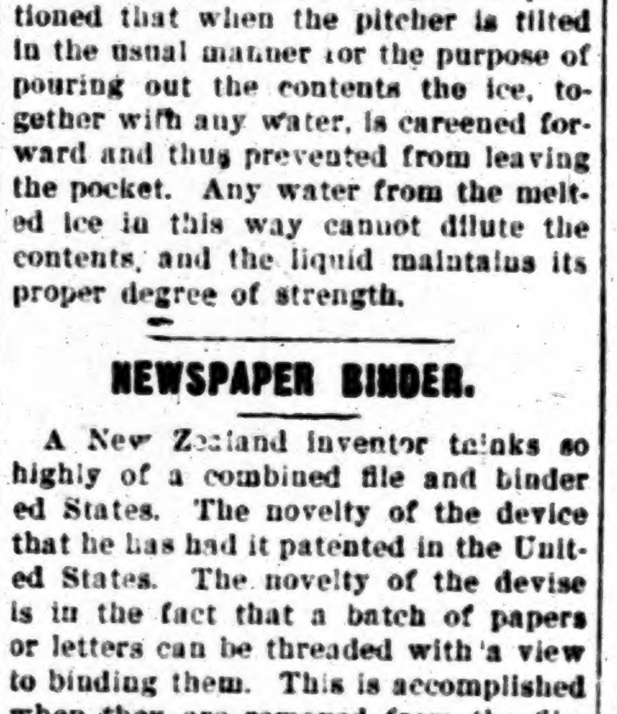
Novelties in inventions are always interesting, but of the many devices patented very few contain as unique an idea as the one shown here, a New York man being responsible for the scheme. Its purpose will be at once apparent and its usefulness and practicability unquestioned. The idea is shown here in connection with a pitcher which has a compartment distinct from that for holding the fluid contents. The purpose of this compartment is to hold ice out of contact with the ordinary contents. The liquid in the pitcher is shown by the shaded portion of the illustration, the pocket in which the ice is placed being slightly below the lower end of the handle. This pocket projects forward and downward and is otherwise so positioned that when the pitcher is tilted in the usual manner for the purpose of pouring out the contents the ice, together with any water, is careened forward and thus prevented from leaving the pocket. Any water from the melted ice in this way cannot dilute the contents, and the liquid maintains its proper degree of strength.



Ice Cannot Dilute Contents.

NEWSPAPER BINDER.

A New Zealand inventor thinks so highly of a combined file and binder ed States. The novelty of the device that he has had it patented in the United States. The novelty of the devise is in the fact that a batch of papers or letters can be threaded with a view to binding them. This is accomplished when they are removed from the file, it being only necessary to tie the string after the papers are removed. Spikes having sharpened ends are fastened upon a frame, the upper ends of the spikes co-operating with the fasteners, which are nominally held in place by the springs. Through the top of each spike is an eye, through which is threaded a piece of cord or twine. When sufficient papers have accumulated they are passed over the end of the spike, which naturally draws the cord with them. The cord is then cut into sections, and the corresponding ends tied. This would make an effective binder, saving much time and labor.



Binds the Papers.

Poisonous Eggs.

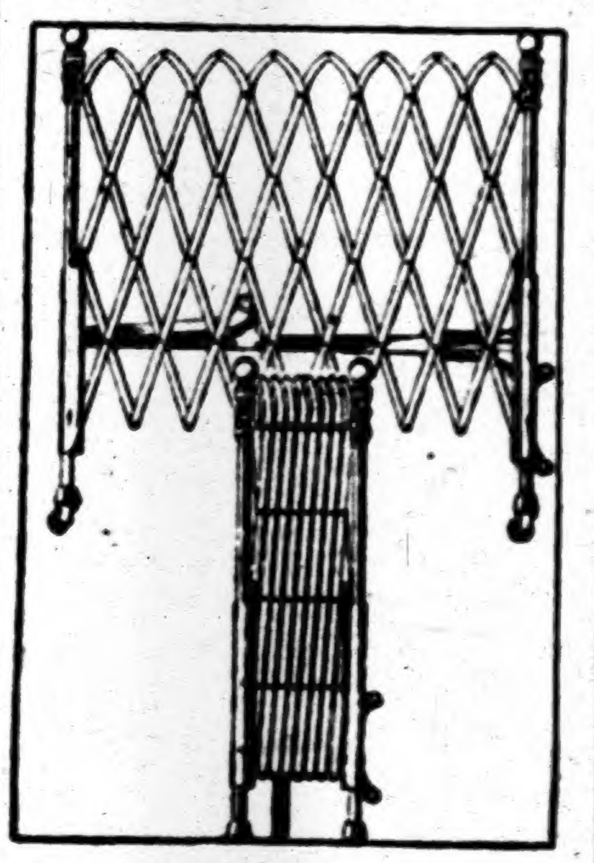
Certain eggs are poisonous, and among them are too kinds which are commonly eaten by human beings, namely, the hen's egg and the duck's egg.

Recent investigations made by a French chemist have demonstrated the fact that the yolk of many eggs contain poison enough to kill small creatures if administered in the form of injections under the skin. The ordinary hen's egg of the breakfast table is capable of causing this result. The duck's egg is still more poisonous, while the turtle's egg takes first place. Even the white of the turtle's egg is poisonous.

Be it noted that the toxic action occurs only when the egg is used for what medical men call subcutaneous injections; there is no need to be alarmed concerning the eating of these natural products, says Home Notes. The process of digestion nullifies any noxious effects which these useful dietary accessories may have when taken into the system in any other way.

FOLDING IRON BED.

The popularity and usefulness of folding beds have long been established. Until recently this novelty was applied to wooden beds only, but the universal demand for iron and brass beds has led a Detroit inventor to devise the folding iron bed shown here. The head and foot posts are connected together by side rails in the usual way, but otherwise the construction is entirely different. The head and foot of the bed are made by lazy tongs, which move toward and away from each other in folding and unfolding the bed. A swinging support for the mattress and spring is employed. The construction of this support is unique, the parts being pivoted in such a manner that they readily close up, occupying but little space when in that position. Attachments are provided for locking and unlocking the bed when it is in either position.



Quickly Folded Up.

Only Survivor of Custer Massacre.

The Custer battlefield is close to the Crow Agency. In a desire to know all that I could, at close range, of the tragedy of the Little Big Horn, I spent many days in going over the battlefield foot by foot, from where the troops left the Rosebud to the ridge where the men had made their last stubborn fight. White marble slabs mark the spots where they fell. In most cases the slabs are in twos, side by side. Strange how it is when it comes to the final end, we reach out for human companionship. There they made their last earthly stand, bunkie by bunkie.

Among the dozens of Indians I questioned of the fight was Curly, who is so often called the sole survivor of the Custer fight. He has been so bullied, badgered, questioned, cross-questioned, leading-questioned, and called, by mouth and in type, a coward and a liar by an endless horde of the curious and knowledge seeking, that I doubt to-day, if his life depended upon it, he could tell whether he was ever at or near the Custer fight.—From "The Tribes of the Northwest Plains," by E. S. Curtis, in Scribner's.

and before the dry season begins, fertilizer may be applied and worked into the soil, superphosphate being excellent, as it contains from three to four per cent of nitrogen. A fertilizer containing potash, nitrate of soda and superphosphate will be found suitable on the majority of soils, a mixture of 200 pounds of nitrate of soda, 200 pounds of superphosphate and 150 pounds muriate of potash, per acre, giving good results with many growers.

PROPER CARE OF LATE CHICKS.

Any of the late hatched birds who will not be old enough to begin laying in December or by latest, January 1, should have quarters arranged for them away from the older hens and the laying pullets. An excellent way of doing this is to divide the hen house, if it is large enough, with wire netting and a board or two at the bottom running up two feet. Place the younger flock in one side where they can not be interfered with, but where they may have all the comforts of a home. Supply them with low roosts, water, grit and all that the older hens have with the possible exception of nest boxes.

In this way they are early trained so that they will be ready to settle down in good form when the time for laying comes. If it is more convenient to keep them in coops for a time longer this will do no harm, provided the coops are comfortable and warm enough so that they will not get cold should the weather change. An excellent idea is to add, with hinges, a board to the front of the coop which will cover the opening about three-quarters the way close—close this at night, and the chicks will not suffer even thought the weather turn quite cold.—Indianapolis News.

THE VALUE OF POULTRY MANURE.

The general average chemical composition of poultry manure compared with other manures is as follows:

	Nitrogen.	Potash.	Phosphoric Acid.
From Hens ..	1.63	0.85	1.54
From Cows ..	0.34	0.49	0.16
From Horses	0.58	0.53	0.28
From Sheep .	0.83	0.67	0.23
From Hogs .	4.45	6.60	0.19
Mixed	0.50	0.63	0.26

It can readily be seen from this statement that hen manure has a real value as a fertilizer—ranking quite high above all the other manures—and because of this fact it should receive the best of care, and be used to the greatest possible extent, for when such is not the case it is equivalent to throwing money away. Hen manure loses its nitrogen very rapidly, as well as easily, unless proper precautions are taken to prevent it. This may be accomplished by scattering a liberal amount of straw, or some other good absorbent under the roosts. When this is removed from the house, for the sake of cleanliness, stack or pile it up, so that the least amount of surface is exposed to the atmosphere.

ADVANTAGE OF THINNING APPLES.

At a meeting of the Michigan Horticultural Society, Theo. Wade told of his experience in thinning apples during the last season. Their orchard of sixteen acres was set in 1880, and during the past season gave them a net profit of $125 per acre. He said that as the season advanced and the limbs began to bend with their loads, it looked like a herculean task to undertake to thin such a mass of fruit. They succeeded in thinning four rows about half way up the tree, at an expence of $70, and when the time for picking came the results were surprising. The fruit on the thinned portion was nearly all first-class, while on the unthinned portion of the trees and the remainder of the orchard, there were quantities of culls, not wormy, but imperfect, undersized fruit. He estimated that $70 expended in thinning brought him in $1,000 in cash, and that the neglect to thin the remainder of the orchard must have lost to him a great deal more than that amount.

FOR THE GRASSHOPPERS.

A speaker at one of the Kansas meetings said that grasshoppers had been very destructive in his section for several seasons, and various means for killing them had been tried, but with small results until the following preparation was experimented with and proved a great success:

Wheat bran	100 pounds
Sugar	8 pounds
Saltpeter	1 pound
Paris green	6 pounds

Wet with water, so that the bran is crumbly, but not too wet, and scatter where the "hoppers" are the thickest. About the third day after the application is made a very large number of the insects will have been killed. The pests will eat of the poisoned bran so long as there are any of them left. Of course, all kinds of stock must be kept out of reach where the poison is applied.

PLAINT OF THE LITTLE MOTHER.

Lived Her Gospel and Was Not a Preacher by Word.

The world is so prone to judge from appearances. We so seldom look under the surface of things. We have so little time we form our opinions by what catches our eye and pass judgment on that basis. If we see a man or woman going to church, if we hear prayers uttered in loud tones, if one cries out from the housetops his good deeds we give him all credit and say to ourselves:

"So-and-So is a good Christian; he sets us an example which it would be well for us to follow."

And we humbly cry "Mea Culpa" and resolve to mend our ways.

A little story told by Dr. Dawson a famous London Evangelist, rather puts to shame Pharisaic criticisms, and in its beauty and simplicity teaches a lesson which it would be well to take to heart, says the New York Herald.

"In the course of my ministrations," said the Doctor, "through the slums of London I came upon a sad case, that of a woman, the mother of five children, the eldest of whom was a girl of nine or ten.

"The mother at the time the family first came under my notice was dying of consumption. The father, a hard working man, was barely able to earn sufficient to supply the meagre wants of the family, and they were often in dire straits.

"The bulk of the work devolved on the oldest girl, Mary by name. Never have I seen the title of 'Little Mother' more appropriately earned. She not only had the invalid to care for, but the younger children as well, and Mary was often a very tired little girl.

"Mary's duties were soon lightened to a certain extent by her mother's death, but made heavier in another by the added responsibility of the little family. The burden of the children and the house was very heavy after the mother had gone. While she lived Mary had always felt there was some one to direct and guide her, but now she was forced to rely upon herself entirely.

"Mary's health none too strong at any time soon began to fail under the great responsibility which had fallen on her shoulders. The care of the children, the cooking, the washing and ironing, the sweeping and bedmaking were too much for the little woman's strength. Day by day she failed, fewer and fewer became the outings which the lusty baby enjoyed. The little fellow soon became too heavy for the thin, weak arms of the 'little mother,' and it was but seldom she could muster courage and energy enough to carry him down the steep stairs and out into the unprepossessing streets, which were his only breathing-ground.

"The day came when even the slightest exertion was impossible for poor Mary and she was forced to depend upon the kind services of neighbors as poor as she was herself. Mary failed rapidly. She was soon confined to her bed, and then I procured the services of one of my 'helpers,' who took up Mary's work where the 'little mother,' in sheer helplessness, had laid it down.

"On one of my daily visits, as I stood in the doorway, unannounced, I heard the murmur of childish voices. A little friend of Mary's was sitting with her and had been laboriously spelling out some verses of the Bible.

"'Oh, Maggie!' I heard Mary say, 'What ever will I say to Jesus when I meet Him and He asks me why I did not go to church and why I did not pray? You know I was so tired, Maggie, so tired, I just couldn't.'

"'Never you mind, Mary,' the other child replied. 'When you see Jesus just show him your hands, Mary, and He will understand.'"

Best Weight Guessers.

Butchers are the world's bestweight guessers. The butcher's difficult trade gives him a skill in weight-guessing that is almost incredible.

It is a commonplace thing in a meat shop to see a butcher seize hold of a huge red round of beef and slash off with a great knife four pounds just, of two and a half pounds just, or six pounds just, according to the order.

The buyer of meat wants to get the weight he asked for, no more and no less, and he wants this weight in one piece, not in one big piece and two or three little ones.

To satisfy the buyer the butcher has been compelled to acquire extraordinary skill in judging just how much a certain portion of a round of meat weighs, and in cutting off that portion smoothly and accurately.—Minneapolis Journal.

To Hunt for an Iron Cross.

Members of the Chicago Historical Society will join in an expedition next Sunday to Twenty-second and Halsted streets in a hunt for an iron cross. This was put on a church built in 1746 at that point by Father Marquette.

When the building was torn down, it has been learned, that the cross was abandoned in a neighboring forest. It is said that it is still in the vicinity, possibly in the river or on one of its banks.—Chicago Daily News.

THE NEW STATE OF OKLAHOMA.

Spirit of the People and Stories of Their Life and Work.

Oklahoma amazes an easterner. The wide asphalted streets, the plate glass fronts of department stores, the clean sidewalks, the well-dressed, unhurried shoppers, the finish, the metropolitan air you find in Oklahoma City, for example, seem marvels to find in a territory only seventeen years old. But do not say so.

A New Yorker who went there on business complained that fate was thrusting him into a wilderness, and reassure him. But coming down his Oklahoma associates could not to breakfast the first morning, at his hotel in Oklahoma City, he stared around in wonder as he entered the dining room.

"This," he exclaimed, "this in Oklahoma. Why, do you know," he added confidentially, "I even found a porselain bathtub in my room."

"Well," said an Oklahoman, dryly, "don't they have those in New York?"

It is better not to be surprised—better to say that the department stores seem to do a large business, or that the trolley ride to the suburbs is pleasant, indeed any comment that satisfies your interlocutor that you expected to find him living in a modern city, even though he dashed into Oklahoma country but a few years ago and scrambled for a homestead. Improvements have marched with swiftness in Oklahoma and in Indian Territory. It is bigger than all the New England states together, as big as Illinois and Ohio combined, and its red lands teem with all the crops that any state raises from the Canadian border to the beginning of the sun-tropics in Florida and Texas. There are no drones. Everybody is busy. New land is being broken. New buildings are going up. New trolley lines are starting. New waterworks are being put in. How can the work be done so fast? In the one town I spent a half hour in the Commercial club. In that busy time half the leading business men came in to discuss some enterprise or other in which all were interested.

"If a man comes here to enter business," said the secretary, "and doesn't put his shoulder to the wheel and co-operate to push the town's fortunes, he soon learns that the community does not want him. Oklahoma makes rapid progress because its citizens pull together," and he turned to speak with a storekeeper who had offered a prize to the Oklahoma farmer who could raise the best cotton; he said that it helped his business to have the farmers raise good crops.—World's Work.

Airship Possibilities.

The following conversation, according to Health, took place between two airship owners:

"Have any trouble in reaching Mars?"

"None worth mentionng. I was fined four or five times for scorching on the Milky Way, and once for looping the loop on one of Saturn's rings, but that was all."

A supreme test of friendship is a loan.

FOUR YEARS OF AGONY.

Whole Foot Nothing But Proud Flesh—Had to Use Crutches—"Cuticura Remedies Best on Earth."

"In the year 1896 the side of my right foot was cut off from the little toe down to the heel, and the physician who had charge of me was trying to sew up the side of my foot, but with no success. At last my whole foot and way up above my calf was nothing but proud flesh. I suffered untold agonies for four years, and tried different physicians and all kinds of ointments. I could walk only with crutches. In two weeks afterwards I saw a change in my limb. Then I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment often during the day, and kept it up for seven months, when my limb was healed up just the same as if I never had trouble. It is eight months now since I stopped using Cuticura Remedies, the best on God's earth. I am working at the present day, after five years of suffering. The cost of Cuticura Ointment and Soap was only $6, but the doctors' bills were more like $600. John M. Lloyd, 718 S. Arch Ave., Alliance, Ohio, June 27, 1905."

SALARIES OF JUSTICES.

Compensation of Supreme Court Members Held to Be Too Small.

A bill is now pending in the senate of the United States, which, if enacted, will increase the salary of the president from $50,000 to $75,000; will increase the salary of the vice-president to $15,000; that of the speaker of the house to $12,000; of members of the cabinet to $15,000, and of members of congress to $7500.

The salary of the chief justice of the United States is $13,500 a year, and that of the associate justices $13,000. According to the importance and dignity of their office, the justice of the supreme court of the United States are more poorly paid than any other officials in the public employment. Upon the men who constitute this court rests a more weighty responsibility than upon any other public servants.

While salaries are being increased it would be well for congress to consider whether the judges of the supreme court are properly paid. In England and in other countries of Europe judicial officers of inferior dignity to our supreme court receive far greater salaries. The lord high chancellor of England gets $50,000 a year, the chief justice gets $40,000, and other judges about $25,000. If the salaries of the justices of the supreme court of the United States should be increased to $25,000 a year, would not such an increase meet with public approval?—Baltimore Sun.

Prominent Minnesota Merchant Cured to Stay Cured.

O. C. Hayden, of O. C. Hayden & Co., dry goods merchants, of Albert Lea, Minn., says: "I was so lame that I could hardly walk. There was an unaccountable weakness of the back, and constant pain and aching. I could find no rest and was very uncomfortable at night. As my health was good in every other way I could not understand this trouble. It was just as if all the strength had gone from my back. After suffering for some time I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. The remedy acted at once upon the kidneys, and when normal action was restored the trouble with my back disappeared. I have not had any return of it."

A Good Location.

It was at a dinner party at a fashionable residence in Tacoma.

The bright young man found himself privileged to sit next to the young woman with beautiful arms and neck.

He thought himself the most favored personage in the room. Suddenly his fair companion exhibited signs of nervousness.

Two of his very best jokes, saved for a special occasion, pased by unnoticed. Her face wore a look of alarm. Apprehensively the young man gazed at her, and meeting the look she said:

"I am in misery."

"In misery?" echoed the man.

"Yes," she replied. "I was vaccinated the other day, and it has taken beautifully. I could almost scream, it hurts so."

The young man looked at the beautiful arms, and, seeing no mark there, said:

"Why, where were you vaccinated?"

"In Portland," she said, the smile chasing away the look of pain.—Tacoma News.

AN UNUSUAL OPPORTUNITY.

Florence Drug Co. Will Pay Back Your Money if Pepsikola Fails to Cure Your Indigestion.

"Never in the history of this store," remarked one of the above druggists to an interested customer, "has there been so great a demand for a new remedy as there is just now for Pepsikola Tablets. Clanton people are coming in every day inquiring if it really is true that we sell Pepsikola with the understanding that it will cure dyspepsia or pay back the money. "Not one person in fifty has asked for their money, and it may surprise you to know that at least a dozen within the last ten days have been in to tell us how much they have been relieved and how glad they are to know at last there is a remedy that really will cure indigestion and dyspepsia." Pepsikola braces up and tones every nerve and fibre, helps digest the food, puts new life into the digestion, improves the appetite, cures coated tongue, dizzy spells and sour stomach.

Try it for ten days, and if you don't see a big improvement step in and tell Florence Drug co., and they will hand back your quarter cheerfully and without argument.

More than half of mankind over sixty years of age suffer from kidney and bladder disorders, usually enlargement of prostrate glands. Mr. Fodney Burnett, Rockport, Mo., writes: "I suffered with enlarged prostrate gland and kidney trouble for years and after taking two bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure I feel better than I have for twenty years, although I am now 91 years old." MAKE MONEY.

Here is an interesting study: Make out a list of all the people you know, and estimate the amount of money each one earns in a year. Total it up. The amount will be surprisingly large. Now, of all those people, only the few who SAVE SOMETHING really MAKE anything at all. Simply earning money isn't making it; what slips through the earner's fingers is finally "made" by somebody else. Don't forget to count yourself in on the list, and if you are not "making" money, begin now to save with us. One dollar will open your bank account.

Kinchon.

Editor Banner— Please allow me a small space for a few words in the dear old Banner. Of course, I wish to write about politics, as that is the all absorbing question of the day. The people of this county have an opportunity to send a man to the Legisture who is competent to attend to any business that may come before that body which will affect this county in any way. Then, again, they have a man who wants to be sent to the Legislature who cannot do anything but draw his salary. Which will they send? Send the one who can do something when he gets there.

Mr. Gulledge is the man to send. He has made a success at almost everything he has undertaken. Of course, Mr. Middleton tells us that he is a graduate of some big university, and he has studied the history of the two old parties and has found the Repulican party the best. How did he find this out? It seems that he but recently learned this sure. Is he so much wiser than all the great men that have stood up for democracy so long, to be sure? If he is, he will not do to send to the Legislature for he would get up a bill that no one else could understand.

We fail to see where Mr. Middleton's sincerity is when he claims to be such a good Republican. Just a short time ago he was making the proud boast that he was a Democrat, and to prove that he was he said he was born of a Democratic family, and it being born and bred in him he was sure that he was a Democrat.

So, let every one of us go out on August 27, and vote for Mr. Gulledge, and send a man to represent us that knows how to do it, and has the grit to do it.

Success to the Banner. Three cheers for Gulledge.

A W. POWELL.

KILLED AT CALERA.

Tuesday night, about 11 o'clock, the marshal and a policeman went to arrest a negro who was stealing a ride on a freight train, and as Policeman Sam Fulton put his head in the car, the negro fired a pistol point blank at him, the ball penetrating just below the eye. Fulton fell back a corpse and the negro succeeded in making his escape.

Wednesday morning at Clanton a negro was arrested on suspicion and word sent to Calera for some one to come and identify him.

A FRIEND.

WILLIAM KISER COLLEY

William Kiser Colley, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Colley, of Verbena, was born February 21, 1891 and died July 10, 1906 He had not been strong for some time, and a serious illness in the fall of 1905 left him almost a complete invalid. Disease had sapped his strength and destroyed the strong body of youth but could cast no blight on the vigorous young spirit that developed fully the Christian graces of brave patience and cheerful resignation.

He joined the Methodist church about four years ago and exemplified his realization of religeous duty by faithful attendance at church, and earnest work in the Sunday school; insisting every night that family prayer be held in his home; by loving obedeince to his parents, kindness to his brothers and sisters and by the display of Christian fortitude and courage during the long months of pain and weakness.

Although he had suffered so long and the physicians could give no hope of his ever being better, the end came suddenly. The afternoon before his death he seemed stronger than usual, he walked about the house and yard and in the sunset light, sat on the porch, whistling softly "Nearer my God to Thee."

The midnight shadows darkening into the night, brought also the gloom of death.

The sorrow of desperate illness "endured for the night," but morning brought surcease to the racked body and joy to the redeemed spirit safe forever in its "Father's House."

TEXAS DEMOCRATS.

All Leaders Are Working for Big Following.

Houston, Tex.—In a majority of the counties of this state conventions were held Saturday to elect delegates to the democratic state convention, to be held at Dallas beginning August14, and while the conventions were generally harmonious, from a number of counties contests will be filed on various grounds, all, however, having the contest for the gubernatorial nomination as the real basis.

While the popular vote primaries were held several weeks ago to select party nominees for state and congressional offices, none of the gubernatorial candidates received a majority, hence the selection of the nominee will be left to the state convention.

Because of the various interpretations which have been advanced as to the meaning of the state election law the selection of delegates by the county conventions is a most important factor in the final result, each of the candidates endeavoring to secure as many personal followers as possible, even where they are instructed to vote for some other candidate, so long as that candidate is before the convention, the law providing that the low man be dropped on each ballot.

It is now contended that the law does not prohibit the re-entrance of a "dropped candidate" on a subsequent ballot, and this plan will be tried, hence the anxiety of all candidates to secure a large personal following in the convention.

125,000 Acres Are Leased.

Scranton, Pa.—It was reported on the best of authority that one of the largest deals in the history of the bituminous coal business was consummated last week, whereby a corporation, known as the Pennsylvania Beech Creek and Eastern Coal Company, with a capital of $8,000,000, acquires by a 999-year lease all the property and business of the Pennsylvania Coal and Coke Company, North River Coal and Wharf Company and a number of electric light and water companies controlled by the old corporation.

The importance of this transaction will be readily appreciated from the fact that the new company will control approximately 125,000 acres of coal lands, containing over 900,000,000 tons of coal, with forty-four coal mines and over 1,000 coke ovens now in operation. The company owns 3,000 private railroad cars, extensive docks at Port Liberty, N. J., and will control the business already established in distributing coal throughout Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey and New England.

The properties acquired are located at at the eastern end of the bituminous coal fields and have a shorter haul to the tidewater and New England markets than any other large body of coal lands.

Plunges From Window.

Cincinnati, O.— Thomas Delehanty, of Nashville, Tenn., while being taken home by an attendant from the Manhattan State Hospital for the Insane leaped from a car window of a southbound passenger train on the Louisville and Nashvile road and fell headlong twenty-five feet from the trestle to a roof. As soon as his attendant could stop the train he hurried back and secured the assistance of Officer Riley, went to the roof and almost lost his life in an attempt to get Delehanty, who with his almost inhuman strength came near throwing the attendant from the house. The insane man was bound hand and foot, and with the aid of a derrick was hauled up to the track, where he was placed in a patrol wagon and taken to the hospital. His injuries were found to be slight.

Paris Green in Coat.

Mobile, Ala.—William Woods, of St. Louis, who killed his wife here Tuesday afternoon, and has been, in the police jail since Wednesday morning, charged with her murder, committed suicide shortly after noon Saturday by taking a heavy dose of paris green, a quantity of which he had sewed up in the lapel of his coat.

Senator Cullom Wins.

Chicago, Ill.—The republican voters of Illinois made it known at the primaries that they wished Senator Shelby M. Cullom returned to the United States senate. After one of the most spectacular political campaigns ever seen Senator Cullom won Cook county by a plurality of more than 17,000, while down-state, what meagre returns are in, indicate that he has secured districts enough to insure him victory over his principal opponent, Gov. Richard Yates. Senator Cullom's plurality in the state is estimated at from 35,000 to 50,000.

FATAL COLLISION

Electric Cars Collide. Two are dead, Others Will Die.

ONE CAR IS TELESCOPED.

Both Cars Were Crowded and Met on Curves While Running at High Speed.

Vermillion, O.—In a head-on collision between two passenger cars on the Lake Shore electric road two people were killed outright, several fatally injured, while probably two score more were injured, several seriously.

The total casualties in the Lake Shore electric wreck are placed at two dead, one dying, six probably fatally hurt and forty-four seriously hurt. St. Joesph's Hospital at Lorani is jammed with injured, eighteen persons having been removed there on the first car moved from the scene of the wreck.

James Yerrick died on the way from the scene of the wreck to the hospital in Lorain, making the list of dead so far three.

The westbound Lake Shore electric limited crashed into the regular No. 12, eastbound, three miles west of here, and the limited was telescoped more than half way through its length by the westbound car.

Both cars were running at a high rate of speed and met at a curve. About eighty persons comprised the passenger list of the two cars. The collision is said to have been caused by a misunderstanding of orders. The injured were removed to a hospital in Lorain.

The dead: W. D. Moody, Beach Park, O., motorman on limited; Frederick Smiley, Lima, O.

Injured: James Yerrick, Great Western Oil Company, Milan, O., fatally, concussion of the brain.

Witnesses of the accident and people who rushed to the scene attracted by the cries of the victims say that it is a miracle that at least fifty were not killed. Both cars were crowded. The westbound limited, in addition to its regular patronage, carried forty Lima Y. M. C. A. boys, who had just finished a two weeks' camp at Linwood Park. The car was crowded to the rails.

Many of the passengers were riding in the front vestibule with the motorman, Moody, and M. Caldwell, of Lakewood, the conductor, who were in charge. The eastbound car, the regular car, was also heavily laden. The passengers had no warning of what was coming. The car passed a siding under full speed. They did not know that they were to pass a car there. At the curve, 600 feet away, those riding in the front end saw the other turning, coming towards them at full speed. An instant later the crash took place.

Palace Hotel.

San Francisco, Cal.—It is definitely decided that the new Palace Hotel will cost $3,000,000, with $600,000 allowed for furniture.

The New York architects who are preparing preliminary plans have been instructed to make certain alterations which will increase the cost $200,000 over the original estimate. There are to be 700 rooms. The additional expense will be for women and men's grills and the court. In nearly every respect the famous old court will be duplicated.

Spanish Minister Attacked.

Lisbon.—An attempt was made to assault Senor Jene Franco, president of the council of ministers, as he was leaving a political gathering. Senor Franco had addressed the newly inaugurated club of electors, after which the crowd of manifestants in the streets stoned the members of the club, and as Senor Franco entered his carriage a manifestant attempted to attack the minister, but friends compelled his assailant to seek safety in flight.

Shot to Death.

Chicago, Ill.—John Rose, a painter, was sitting with his wife on the doorstep of their home, 124 Sangamon street, when he was shot and fatally wounded by George W. Heller. Rose died a few minutes later.

Heller, who is an iron worker, was walking up and down the street with a woman. Both had been drinking. At length they crossed to Rose's side of the street and started a quarrel with the latter. Rose ordered them away, and Heller replied with a bullet, which struck the man in the left side.

As the shot was fired the woman accompanying Heller ran and escaped. Heller was arrested.

Dock Laborers on Strike.

Superior, Wis.—The police have been requested to go to Itasca and the East End to control the striking dock laborers. Every coal dock in Superior is claimed by the strikers to be tied up tight. The strike has spread to the East End and to Itasca. Should these docks be affected at least 800 men will be idle and the handling of coal will be greatly retarded at the head of the lakes.

Decision Rendered Against Ice Men.

Toledo, O.—Judge Babcock, in the common pleas court handed down his decision in the cases sustaining Judge Kinkaid in every particular and exonerating him of having made any promise or suggestion of leniency, as claimed by the attorneys for the ice trust. The judge declared the contentions of the attorneys for the trust to be ridiculous and should never have been brought into court.

Were it not for the fact that the ice men's attorneys succeeded in getting into the circuit court on errors the defendants would have to go to the workhouse. Technically the cases are yet proceeding in the upper court, although Judge Babcock's decision removed the case entirely from the circuit court. That court, however, is adjourned until the middle of September and sentences are suspended until the court meets and decides it has nothing further to do with the cases. Should the attorneys for the ice men appeal from Judge Babcock to the circuit court, which they are likely to do, that court will likely send the cases back for rehearing in the common pleas court, or by declaring there is no error cut off the last hope of the ice men to escape imprisonment.

Wants Apologies.

New York.—A special to the Tribune from Portland, Me., says:

The British consul in Boston has ordered an investigation of the alleged ill treatment of Lord Sholto Douglas during the period of his recent detention by the Portland police.

The inquiry relates chiefly to the use of manacles on the second night of his detention, after he had furnished the police with what seemed to the British vice consul to be ample proof of his identity. The manacles, worn all night, left painful bruises.

Lord Douglas says he wants to avoid further notoriety and will be satisfied with verbal apologies from the sheriff and police. The consular authorities await the apologies and the matter may become the subject of international inquiry.

Lord Douglas was mistaken by the police for an alleged bigamist wanted in the south.

Twelve Years' Imprisonment.

Patreson, N. J.—William H. Belcher, who while mayor of this city absconded a year ago and who surrendered himself on Monday last, was sentenced to twelve years imprisonment in the state prison at Trenton on a charge of embezzlement.

Belcher disappeared from this city about a year ago while he was mayor. He was alleged to have embezzled from $100,000 to $150,000 from personal friends and from the Manchester Building and Loan Association, which was forced to suspend business. No trace of the missing man was discovered by the authorities until he appeared at the county jail Monday night and voluntarily surrendered. He had only $17 in his possession and declared he had suffered great hardship during his absence.

May Enter Upon Holy War.

London.—A dispatch to the Pall Mall Gazette from Tangier says:

Highly sensational reports are being received here, causing the utmost excitement. Daily, almost hourly, comes information from the interior of the rapid spread of a violent anti-French agitation. The rebels are concentrating their military contingents around Marakesh (Morocco City), the southern capital, and there is no doubt that a formidable coalition of anti-independent vassals has been formed.

They are clamoring for a holy war and urging the viceroy, Prince Abdul-Hafod, to proclaim himself sultan. The situation is more critical than it has been for many years.

Colonel Bullitt Dead.

Louisville, Ky.—Col. Cuthbert Bullitt, one of the most widely known Kentuckians, died at the age of 97. He was appointed collector of customs at New Orleans by President Lincoln and served in that capacity for several years, afterwards holding other federal appointments. He was known as a great beau and was extremely particular regarding his personal appearance up to his last illness.

Hart Will Not Resign.

London.—Answering a question in the house of commons Foreign Secretary Grey said the government had no reason to believe that the report of the intended resignation of Sir Robert Hart, inspector-general of the Chinese imperial customs, was correct. The secretary has been informed by Charge D'Affaires Carnegie at Pekin of the new instructions given to the inspector-general of customs and they did not appear to be contrary to the assurance given by China that the actual administration of the customs will continue as before. The secretary was inquiring, however, as to whether this had been made quite clear.

To Meet in Germany.

London.—It was officially announced that King Edward and Emperor William will meet at Friedrichson Castle, near Hamburg, Germany, August 15.

Dodge Transferred.

Berlin.—It is understood that H. Percival Dodge, secretary of the American embassy here, has been transferred to the post of first secretary of the American embassy at Tokio.

THE RUSSIAN MOB

One Officer Thrown Into a Lake With Stone Tied About Neck.

BOMB THROWERS KEEP BUSY.

A Poor Demented Woman Bayonetted Without Mercy—Servants Turned Masters Over to Mutineers.

Warsaw.—A telegram from Libau says that train robbers between Libau and Haffpot stole $40,000 of government money.

Warsaw.—A plan to liberate the political prisoners here was betrayed to the authorities. Several civil servants and policemen who were implicated have been arrested.

Moscow.—A bomb was exploded in the Lazan railway station. Two persons were killed.

St. Petersburg.—The Novoe Vremya, the only unofficial paper to appear, declares "the nation seems determined to commit harikari," and reviews the brutality of the mutineers at Cronstadt in their attacks on the officers as showing what the country may expect if the mob gets the upper hand. The paper says the mutineers tied a rope with a stone at one end around the neck of one of the officers and threw him into a lake, where he was drowned, beat in the face of another officer with the butt of a rifle and broke the legs of a poor mad woman after bayonetting her.

It turns out that the servants of Colonel Alexandroff and Captain Vrichinsky delivered them up to the mutineers, and these servants were among the murderers who were tried by drumhead court-martial and shot. When they were offered the services of a priest six men sentenced to death refused to accept the sacrament and only expressed repentance.

After such evidence of the mob's spirit the Novoe Vremya appeals to all who desire to prevent a repetition of the horrors and terrors of the revolution in France to discontinue their attitude of interference and rally to the side of law and order.

Call for Uprising.

Warsaw.—The Jewish socialists in a proclamation urge the Jews to be ready to fight, and should the signal be given they are requested to appear in the street armed. The appeal has given rise to a serious panic, and fears are also expressed that a railroad strike may also break out here. Stringent measure have been adopted for the preservation of order.

The Polish socialists have issued a proclamation admitting their responsibility for the recent train robberies and acknowledging that they murdered twenty policemen during the course of the week.

Pennsylvania Leads.

Harrisburg, Pa.—The annual report of James E. Roderick, chief of the state department of mines for 1905, shows that Pennsylvania continues to lead in the mining industry of the country, producing practically all of the anthracite and 30 per cent of the bituminous coal.

The total coal output for Pennsylvania in 1905 represents a value at the mines of about $350,000,000 and at points of distribution of about $650,000,000. The anthracite production was 78,647,020 short tons and bituminous 119,351,514 short tons. The total loss of life in and about the anthracite mines was 664 and in and about the bituminous mines 479.

Herbert Compton Dead.

London.—News was received here of the death of Herbert Eastwick Compton, the novelist, biographer and author on historical and other subjects, who died at sea while on his way to the Island of Madeira. He was born in 1853.

Wealthy Man Convicted.

Portland, Ore.—Willard N. Jones, a member of the Oregon legislature of 1903 and a wealthy contractor and timber dealer, was sentenced by Judge William H. Hunt in the United States circuit court to serve one year's imprisonment in the federal penitentiary on McNeill's Island and to pay a fine of $2,000. Jones was convicted of conspiracy to defraud the government. Thaddeus S. Potter, a well-known Portland lawyer, who was tried and convicted jointly with Jones, was sentenced to serve six months in the Multnomah county jail and to pay a fine of $500.

Berlin.—Emperor William returned here from his cruise in northern waters and drove immediately to the Marble palace, the residence of Crown Prince and Crown Princess Frederick William, to see his grandson, who was born at Potsdam July 4 during the emperor's trip to Troddhjem.

For the suppression of extravagance in women's dress a movement is being organized in Sweden.

ALABAMA STATE EVENT

Items of Interest Gathered as They Tra Over the Entire State.

Gadsden Veterans Will Hold Reunion.

Gadsden, Ala.—The Confederate veterans will hold their annual reunion August 8, 9 and 10. They anticipate a great time. It will be an occasion for a large crowd. Commander R. A. D. Dunlap, of the Emma Sansom camp, has issued the following command: Wednesday, August 8, assembly call 10:30 a. m.; policing grounds, 12 m. to 4 p. m.; devotional exercises. Thursday, August 9, address of welcome, 10 a. m.; response by Col. R. A. D. Dunlap; music and devotional exercises; address, "The Old Reb as He Was and as He Is;" dinner, 2 p. m.; address by Hon. J. G. Harris, of Montgomery. The afternoon will be devoted to music, enrollment of names and other business. Friday morning, August 10, annual election of officers. All who attend are requested to bring well filled baskets.

To Have New Census Taken.

Tuscumbia, Ala.—The city council of Tuscumbia has appointed one of its members, Councilman N. Pride Tompkins, to take the census of this city. The law requires that a census be taken every two years of the children of school age, and while getting the children the enumerator covers the entire field. Two years ago the population of Tuscumbia, according to the census figures, reached approximately 3,600, but the figures were not satisfactory, it being the prevalent opinion that there are fully 5,000 people in Tuscumbia, and that the figures of the present taking will reach that number.

Miners' Convention.

Birmingham, Ala.—The executive board of District No. 20, United Mine Workers of America, met in the offices of the union in the Chalifoux building and decided to call a special convention of the union miners on August 14 in Birmingham.

It is supposed that the meeting was called for the purpose of hearing from President Flynn as to the conference which he had with John Mitchell, president of the United Mine Workers of America, upon his recent visit to Indianapolis. It is believed that the subject of this conference was the strike of the miners which has been in effect in this district for the past two years.

Death From Live Wire.

Birmingham, Ala.—J. H. Wood, aged 30, stableman in shaft No. 1, Pratt Mines, met a sudden death by coming in contact with a live wire of the haulage system in the mines. He had been in the employ of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company for about a year. In some manner he touched the overhead wire in the mine, and the shock killed him almost instantly. He leaves a widow and one child. The remains are being held pending the arrival of the father of the unfortunate man from Georgia, where the family resided. The interment will probably take place Sunday. Despite warnings in regard to the wires of the haulage system, fatalities occur every now and then.

Good Progress Made on Sewer.

Gadsden, Ala.—The contractors who are putting in the new sewerage system are making fast progress, and if no accident happens will have the entire system completed by the middle of October. The immense ditching machine is one of the sights of the city, and its workings are watched by hundreds daily. The machine is working perfectly, except where there are large trees, the roots impeding its progress somewhat. Otherwise the soil is of a light sandy character, free from large rocks. Nine miles are being put in.

Judge Kyle Withdraws.

Car Inspectors Strike.

Montgomery, Ala.—About 300 carpenters and car inspectors in the employ of the Central of Georgia railway are on a strike, but Montgomery, where the Central's trains are handled under contract by the Western of Alabama railway, will only be indirectly affected unless complications occur.

The Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, it seems, had slated 117 men for increase in salaries, but were not willing to accept the company's proposition to raise only those who, in the judgment of its officials, were deserving. It is stated that, acting on this proposition, 62 per cent of those slated were raised.

Decatur, Ala.—The Rev. Mark Phillips, of Orwood, Miss., has been visiting in Decatur for the past few days. He has been transferred to Moorsville, Limestone county, near this city, where he goes to take charge as pastor of the Moorsville Presbyterian church.

THE CUCKOO.

The cuckoo always leads a mournful, secluded life. If we chance to see it at any time while it was with us, from May to October, it will most probably be observed silently slipping from the cover of one tree or thicket to that of another, generally alone, and frequently uttering the harsh guttural note from which it has long since acquired the name "rain crow." I never have understood why it should be called a crow. Certainly it does not resemble the crows in our country either in voice, appearance, or manner of life.

The cuckoo is often heard calling on cloudy days, or just before rains, and for this reason it is usually accredited with the power of foretelling the coming shower. It cannot sing; but it has some notes peculiarly its own, which, once heard, are not easily forgotten. "Tut-tut, tut-tut," it seems to say, "cl-uck-cl-uck, cow, cow."—Progressive Farmer.

MAIL BOXES AS NESTS.

Since free delivery of mail in rural districts has been established I have been pleased to discover two or three pairs of bluebirds nesting undisturbed in mail boxes by the roadside. It is gratifying to know that the birds allowed themselves to be disturbed two or three times a day and yet not abandon their nests. But the thing that gives the bird lover the greatest delight is that fact that no one robbed the nests. I am sure the bluebird will in time learn to appreciate this kindness, and the day is not far distant when it will be a common occurrence to find some kind of bird's nest in every home-made box that holds a letter.—From "Nature and Science," in St. Nicholas.

What is a Lady?

Socially a lady is an illuminating exception to the "Crowd." She has old-fashioned notions that puzzle the majority and delight the few. She has no longings for a career or for suffrage. She detests snobbery, but refuses to know any save the "best people"—for her to know. Those who paint pictures, hew marble, and write books or give to the world the worthy products of their talents are among her "best people." Not that she looks upon great wealth as a bar sinister to social eligibility. What has money to do with ladyhood? Bue she knows the need of money is the root of much evil; therefore among her friends are women whose millions are but golden addenda to their thrice-charming selves—indeed she often is born to the purple or acquires it by marriage. Many are called upon, but few are chosen as a Lady's intimates. To all she is careful to be polite, and so escape the snare of petty broils and spiteful "roastings." Friendships that are born in a night, and die in a fortnight, she rejects. She confides in none. If unconsciously she incites, she never invites, confidence, but when trusted is loyalty's synonyme.—Minna Thomas Antrim, in Lippincott's.

This Motto Was Not Framed.

It happened during the spelling lesson in one of the Biddeford, Maine, primary schools. The teacher told the members of the class to spell the word "motto." Then she told them to write a motto, and this is what she read on one of the slips of paper handed up to her by one of the boys, "God blast our homes."—Boston Globe.

NO MORE OIL MONOPOLY.

POWER OF STANDARD COMPANY BROKEN BY RECENT LEGISLATION.

A Fair Field and an Equal Opportunity Are Now in Sight For the Independents—Decrease in Price of Petroleum Products.

The Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune writes:—"The absolute domination by the Standard Oil Company of the business in petroleum products has been broken," declared Charles D. Chamberlain, head of the National Petroleum Association, speaking of the Lodge amendment to the Railway bill and the administration prosecution of trusts. Mr. Chamberlain came to Washington to testify before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"I do not mean," he hastened to add, "that the time is near when the Standard will cease to control a great share of the business, but a fair field and equal opportunity are now in sight for the independents, and the developments of the near future will be startling."

Mr. Chamberlain maintains that even the vast financial power of the Standard will prove insufficient to stem the tide of capital which will now rush into the independent producing pipe line and refining companies. He predicts a decrease in the price of petroleum products averaging 25 per cent. as a result of the abolition of the Standard's complete monopoly, and thinks that this will make itself felt quickly in territories, like New England, which have been entirely at the mercy of the Standard. It was in that territory, where there was no competition, according to Mr. Chamberlain, that the Standard made its immense profits, a large portion in other regions. The extent to which Senator Lodge has benefited not only New England but the entire country by his able though quietly conducted campaign against the Standard is, in the estimation of Mr. Chamberlain, incalculable. As an instance of the manner in which the recent legislation will affect the Standard Mr. Chamberlain cited the case of a company in Cleveland.

"One company in Cleveland," said he, "started twenty years ago with a capital of $50,000. It has fought the Standard all the way and recently it increased its capital to $5,000,000, and the additional amount was oversubscribed almost as soon as the books were opened. That is the experience everywhere. The oil business will have an enormous development, and the independents will get a share of it from this time forward.

"The independents are getting an immense access of business from two sources. First, because of the cessation of the aggressive and piratical methods of the Standard in fighting competitors. It is withdrawing from many fields the subordinate companies that used to sail under the colors of 'independents' and do the price cutting for the Standard. That sort of thing has become dangerous. There is a disposition to expose and punish conspiracies of that sort. Then, the public is strongly in sympathy with us, and it helps immensely.

"The new railroad law and the powerful movement to enforce the anti-trust laws are doing us immense good. For the first time we are getting an equal chance, as illustrated in the restoring of prorating rates into New England. For many years the roads would not prorate on oil going there; no independent could send oil to New England without paying the sum of the local rates to all roads handling it. The Standard piped its oil to seaboard at Bayonne, N. J., thence shipped it in tank vessels to New Haven and distributed it at local rates throughout New England. Independents were as effectually shut out as if there had been a Chinese wall around the territory. But now the roads have put in joint rates, and we can get in, and we are already doing so. It means a saving of from $50 to $120 on every car of oil.

"The Standard has the advantage yet of its pipe line system, which represents the cheapest method of handling oil known, but making these lines common carriers will help us, although it presents to the Interstate Commerce Commission the most difficult problem it has ever had to solve. Then, the Standard's system of management is expensive. The spy system is perfect, espionage reaches everywhere; every competitor, every railroad, every employe, is watched and reported on. The company's legal expenses are immense; its corruption fund is huge. These expenses largely offset its physical advantages. Finally, the independents will have their own pipe lines and farther equalize matters."

"One thing still needed," Mr. Chamberlain continued, "is a federal anti-discrimination law. I recognize it as an extreme of federalization but we ought to have it. Kansas has such a law, which has saved the state $200,000 a year, and has made it possible to develop ten independent refineries in place of one struggling one. Iowa passed the same law, and Governor Cummins signed it in May. It provides severe penalties for making cut prices for the mere purpose of driving out competition, as the Standard has always done."

WHERE WOMEN ARE BUTCHERS.

Origin of the Custom in Paraguay—How the Animals Are Killed.

Of all occupations, that of a butcher seems one of the least suitable for the fair sex; yet there is at least one country where this trade is entirely monopolized by women and "no men need apply."

That country is Paraguay, where many occupations which among us are invariably assumed by the sterner sex fall to the lot of the women. The cause of this state of things is the heroic war waged by Paraguay more than thirty years ago against the overwhelming forces of Brazil, the Argentine Republic, and Uruguay combined. This war, which lasted five years, bore many singular points of resemblance to the recent Boer war. It ended in the almost total annihilation of the able-bodied male population of the country, and the results may be read in the following figures: Population of Paraguay in 1857, 1,337,439; in 1873 (three years after the termination of the war) it amounted to only 231,079; and of these all were women, children, and very old men. When the war was over the people had been reduced to the most abject poverty, and were on the verge of starvation, being driven to such expedients as to eat cats, dogs, and horses. Worse still, owing to the destruction of the male population, perfect anarchy prevailed, and all the work formerly performed by males fell on the fair sex. They rebuilt the houses which had been burned down, tilled the fields, and wove for themselves rough homespun clothing from cotton grown on their own fields.

To this day the butchers in all parts of Paraguay are women. In the public slaughter-houses the cattle are dispatched by men, who sever the spinal column by cutting it with a sharp cutlass just behind the nape of the neck. When the animal falls to the ground, its throat is cut, and it is allowed to bleed to death. This is the only part of the work done by men. The animal is skinned and otherwise prepared by women. Carcasses are then conveyed to the butchers' stalls, where the meat is cut up and sawed by women, who are dexterous in the use of the saw and knife. It is then served out to customers, also by women—not generally by weight, but by the piece—and the price is so low that a pound of the best meat may be bought for about a penny.

Women of all ages act the part of butchers; some are young and pretty, others old and wrinkled. The women are great bargainers, and keen as mustard to pull a new arrival almost to pieces in the hope of securing his custom. These women butchers earn good wages, and many of those in business on their own account acquire a modest fortune.

In the larger towns the meat is only allowed to be sold in the public market-place, where stalls (owned by the municipality) are let at auction to the highest bidders. The public have every security that the meat is fresh; for all that is left unsold at night is destroyed by the authorities—a needful precaution in a warm climate. The result is that just previous to closing time there is a great reduction in prices and a crowd of bargain-hunters appear on the scene—economical house-wives, keepers of cheap restaurants, and the like—for, rather than see the meat thrown away or destroyed, the keepers of the stalls sell the remnants at almost any price.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Their Own Hymns.

Bishop Heber was among the few men whose hymns passed into the heritage of Christendom during their lifetime. He was Bishop of Calcutta, and, as every one knows, wrote "From Greenland's Icy Mountains." He once heard one of his compositions sung by his native converts in Meerut, more beautifully, he thought, than he ever had in England. And as he listened to the voices of the souls he had awakened, he felt a belief in his power for good which he had never before experienced.

Rev. G. R. Prynne felt some natural pleasure on one occasion when the incumbent of the Protestant Church at Rome gave out his hymn, "Jesus, Meek and Gentle," when he was helping in the service. He discovered afterward that the clergyman was entirely ignorant that he was the author; but even when shorn of complimentary significance, the incident left a sweet and lasting impression.

He had not realized till then that his hymn had made its way in the world outside England. Hearing it so far away from home, he said, seemed to widen his sphere of service.

A curate once ventured to hand a book to the late Bishop Wordsworth of Lincoln at a church opening, while his hymn, "O Day of Rest and Gladness," was being rendered. The bishop's gesture of refusal was fine and courtly.

"Do you suppose, young man, that I want a book for my own hymn?" "Or do you mean to say that you are not aware I wrote it?"

Guinea Fowls Keep Away from Hawks.

A Massachusetts poultryman informed me last winter that he had lost no chicks by hawks and crows since he had kept a small flock of guineas, though losing many before. Their strident voices seem to disconcert the feathered marauders. The guineas are also good watch dogs, and no prying thief or sneaking "varmint" can escape their nocturnal vigilance and shrill alarm. The young make fine eating too, and there is a growing demand for them in the markets. It would pay on many a farm to add a few guineas to the feathered stock.—Farming.

INDIAN FOLKLORE.

Major Bourke Found It a Very Interesting Study.

In Arlington Cemetery lies the body of Major John G. Bourke, who in life was an officer of the fighting Third Cavalry. Major Bourke's last tour of active duty was in Chicago during the railroad strike of 1894. The cavalryman found time aside from his soldier duties to study the folklore of the North American Indians, with whom he fought and was friendly alternately, as the government would have it for years on years of life in the west, says the Chicago Post.

Major Bourke was president at one time, if memory has it rgiht, of the American association which makes folklore study a specialty. He was interested not only in the inherited tribal tales of the Sioux and the Apaches, but he took within his study scope the folklore of all primitive peoples.

Into the side of the great stone monument erected to the memory of Gen. Crook and which stands near Major Bourke's grave in Arlington cemetery is set a bronze panel showing the scene of the surrender of the Apaches under Geronimo to Crook in the Sierra Madres twenty-three years ago. The faces of the Indians and of the army officers shown are portraits. One of the officers in the group is John G. Bourke, and there is a story in connection with the folklore major and the Geronimo campaign which others besides folklore people possibly may appreciate.

There had been a fight at long range with the Apaches in the mountains and Bourke's troop, dismounted, had been engaged. When the fight was over and the Apaches who escaped killing had made for farther mountain fastnesses, as was their custom, the troopers moved forward and found one Indian who had been shot between the eyes, the bullet coming out at the back of his head. It is needless to say, perhaps, that the Apache brave was dead.

General Crook came up and found Major, then Captain, Bourke saying a few warm things to one of the duty sergeants of his troop. Bourke left the sergeant, and Crook, turning to the cavalry captain, said: "Bourke, what on earth has Sergeant Casey been doing this time?"

"Doing, general!" exclaimed Bourke wrathfully. "Doing enough. I tried for five years to make a sharpshooter out of Casey, and at the end of the time, he couldn't hit the barracks if he was inside with the doors and windows shut.

"And yet, general, that fellow Casey here today at a clean 900 yards plugged and killed the only Apache in this whole southwestern country who could have given me the folklore story I've been after for years.

"I tell you, general, that Casey has escaped court-martial only by swearing the shot was a scratch."

The Christmas Tree Threatened.

Stock raising and forestry practically monopolized the attention recently of the Vermont instructors on the better farmers' special train. The tour was through Ryegate, McInroes, Passumsic and St. Johnsbury Centre. In the horticultural car Profs. L. R. Jones and William Stuart, of the Vermont experiment station, and the Hon. Ernest Hitchcock, State Forestry Commisisoners, hold forth, the latter winning particular notice on what may be called the Christmas tree peril. The gospel of more and better forests has many things to contend with in Vermont, but one of the most destructive is the demand every December for Chrismas trees, which when cut off remove a forest of the future more effectually than the woodman who waits till the tree grows up. The New oYrk market is almost entirely supplied from Vermont, and the southern part of the State is described as being well-nigh denuded of its young spruce trees, with the wave of destruction advancing northward each year. It is to head off this movement that the forestry commission is active on the better farming train. Arguing mainly that the farmers are selling Christmas trees too cheaply, the lectures show that a spruce tree good enough for Christmas festivities is worth a quarter to a dollar as it stands in the woods, and that the farmers in selling them for 5 cents apiece are figuratively cutting their own throats. This danger to the forests was placed on a par with the forest fires, which also figured in the forestry argument.—Boston Herald.

His One Request.

The steamer was nearing the completion of a very rough passage, and most of the passengers were silent, sad and thoughtful. Only one gay and sprightly individual looked as though an earthquake hadn't suddenly swallowed up his every friend and all his worldly goods.

"Look here," he said, dancing nimbly about, "I'm all right. If you chaps just brace up and be cheerful, you'll feel all right."

He did a hornpipe and a jig, and one of his fellow passengers raised his head long enough to say:

"George, will you do me a great favor—a very great favor—possibly the last favor I shall ever ask of you?"

"Why, certainly, old man! What can I get for you?"

"Nothing. I simply beg of you to stop dancing. It shakes the ship so much."—London Sphere.

Edward Hughes, the famous portrait painter—Queen Alexandra of England has sat to him three times—had a picture at the Royal Academy when he was 15 years of age.

ELEGY IN A BASEBALL FIELD.

The curfew tolls the knell of parting day,
The bleachers are empty as can be,
The rooter homeward takes his weary way
And leaves the field to darkness and to me.

Now fades the glimmering landscape on the sight
And all the air is hushed, and calm and still—Yet here the rooters yelled with all their might
"O soak it! Kill it! Bust the cover, Bill!"

Around that diamond now dimly seen
The player rushed until his legs were blurred,
And, O, the bleacher's grief was tensely keen
When he was run to earth and died at third.

Let no ambition mock their useful sport,
Nor jeer their captain's sacrificial sign,
Nor grandeur hear, aweary, the report—
The short and simple annals of the nine.

The boast of averages at the bat
And all the bases that the pitcher gave
To shun the long three-bagger now fall flat—
The march of glory sidewinds to the grave.

Full many a home run finds the fielder's hand,
And fills the batsman's heart with dark despair,
Full many a strike is born but to be fanned
And waste its purpose on the severed air.

Next to the madding crowd's applauding strife
The pitcher lifts our hope—and then it falls
While we object: "What's that? Not on your life!
Struck out? Can't you distinguish strikes from balls?"

The curfew tolls the knell of parting day;
The bleachers gape—just as we said before,
And now a strident voice is hurled our way
"Say, mister, did you hear what was the score?"
—W. D. N., in Chicago Tribune.

Women's Chances of Marriage.

The women of the United Kingdom have nearly twice as many chances of being married as the women of any other nation in Europe. This is one of the many remarkable facts shown in the annual statistical abstract for the principal nations of the world, issued by the Board of Trade recently. The period covered by the figures is from 1893 to 1902. In each of those ten years there have been fourteen or sixteen marriages per 1000 of the population in Great Britain, while in other countries the rate has remained steadily at between seven and eight per 1000.—London Tit-Bits.

Democratic Primary Election

Acting under instructions of a mass meeting of the people of Chilton county, held at the Court House, Clanton, Saturday, July 21, 1906, we, the Democratic Executive Committee of Chilton county, hereby order a Primary Election of the white voters of Chilton county to be held at the several voting places in the county, on for the purpose of nominating a Representative in the Legislature, a Sheriff, one Commissioner for the First District of Chilton county, and one Commissioner for the Second District of said county, one Executive Committeeman from each Beat, and six Delegates to the State Democratic Convention, Sept. 10, 1906.

All qualified white voters, irrespective of any and all previous political affiliations, are cordially invited to participate in said primary election.

J. C. DENNIS, Chairman.

Fifteenth Senatorial Primary

A primary election is hereby called for the purpose of nominating a Democratic candidate for Senator from the Fifteenth Senatorial District of Alabama, to be held on the 27th day of August, 1906, under the rules and regulations already adopted for the holding of State and County primaries.

Candidates for said office will be voted for on the county tickets and the candidate receiving a plurality of the votes cast will be declared the nominee.

J. C. DENNIS, Chairman.
L. N. BOWDEN, Secretary.

At a meeting of the Senatorial Democratic Executive Committee of the Fifteenth Senatorial District, held at Clanton on the 21st day of July, 1906, J. C. Dennis of Clanton, Chilton county, was elected chairman and R. E. Bowden of Shelby, was elected secretary.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That a primary election be held on August 27, 1906, for the nomination of a candidate for State Senator from the Fifteenth Senatorial District under the rules and regulations adopted for the holding of State and County primaries on said day; and that names to be voted for be placed on the County ballot in the respective counties.

Resolved; That a plurality of the votes cast shall nominate.

Resolved, That each candidate for said office be assessed fifteen dollars for the expense of said call and election.

Resolved, That the Chairman shall certify to the County Chairman the names of candidates entitled to be voted for at said primary.

The meeting adjourned subject to the call of the Chairman.

J. C. DENNIS, Chairman.
R. E. BOWDEN, Secretary.

246 voters have been added to the registration list of Chilton county by the Board of Registrars whose round ended Wednesday, Aug. 8.

THE men who carry the rural mails are deeply interested in the state of the roads, and one of the chief objects of their association is the improvement of the roads None of our roads are too good, and some, it must be confessed, are very bad. It is a reflection on the County when a route has to be discontinued on account of the bad condition of the road. The patrons are put to great inconvenience and should bestir themselves to see that the roads are kept in the best possible condition. A merciful man is merciful to his beast, but the rural carrier, who travels the same road day after day cannot show any mercy either to his horse or to himself on a bad road.

HENRY B. GRAY, candidate for Lieutenant Governor, in a very unostentatious way, is making a quiet but effective canvass of the State, which will probably land him at the goal of his desires. A thorough man of business, of calm and equable temperament, he pursues his course, unmindful of the clamor around him. He is particularly fortunate in having gained a handsome fortune while yet in the very prime of life, which gives gives him leisure to attend to other matters.

All the sanctity is thrown around a primary election that is accorded to a state election. The state statue is explicit on this point. A man who votes illegally in a primary is amenable to the same punishment as one who votes illegally at a state election. All the managers of the precincts have to take the same oaths, and it is their duty to see that only those vote who are qualified. No man who is not a registered voter has any right to vote and even if he is registered and under poll tax exemption age, he is not entitled to vote if his poll tax is unpaid. It should be the desire of every good citizen to have a perfectly fair and honest primary, and election officers should use their best efforts to see that this is the case—Advertiser

REPUBLICAN-POPULIST PRIMARY.

The primary election of the Republican-Populist combination took place on Monday, when a total of 802 votes was cast as follows:

Middleton	745
Fitts	441
Gentry	118
Goodgame	139
Hayes	104
Conway	600
Pate	237
Waldrup	493

Mr. J. Osmond Middleton is the nominee for Representative; Felix J. Fitts for Sheriff; W. H. Conway for commissioner from the First district, and S. E. Waldrup, commissioner from the Second district.

WHAT a contrast is presented with the primary just passed and that of the Democratic party to be held August 27. All that the Republican-Populists can offer is purely local offices, and no choice whatever for the offices of the State. It strongly emphasizes the indisputable fact that the Democratic party is the great party of the State, and that the best that can be offered by the opposition is a few local offices, which, if they are gained, have no influence outside of their own county.

In the Democratic primary on August 27, all white voters are cordially invited to participate, and every man who chooses may make his desires known, and have the satisfaction of knowing that he has had a voice in the government of his State.

With a primary thrown wide open to the voters, where every shade of opinion can be heard, the man who receives a majority of the votes cast receives the nomination and is practically elected.

As a matter of fact there is, we believe, very little, if any, difference between the gentlemen nominated on Monday and those who will be nominated August 27, all are good men and doubtless will make good officials, the great difference being that those nominated on Monday are of necessity only of local influence, while those to be nominated August 27 are part and parcel of the great Democratic party of the State and country.

HON. PERCY CLARK AT CLANTON.

Hon. Percy Clark, candidate for congress, spoke in Clanton on Saturday last to a good crowd, who enjoyed his jokes, listened to his flights of eloquence with much appreciation.

His tribute to Senator Morgan, whose intellect he likened to the light of the Statue of Liberty, and to General Pettus as a great bell in a grand old tower in deep tones proclaiming the "rights and liberties of the people," was well received. As an original plea for boys not to leave the farm, he recited Hear the jay birds chirping in the apple trees.

Smell the clover blossoms in the passing breeze
While Bob White's good night in sweet refrain
Comes from the field of waving grain:
Down on the farm.

At sunrise, sweet the breath of morning
On dew damp fertile fields o' green
Veiling mists, hills cloud kissed,
All nature blushing at the scene:
Down on the farm.

Hear the woodpecker's drowsy drum,
Hark the bee with busy hum,
While the happy hearted plow boy
Drinks of nature's purest joy:
Down on the farm.

A world of truth in a few words: "Nearly all other cough cures are constipating, especially those containing opiates, Kennedy's Laxative Honey and Tar moves the bowels. Contains no opiates." You can get it at Upchurch Drug co.

COUNTY COURT.

In the county court on Monday a rather unusual case was decided by Judge Reynolds. Mr. and Mrs. Holman Bullard agreed to separate some time ago, and their little girl was left in the custody of the mother. Mr. Bullard, however, got possession of the child, and the wife took out a writ of habeas corpus for its custody The court decided in favor of the mother and she rejoices in its presence

Judge Adams feels proud of the hearty support he is getting from many parts of the State, and his confidence is rising that he will be the next commissioner of Agriculture and Industries.

HON. W. B. CRAIG WELL THOUGHT OF

Having long and intimate personal acquaintance with Hon. William B. Craig, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congressman from the Fourth District, we the members of the Executive Committee of the Democratic and Conservative Party for Dallas county, do most earnestly commend him to their fellow democrats of the District as one eminently qualified to represent this District in Congress.

He is a man of high moral character, and in every relation in life stands for the right. He possesses unusual mental ability, coupled with capacity and taste for hard work. By diligent application, respect for the rights of others and a righteous life, he has made a success and acquired the confidence and esteem of the people. He is, and always been, an active, working democrat and has never failed to answer the calls of his Party.

We think we know a democrat, and William B. Craig is not merely one in name, but in principle, and can be relied upon in every emergency and on every occasion to stand for, avocate, work and vote for, and with the Party and the immortal principles it represents. He is of the people, and will truly and honorably serve their interests.

In behalf of the Democrats of Dallas County, who love him well, we request the democrats of the Fourth District to give him their hearty support in the coming primary.

If nominated, we believe he will make a worthy successor of the distinguished Bowie, and a representative of which the District and State will be proud.

The above resolution was unanimously adopted by the Executive Committee of the Democratic and Conservative Party of Dallas County on the 26th day day of July, 1906.

W. J. ROUNTREE,
Chairman Dem. Ex. Com.
for Dallas county.

We, the Democrats of Chilton county, in mass meeting assembled, hereby endorse the candidacy of Hon. W. B. Craig for Congressman from the Fourth District, and recommend him to the voters of Chilton county.

Letter to Clanton Doctors.

Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sirs: You understand chemistry; how would you like to earn $1000?

Devoe lead and-zinc—that's the name of our paint that takes fewer gallons than mixed paint and wears twice as long as lead-and oil—is made of white lead, white zinc, its color, turpentine dryer, and linseed oil.

If any chemist finds any adulteration in this paint we'll pay his bill and $1,000 besides.

It's nobody's business what we put in our paint, of course; but we want it known. For lead-and-zinc and linseed oil, ground together by machinery, are the stuff to paint with: and lead-and-oil mixed by hand is not,

We want it known that one word describes the best paint in the world; and that word is Devoe.

Are you going to paint?

Yours truly,
F. W. DEVOE & Co.

Health, Beauty and a Clear, Complexion Through Laxakola Tonic Tablets.

"In all the years we have been in business," say Florence Drug co, "we do not recall ever selling anything that has aroused so much interest among our lady customers, and not a day passes but we hear of some one greatly benifitted through using Laxakola Tonic Tablets." Clanton ladies who have been troubled with pimples, blotches, moth spots and other skin affections, now pride themselves on the fresh, healthy complexion obtained through using this mild tonic laxative.

Editor Banner—Please give me a small space in your valuable paper to say, with due respect to all candidates, that there has been circulated a report that F. A. A YOUNG POET.

Story of Two Rejections and an Acceptance.

Translated From the German by Louise Waring.

He gazed at the double letter in his hand, not fully conscious as yet what it meant for him. This was the end of so much joy in creative work, of such boundless hopes! "Regret, not available for us." The letters grinned at him derisively. He hastily slipped the fatal paper into a portfolio, but ever before him flitted those gray, cold words, "not available." All through the air they danced; the walls of his room were dotted with them. He could contain himself no longer within these walls, which had witnessed his inspiration and hopes, and on which were now written in black letters, "Regret, not available."

He rushed out. Life, and all it contained was hateful to him; he hated the whole universe: the plain "bourgeoise" pushing her offspring along in a go-cart; the young men and girls with their tennis racquets—was there ever a sillier game?—the old ladies knitting and munching Kaffeekuchen (coffee cake); old men strolling along, their eager talk interrupted now and then by a little coughing spell; and then those sweethearts with their mien of blissful imbecility. All of them he despised, the whole conceited lot of them. The park was filled with these ridiculous people, who were enjoying the early spring and seemed glad to live, not knowing what it was to have one's work returned with "regret, not available."

The mall was one trembling mass of glitter. The tender fresh green of the lindens was as yet not too dense to prevent the sun from filtering through, making bolden blotches on the blond heads of young girls and glorifying the shabby black gowns of the old ladies.

A general disgust filled the young poet. He turned into a side path. Here about the fish pond walked patient governesses with their rich charges; on every bench sat a pair of lovers, on every tree a nightingale. He stared into the water as if eager to murder the poor little goldfish disporting themselves on the sunflecked surface. Oh, if that pond were not so shallow, harmlessly shallow like the ordinary German reading public, he would not have begrudged them the pleasure of hauling his dead body out of the water; they might then understand that once more indifference and lack of appreciation had driven a poet to his death. He walked on rapidly, regardless of those who came in his way. Those whom he jostled roughly looked angrily at him. This pleased him, for he felt himself at war with the whole world.

The heavy laden spring air soon overpowered him, and he looked about for a place to rest. All the seats were taken. At last he found a bench with but one occupant, a young girl. He sat down on the extreme end. Resting his arms on his elbows he buried his head in his hands and gave himself up to broodings. He did not care to see the laughing sunlight.

Just along the line of vision, out of the corner of his eye, he saw a small foot, shod in a gray gaiter; a dainty foot, which moved slightly, but regularly. He followed the movement mechanically. Something quieting to his nerves seemed to emanate from it. His tempestuous mood soon gave way to one of melancholy. All pain seemed to have vanished, and he was conscious of but one wish, and that was that that little gray body might keep on swaying indefinitely. Gradually he got a glimpse of a blue skirt, then a very slim waist, and finally a delicate profile. The lips quivered, and tears were visible on the long lashes. He dropped his eyes, and resumed watching that moving foot.

Here, at last, was a woman who was not giggling and chattering like the rest of them. She was a sufferer like himself. Birds were jubilant, and from the distance came sounds of voices from the merry throng which thought life good and nature benign.

The sound of a suppressed sob aroused him. Involuntarily, he turned towards her. The girl, overcome by grief, was pressing her handkerchief to her eyes; wiping her tears, she looked at him askance.

He could contain himself no longer. Moving closer, he addressed her in modest, respectful terms: "Don't put any restraint on your feeling; I, too, know what sorrow is. Could I perchance be of any assistance to you? To be sure, we are strangers, but misery loves companionship."

"I thank you," she answered in a childlike way, scrutinizing him closely; "no one can help me. I am so unhappy." And again her tears began to flow.

"You are right," he said sadly. "Who can help another? No one."

"In order that you may not think me foolish," she began hesitatingly, "or think Heaven knows what of me" ((he had in reality thought Heaven knows what of her) "I will tell you all. I got a letter which disappointed me dreadfully, a letter of refusal."

"Indeed!"

"You see, I am a governess by profession."

"Ah!"

"And felt sure I had the position; when this cruel letter came."

"My dear Fraulein, nothing is certain in this world, and one should never count on anything with confidence," he replied with the acrid bitterness of the disappointed.

"You are right one should not. Everything seemed satisfactory. I passed my examination, and I am a good musician."

He bowed slightly in acknowledgment of such accomplishments.

"All that was asked was that I should send my photograph. I did so, and after a few days received a letter from the old ca—, I mean, lady, saying I was too young."

"Such injustice!"

"Do you not think so, too? It isn't my fault, and I can't add to my years just for the time being."

"There are so many children to be educated, unfortunately," he added pessimistically. "We are a rising nation. Look about you right here in this park and see the swarms of human beings."

"Indeed, there are a fearful lot of children; but if you knew what it meant to find a position, the demands that are made! Very likely I'll prove too young for other mothers." She looked about her helplessly.

A smile lit up his handsome, melancholy face. "Don't let that worry you, lieber Fraulein. Too young! Don't you see that this 'too young' is in truth the highest compliment, that it rouses envy?"

She shook her head dubiously.

"I am willing to wager that the woman in question is a 'mater familias' in the forties, void of graceful lines, who is saspicious of youthful curves. Or else a well-preserved middle-aged person still vain of her looks, who does not dare to have a young and pretty governess about her. Those whom fate has placed above you would willingly exchange places with you, be twenty-one, and have life before them."

"Are you a poet?"

"Why?" he asked, brushing a curl back from his forehead.

"Because you look like one."

He blushed and hesitated for a moment. "Yes," he answered, sighing deeply, "but the world will not recognize me as such. He stopped short, not knowing whether to confide in her or not. Hers were such soft, such dear brown eyes! "We are in a measure companions in sorrow. I, too, received a letter which crushed me mercilessly."

"Perhaps you, too, are too young."

"Yes," he almost shouted; "too young! that's it. The 'old ones' don't want to recognize us because we are coming on and they will have to yield us their places. They are getting uneasy on their toppling thrones. I can see him before me, the old worthy who rejected my work—an elderly chap, with bald head and an embonpoint. You laugh, my dear Fraulein? I am sure he is bald and has a paunch, like all those in authority and high in office, and he wears spectacles; for the eyes grow dim when one has a book of lyrics for breakfast, a drama for dinner, and a novel for supper to review. A sad office, this literary censorship! And what does such a demagogue know himself?"

"Never mind, another may appreciate your work," she said consolingly.

"Perhaps; or I may write something else. I feel within me the strength to create a hundred works, better than what I have done. I see it before me, still vague, but I shall hold it." His hand clutched the air. "We shall hurl something at those old fogies which they shall not dare to ignore."

The little governess looked at him as young girls are apt to look at a young enthusiast when he tells them that he is about to revolutionize the world.

"You will, no doubt, become celebrated some day; you are still so young."

"Yes, I am young!" he exclaimed exultingly. "We are young, the world lies open before us, to us belongs life."

"Listen to the nightingale," she said, almost piously.

"It sings for us! Spring is ours, and the poor old critic sits in his smoky room and reads poems on spring, and your mater familias may at this very moment be discovering a new wrinkle under her eyes."

The girl laughed a little cruel, triumphant laugh. "After all, it is delicious to be still free on such a day as this," and in a dreamy way she drew in the spicy, balmy air. "It may be wrong that I rejoice in it so fully."

"No, you are right. Don't you believe in fate? Isn't it a special act of Providence that we two should meet here to-day?"

"Yes, I believe in fate," she whispered. "We must meet again, must we not? Fate decreed that we should become closed acquainted." By this time there was little space left between them on the seat.

"I don't know, exactly."

"Only as long as the lilacs are in bloom—till the jasmine blossoms—till the time of roses! You must help me in my work. You give me courage, faith, and inspiration. When will you come back? To-morrow? After to-morrow?"

"I cannot come after to-morrow."

"Then, Auf Wiedersehn, to-morrow."—New York Evening Post.

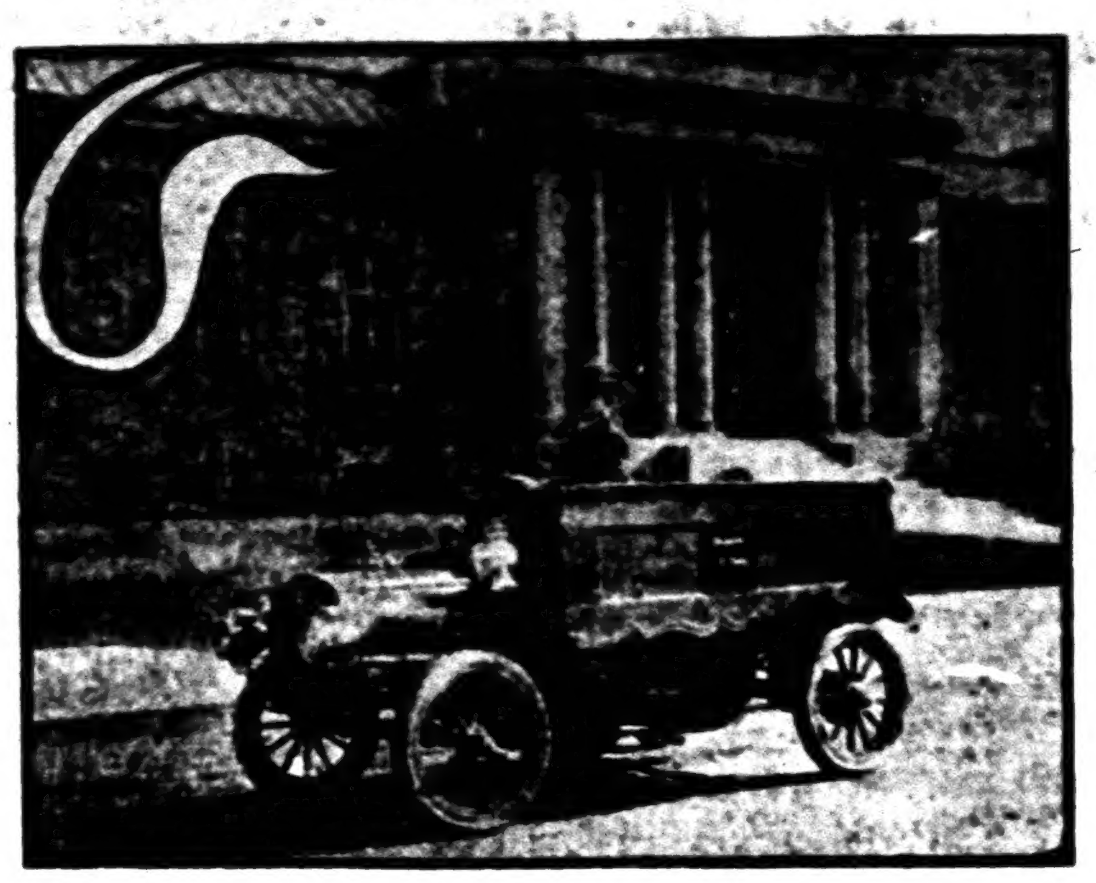
New Use For the Auto.



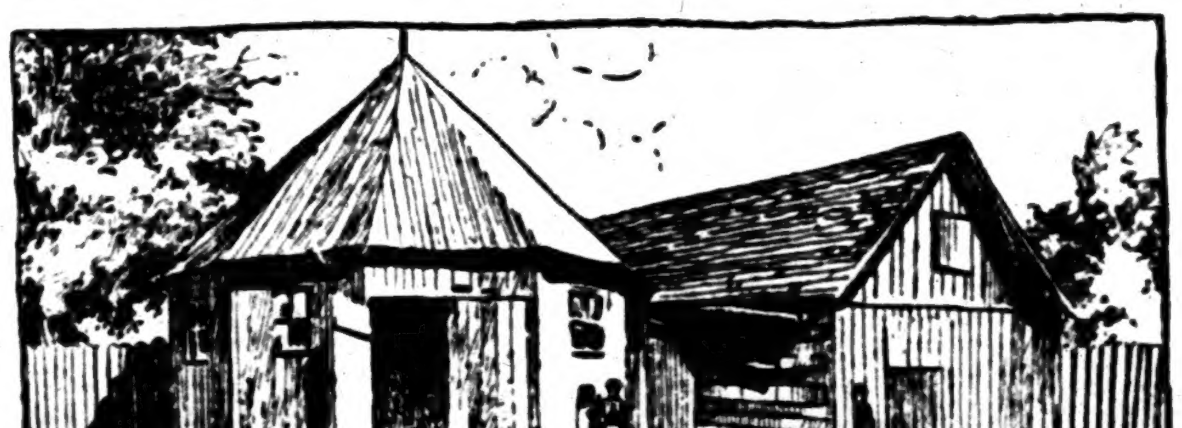
SAN FRANCISCO'S MORGUE WAGON.

THE OLD CIRCUS SCHOOL.

Built Years Ago by John O'Brien and Bareback Riders' Practice Spot.

Philadelphia has long been considered by circus people an excellent city, not only for the large audiences that their shows can attract here, but also as the home and birthplace of many famous circus actors and acrobats. And it is a strange coincidence that most of these performers come from Frankford and that section of the city.

The "training school" where nearly all of these entertainers received their early education in the art of "doing stunts" is still standing at the corner of Willow and Foulkrod streets, in Frankford, in much the same condition as when it was built many years ago by John O'Brien (better known as "Porgy" O'Brien, who at that time managed one of the foremost circuses in the country.



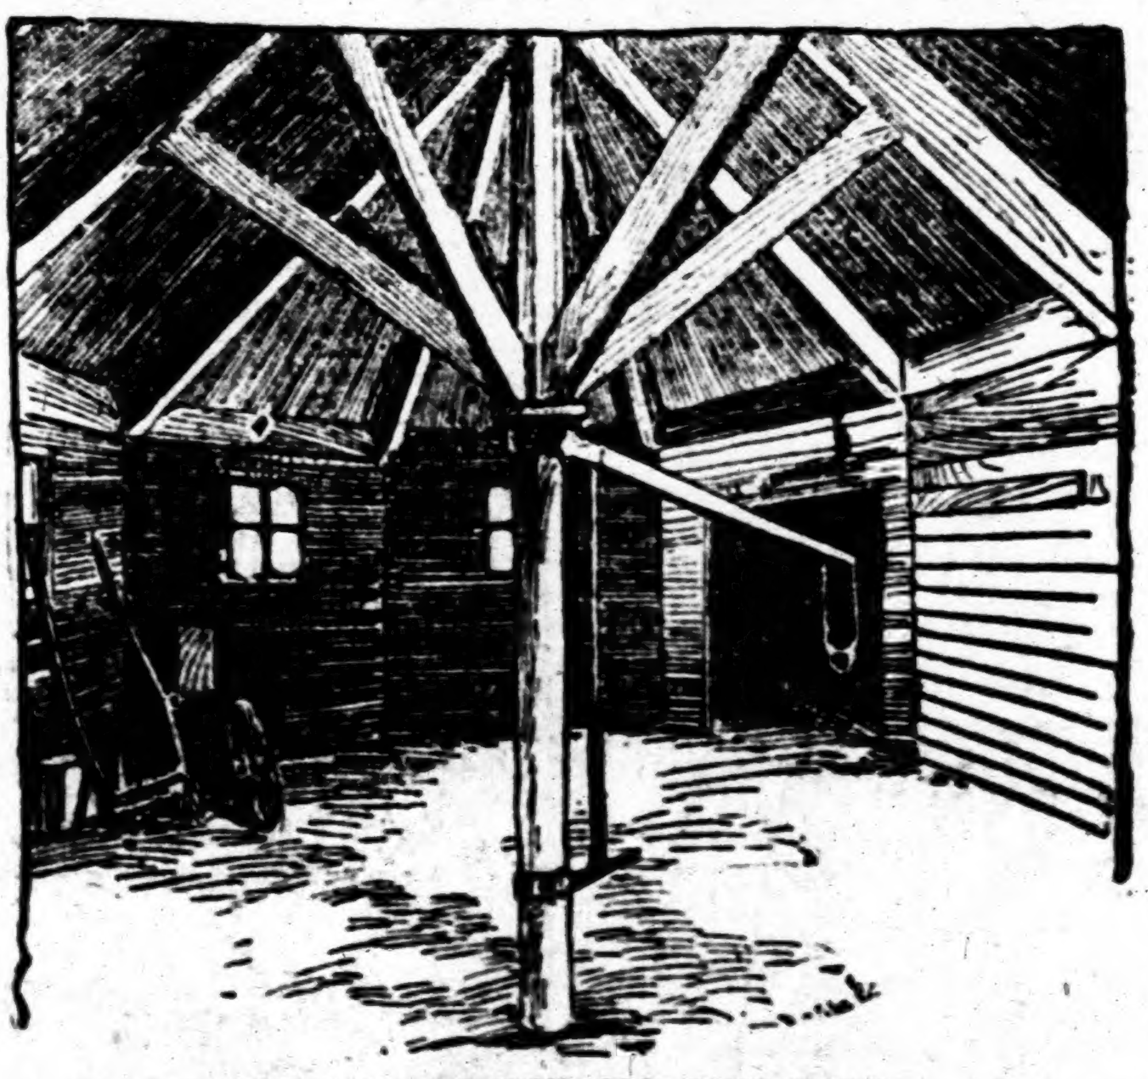
THE OLD RING BARN, FRANKFORD.

Bareback riding had just become popular, and O'Brien, seeing possibilities in that field that had not yet been attempted, built his "Ring Barn," by which name it is still known to the residents of Frankford, in order to keep his company together, and to create new sensations with which to startle the amazed public the next season.

During these winter months the company was paid from the proceeds of two performances given each week. The barn was arranged exactly as the regulative one-ringed circus of to-day. Animal cages lined the walls on one side of the circular building, while on the other side were a few tiers of seats for the spectators. At one end was the public's entrance and ticket office, and almost opposite, across the building was the door where the performers came into the ring, up an incline which led from the adjoining barn, where the stalls for the horses were located, and where tents and wagons were stored. Over this entrance was a small balcony for the band.

The place became quite famous as a winter circus, but it was not until O'Brien "discovered" the famous "La Wando Family" that he was able to realize his dreams of daring bareback feats.

It was while on a short tour in Cuba that he acidentally came across a wandering troup of acrobats with a donkey, upon which they did the most wonderful tricks he had ever seen, and he straightway made a contract with them (seven in number) and brought them up to Frankford, where, with the assistance of old man La Wando, the father of the troup, he soon had the boys drilled into doing daring feats that astonished the public and brought applause and lots of money wherever they exhibited.



INTERIOR OF THE OLD RING BARN.

For practicing purposes the centre pole of the building was fitted up with an attachment called in the circus language a 'mechanic." It had a long projecting arm, from which was suspended a harness. This was adjusted about the body of the practicing performer to prevent him from falling in the event of any mistakes while trying a somersault. The long arm was attached by means of a perpendicular shaft to a shorter arm below, turned by a man on the ground while the acrobat was practicing with the horse in motion.

On several occasions great excitement was caused by animals escaping. Sig. Robison once caught a loose lion that refused to return to its cage by mounting the elephant Empress and driving it into confinement in real jungle style. Among the famous circus people, some of whom are still in the business with other circuses, who started in at this quaint old-time barn were Molly Brown, the first female bareback rider to turn somersaults on horseback; George H. Adams, the famous clown, now with "Superba," and his family; the La Wando and De Mott families of riders and the La Rue family of acrobats. One great drawback to this old winter circus, from the small boy standpoint, was that it was impossible to sneak into the show under the tent cloth, and the windows were too high and always too well guarded for any peeps from the outside.—Philadelphia Record.

How She Compromised.

"This somewhat grasping spirit," said Senator Burrows, in the course of a recent argument, "reminds me of a lady who dropped in the other day at a certain bank.

"Going to the paying teller's window she opened her pocketbook, took out a check and pushed it under the brass grating.

"'Cash this, please,' she said.

"The paying teller, after one glance at the check, pushed it back to the woman again.

"'There is my husband's signature on it,' the woman said excitedly.

"'Yes, I know,' admitted the teller, 'but there is no amount.'

"'Oh, never mind that,' said the woman, impatiently. 'Give me what there is.'"

Passing of the Hand Mule.

Speaking of old industries going out of existence one has just died out in Bolton, England, namely, that of the hand mule, which was at one time an extensive form of the spinning industry. It is absolutely unknown now.

Human remains, which are believed by Mr. C. H. Read, of the British Museum, to be those of Saxons, have been discovered at Hawk's Hill, Surrey, England.

ORCHARD and GARDEN

SOME GARDEN NOTES.

In training vines about the house, be careful to give good support, as they develop. Unless this is done they may be torn down by a sudden storm of wind or rain, and then it is impossible to put them back without injuring them. Prevent the possibility of harm of this kind by tacking them to the walls with strips of stout leather. Cloth rots in a season, string is no better.

Seedlings of perennials can be transplanted to the beds and borders where they are to remain. Do this on a showery day, if possible, disturbing their roots but little. If they are watered well before lifting, the soil will cling about them and prevent root exposure.

After hybrid perpetual roses have perfected their first crop of flowers, cut them back well and manure heavily. Being similar in habit to the tea class, they should have about the same treatment. They can not be expected, however, to bloom as freely as the teas, after June.

Now is the time to get ready for next winter. Cut your old Boston and Pierson ferns apart, and make half a dozen new plants from each one of them. Pot them in a soil of leafmold and sand, put them in a shady place, water well and shower daily. Young plants secured in this manner will be worth a dozen old ones for winter use.

Keep your chrysanthemums going steadily ahead. This is done by repotting to larger pots if their roots have filled the old ones, by the liberal use of some good fertilizer, and thorough watering. In hot weather it may be necessary to apply water to the roots twice a day. Always keep the soil quite moist. Be on the lookout for the black beetle. This is the most dangerous enemy of the chrysanthemum. My remedy is Ivory soap, melted, and mixed with water, in the proportion of a small-sized cake to fifteen gallons of the latter. Apply with a sprayer, all over the plant. Do this repeatedly once or twice a day until not a beetle is to be seen.

If you have geraniums—or any other plant, for that matter—that you intend to make use of in the window garden next winter, do not allow them to bloom during the summer. Nip off every bud as soon as seen. Throw the strength of the plant into the development of branches. These should be shortened from time to time and made to produce side-branches. In this way you get a bushy, compact plant with a score of blossoming-points where there would be few if you allowed the plant to train itself.—Indianapolis News.

WHAT TO DO WITH DWARF PEARS.

I believe that the best thing for the average grower to do who has an orchard of dwarf Duchess pears is to take what he can get from them, which will be a fair profit on the investment, if trees are properly pruned, fertilized and cultivated. Dwarf Duchess orchards are paying some growers a good profit, but it should be understood that the dwarf orchard requires more care than standard trees of varieties like Bartlett, Kieffer, etc. All the successful growers of dwarf Duchess that I have talked with practice very severe pruning after trees get several years old, cutting back new growth each year to two or three inches, and even back into the old wood. Some practice summer pruning in addition. As usually grown they are not as salable as Bartlett, or Bosc, and many attempts have been made to graft them over to some other variety. I know of a number of orchards in which this has been done with very poor success; one large orchard belonging to a professional nurseryman was grafted over by him seven years ago, and great care taken to see that it was properly done. It turned out a wreck, and he recently told me that he would never again advise a man to graft them over to other varieties. Scarcely any trees of the variety are being planted in western New York at the present time. I know of one orchard top-grafted to Bosc several years ago with success; trees bore heavy crops, but there has been a very loss from blight the past two years. Many of the Bartlett tops show blossom buds at this time; there is scarcely a missing tree, and the orchard now gives every promise of being successfully worked over. I shall watch it for the next three years with interest. The above are the only two apparent successes out of possibly two score of attempts at grafting over dwarf Duchess orchards that have come under my observation, so when asked for advice I say take what the Duchess trees will give you under proper care, or else pull out and plant something more profitable.—Correspondence Rural New Yorker.

SPRAYING THE TOMATO.

The general health and the firm character of fruits from the sprayed vines was noticeable at each picking; for these fruits were firmly attached to the vines, while those from the unsprayed vines were loosely attached or had fallen before ready to pick. This was still more noticeable at the last picking, when all green fruits as well as the ripe were picked. Many of the green fruits of the unsprayed rows had fallen from the vines or were loosely attached and more or less soft, while those from the sprayed rows were so firmly attached that they were picked with Original Sin.

Wherein consists the sinfulness of the estate whereinto man fell?

Answer—The sinfulness of that estate whereinto man fell, consists in the guilt of Adam's first sin, the want of original righteousness, and the corruption of his whole nature, which is commonly called original sin; together with all actual transgressions which proceed from it.—Shorter Catechism, 18.

A Marine Disaster Off Spain. Men Fight With Women.

CAPTAIN REPORTED DEAD.

Many Women See Children Sink Below Waves—More Killed During Panic.

Cartagena, Spain.—A terrible marine disaster occurred off Cape Palos. The Italian steamship Srio, from Genoa for Barcelona, Cadiz, Montevideo and Buenos Ayres, with about 800 persons on board, was wrecked off Hormigas island.

Three hundred immigrants, most of them Italians and Spaniards, were drowned.

The Captain of the steamer committed suicide.

The bishop of Sao Perro, Brazil, also was lost, and it is reported that another bishop is among the missing.

The remainder of the passengers and the officers and crew got away in the ship's boats, or were rescued by means of boats sent to them from the shore.

A number of fishermen who made attempts at rescue were drowned. Those rescued from the vessel are now at Cape Palos in a pitiable condition, being without food or clothing.

The Sirio struck a rocky reef known as Bajos Hormigas and sank soon after, stern first. Hormigas island lies about two and a half miles to the eastward of Cape Palos.

The Sirio was owned by the Navigasone Italiana, of Genoa.

Before he committed suicide the captain declared the steamer had 645 passengers on board and that her crew numbered 127 men.

The Sirio had 570 passengers when leaving Genoa, but additional Spanish passengers were taken on board at Barcelona, where the vessel touched a few hours before the disaster.

The disaster occurred at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. The steamer was threading a difficult passage through the Hormigas group, where the Bajos Hormigas reef is a continual menace to navigation. The vessel began to settle rapidly, immediately she had struck, and a terrible scene of confusion and panic ensued on board. The fishermen along the coast sought to render every assistance in their power, and sent out boats which brought many survivors ashore. Most of the officers and crew of the Sirio are among the saved.

Circulated by American.

Mexico City.—The Imparcial charges that the recently circulated hand bills warning Americans to leave the country before September 16 were circulated by an unknown American, who went from station to station distributing and posting the pretended proclamation. The Imparcial also asserts that certain railway companies in Texas and California have taken part in promoting the circulation of false and sensational reports.

The circulars were apparently signed by the Mexican League of Railway Employes, but this group of workmen declare positively that they had nothing to do with the matter.

Lightning Strikes Church.

Decatur, Ill.—Lightning struck the Walnut Grove church as Sunday school was dismissed. Several children were hurt. Carl Sutton was probably fatally burned. Earl Emerson's finger was burned. Earl Emer-Byers' toe was burned off. Ruth Diss was burned about the face and head. Half a dozen others were shocked.

One Killed in Fire.

St. Louis.—Fire gutted the five-story brick building at Eighth and Walnut streets, occupied as the Salvation Army headquarters. Joseph Matthews fell or jumped from the fire escape at the third floor and was dashed to death on the pavement. About thirty men were asleep in the rooming apartment, but it is believed all escaped. The loss is estimated at $50,000, partially insured.

Fire in Pennsylvania Colliery.

Pottsville, Pa.—There was a serious fire in the East Pine Knot colliery of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company, near this place. Loss estimated at $100,000.

Torch Applied to Stables.

Poltava.—The torch has been applied to the stables, granaries and other buildings on the estate of Princess Chaplitzky. A flour mill was also destroyed.

Mexico City.—Reports indicate that the strikers on the Mexican Central railroad are losing ground, a number of men having come forward to take the places of the strikers. It is not believed probable the strike will spread to other railroads.

Minsk.—Two workmen have been arrested at the barracks here for distributing revolutionary proclamations among the troops.

STRINGENT RULES OF ROYALTY.

Curiosities of Regal Etiquette at Various Courts.

A curious curtailment of the royal prerogative is effected by an act of Parliamena passed in the reign of George IIII, which deals with Sabbath breaking. In this act it is distinctly stated that the monarch shall not have the power to pardon any persons convicted of a certain form of Sabbath breaking. Yet His Majesty can, of course, pardon ninety-nine out of every hundred prisoners in the land.

A number of years ago, says London Tit-Bits, it was perfectly permissible, and, in fact, a matter of strict etiquette, for a visitor who should obtain an audience with the Sultan of Turkey to bow and kiss the hand of that Oriental potentate. Anarchists, however, took advantage of the privilege, and on one memorable occasion a treacherous emissary drove a dagger into the heart of his sovereign, and from that time forth the privilege has been disallowed.

When the youthful King of Spain was 12 years of age he one day had the misfortune to slip and fall down a flight of the palace steps. The fall would very probably have been attended with fatal results had it not been for a servant who extended a kindly hand and saved his young master by breaking the fall. But, by a stringent rule of Spanish etiquette, no servant may dare touch the sacred person of the King, and for this very "grave" offence the servant was at once dismissed from his position.

By a remarkable law of royal etiquette, which has existed for a number of years past at the Court of Siam, no person is permitted to sleep in an apartment situated above that occupied by the King. A deliberate breach of this rule has on more than one occasion been punished by death. Recently, when the King of Siam paid a visit to Paris, a number of bedrooms were reserved, directly above that in which the King was to have slept, for the dusky followers of the royal visitor. The blunder caused great consternation among the fearful courtiers, until the matter was explained to the management and duly rectified.

It is a traditionary etiquette custom in the Marlborough family for each Duke to present a Blenheim spaniel to the Duchess when she enters Blenheim Palace for the first time as its mistress. The story from which this custom has its origin is that during the Battle of Blenheim a spaniel followed at the heels of the great Duke throughout the day, never leaving him until victory was assured.

When the Emeperor or Empress of China appears in public, no other person is allowed to occupy a higher place than they do. Therefore, on such occasions the shutters of all buildings are drawn and the upper parts of the houses past which the royal procession is expected to move are deserted, the inhabitants swarming to the ground floors in order to show due deference to their rulers.

The Bought Name.

"Pittsburg, Kan., I believe, is the only town in the United States which paid for its name," said Louis La Budde of Kansas City. "It was platted and named in 1870 by Col. Brown.

"The town site was named after Pitsburg, Pa., because of the large amount of coal just being developed in its vicinity. Whenever application was made to the postoffice department for the approval of the name Col. Brown struck a snag. There was a Pittsburg already in Kansas, and the best that could be done was to name the new town New Pittsburg. Thus it continued until 1880, when the Pittsburg Coal Company began to make efforts to have the name changed. A suggestion was made to the residents of the older Pittsburg to change the name of their town, but to no avail.

"It was ascertained that money might be a persuasive agent. A fund of $150 was raised by the New Pittsburg people and forwarded to the postmaster of older Pittsburg. That had its decided effect. The name of the town was changed to Tipton, and thus it has been known ever since. At the time the prefix 'New' was dropped from the newer town."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

STORING NICKEL HARVEST.

Mysterious Early Morning Proceeding in Downtown District.

Every morning between the hours of 2 and 4 o'clock, wagons guarded by armed men stop in front of the side entrance to the Park Row building on Ann street. A squad of men leap off, line up across the pavement, forming a lane between the rear of the wagon and the open door. If they speak at all, it is in low tones, and they glance suspiciously at any chance passerby who stops to gaze with curiosity. There are sundry scraping sounds on the beds of the wagons, and the sound of some heavy body being shifted. Perhaps the night is dark and foggy. The men about the wagon move silently as shadows. The whole proceeding appears dark and mysterious. The curious passerby thinks of a possible crime committed under shadow of night.

Two powerful men lift some dark object from the wagon, bear it across the pavement, and disappear into the darkness of the doorway. In a few moments they reappear, seize a second dark body, and quickly disappear within the door again. This is continued until the wagons are empty. Then the men drive away.

The man who scents mystery is doomed to disappointment, for the armed men are simply employes of the Interborough company; the dark bodies carried into the building are leather sacks filled with nickels from the pockets of the hundreds of thousands who daily patronize the elevated and subway trains. In the offices of the company these thousands of nickels are counted, the totals taken and checked up against the statements of the ticket agents.

Every night when the after-theatre rush is over and travel has become thinned the day's takings are gathered from all the stations along the line of the subway and collected at Fulton street; the same with the elevated roads, whose receipts are nightly gathered together at Cortlandt street. From these two stations the clinking shekels are hauled away by wagons, closely guarded until safely placed in the offices of the Interborough company in the Park Row building.—New York Press.

Errors in Printing.

A man who has done a great deal of work in correcting some large dictionaries, encyclopedias, and historical reference works, who has studied ten languages, and who is well posted on a number of foreign lands, examined over 15,000 pages of an encyclopedia recently published in this country. Much of the work he did without the publishers' knowledge. Though this encyclopedia was considered to have been edited very carefully, he discovered over 1000 mistakes in the first volume alone. In the following volumes he found many thousands

DAZED WITH PAIN.

The Sufferings of a Citizen of Olympia, Wash.

L. S. Gorham, of 516 East 4th St., Olympia, Wash., says: "Six years ago I got wet and took cold, and was soon flat in bed, suffering tortures with my back. Every movement caused an agonizing pain, and the persistency of it exhausted me, so that for a time I was dazed and stupid. On the advice of a friend I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, and soon noticed a change for the better. The kidney secretions had been disordered and irregular, and contained a heavy sediment, but in a week's time the urine was clear and natural again and the passages regular. Gradually the aching and soreness left my back and then the lameness. I used six boxes to make sure of a cure, and the trouble has never returned."

A Honeyed Rebuke.

Robbie was in the habit of running errands for an old gentleman next door who never paid him except in effusive thanks. He had just returned from the third errand one morning, and the old gentleman, patting him on the head, said:

"Robbie, I am very much obliged to you. You're a fine little fellow. Thank you, my boy, thank you."

Robbie looked up in his face wistfully, and apologetically replied:

"Mr. Jones, you don't know how I wish I could thank you for something."—Harper's Magazine.

King and Clippings.

When his majesty Peter I. of Servia was called to the throne he was anxious to know the world's opinion of him, and instructed an agency to collect all press cuttings, whereupon the Argus opened its one hundred eyes, and in a few weeks gathered together a collection which, as regards quantity, would make a prima donna jealous. By his majesty's command the collection was bound, and the manager of the Argus himself took fifteen volumes to Belgrade to present them to his royal client. There a terrible disappointment awaited him. The King of Servia, lacking in humor, gazed with horror and indignation at the collection, wherein the English, French, German and Swiss caricaturists had displayed their wit at his expense. While the Argus clamored for its money the King was roaring threats inside his palace, declaring that nothing would induce him to pay a cent for these volumes. When the agency threatened to exhibit these morocco bound books the King shouted: "I don't care, as long as they are not exhibited before me!" And now these thirty thousand cuttings will be sold by auction in Paris, and the sale will no doubt attract many amateurs.—The Bystander.

I did not use the Cuticura Remedies more than three times before I began to get better, and now I am completely well. I suffered with that humor on my head, and found no relief until I took the Cuticura Remedies. I think I used several cakes of Cuticura Soap, three boxes of Ointment, and two vials of Pills. I am doing all I can to publish the Cuticura Remedies, for they have done me good, and I know they will do others the same. Mrs. Mattie Jackson, Mortonsville, Ky., June 12, 1905."

ITS MERIT IS PROVED

RECORD OF A GREAT MEDICINE

A Prominent Cincinnati Woman Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Completely Cured Her.

The great good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is doing among the women of America is attracting the attention of many of our leading scientists, and thinking people generally.

Mrs Sara Wilson

The following letter is only one of many thousands which are on file in the Pinkham office, and go to prove beyond question that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound must be a remedy of great merit, otherwise it could not produce such marvelous results among sick and ailing women.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"About nine months ago I was a great sufferer with female trouble, which caused me severe pain, extreme nervousness and frequent headaches, from which the doctor failed to relieve me. I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and within a short time felt better, and after taking five bottles of it I was entirely cured. I therefore heartily recommend your Compound as a splendid female tonic. It makes the monthly periods regular and without pain; and what a blessing it is to find such a remedy after so many doctors fail to help you. I am pleased to recommend it to all suffering women."—Mrs. Sara Wilson, 31 East 3d Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.
